BUILDING MANAGEMENT

POWER GENERATING PLANTS FOR LOFT BUILDINGS

By WERNER NYGREN, Nygren, Tenney & Ohmes, Consulting Engineers

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

AS a rule, owners and business managers do not look with favor on private power generating plants for ordinary loft buildings. To a certain extent they are right, as it must be admitted that buildings which come strictly within this class are not the kind in which private plants can make an appreciable showing, unless the buildings are of considerable size.

There are a number of loft buildings in New York City and elsewhere which are supplied with electric current for light and power purposes from the street, and heated by low-pressure steam generated in their own boilers. Without question a majority of these buildings are either doing decidedly better—at least as well, or nearly as well—from the standpoint of economy, as if they had their own electric generating plants. Only a few of them would be better off financially for having their own private plants.

Undue Influence on Owners.

To draw the line with arguments dealing with generalities is difficult; specific figures, honestly compiled, are an owner's best guidance. The campaigns for and against private plants, while they are very interesting, are not, on the other hand, conclusive. Certain public utility corporations will frequently take the stand that a private plant will not prove a paying proposition, whereas the private plant operating companies will just as vigorously advocate a private plant under the very same conditions.

The plausibility of such arguments when advanced by specially gifted promoters, without being effectively offset by the other side, are known occasionally to have influenced owners to adopt the alternative, which they later on regret. When mistakes of this kind occur they are usually the result of the owner's inclination to listen to advice from interested parties who juggle figures right under his eyes to suit their arguments, rather than trust to the figures of engineers who have professional reputation to sustain, and are disinterested besides.

When a building project has developed to a stage that the size, character and service of the building is defined, it is merely a matter of figures to determine the operating cost either way, and in such a manner that the owner can make up his mind at a glance whether or not a private plant will be a paying proposition and worth his trouble to manage.

Justification of a Plant.

The installation of a private plant cannot very well be advocated unless there is indication of a sufficient net earning above the total expenses chargeable to the plant to reimburse the owner for his trouble. In the expenses chargeable to the plant should be included the cost of operation, interest on the money invested in the plant, depreciation, as well as the rental value of the space given up to the plant.

Even when the figures point to a gain, unless it is so considerable that it leaves no doubt, it is well to be conservative and play safe. This can readily be done by reserving space and making the necessary provisions for a later installation of a plant, and in the meantime contract for electric current from an outside source for a period of a year or so. At the expiration of such a trial period, the owner will be able to determine with accuracy where he is at, and can then proceed without hesitation on whatever course he deems best.

WERNER NYGREN.

The requirements of loft buildings of the ordinary kind, in which little or no manufacturing is permitted, are of course much different from those mainly given up to manufacturing. Whenever extensive use of power and high pressure steam for manufacturing processes enter into the problem, and a so-called loft building becomes more of a factory than a loft building, a private power generating plant is usually, although not necessarily so, the better proposition.

Important Factors.

In selecting his equipment, the owner of a loft building is often attracted to material and appurtenances which cost the least to install, and he also looks with favor on cheap help for the operation of his plant. Both are bound to be the most expensive in the long run. If he gets an honest deal at all he will get what he pays for, and no more. Although a loft building appears very simple when compared with an office building, there is not much difference between them when it comes to burning coal with efficiency, getting horsepower out of steam, and reducing to a minimum repairs resulting from poor material and stupidity in handling.

A power generating plant for a loft building, whether used for manufacturing or not, should be designed for endurance and economy in operation, and be ample in capacity so as to have spare boiler and electric generating units to insure a good upkeep and proper care of the plant. While it is not important in what part of the basement such a plant is located, so long as ample space is allotted for the installation of proper equipment, it is obviously best to have the boiler and the electric generating plant as close together as possible, and so located as not to encroach unnecessarily on rentable space or imperil the renting value of the lower portion of the building. Under no condition should a plant be crowded into an undesirable or inadequate space, or in any other way sacrificed for the sake of a few square feet of rentable space, as sometimes happens to be the case. If the basement is desired for renting purposes to such an extent that sufficient space will not remain for plant equipment, a sub-basement to accommodate the power plant equipment may pay for itself, unless special ground conditions prohibit the building of such a sub-basement from the standpoint of cost.

In a building project which is to be a permanent investment, the installation cost of the plant is only important to the extent of eliminating useless expense. To sacrifice the quality of the plant, and thus lessen its endurance and economy of operation for the sake of reducing its first cost, is false economy.

Determining Factors.

In order that a private plant may become a commercial possibility, it is very important that the entire mechanical equipment be of good quality, of such design that the plant can be operated with the greatest possible economy, and that the available exhaust steam can be utilized to full advantage. About 80 per cent. of the heat in the steam generated for power purposes is usually available for heating purposes in the form of exhaust steam. To be able to put this by-product to proper use means a considerable saving, at least in the winter time. In summer, when the exhaust steam has to be wasted, except for what is used in heating water for boiler feed and domestic use, very little, if anything, can be gained by generating electricity with a private plant. It is only during the winter season that such a plant will make any appreciable showing, except, of course, when a building has an unusually large power requirement.

When the average power requirements of a building are such that the available exhaust steam will ordinarily accomplish the heating, the combined cost of generating power, light and heat is reduced to a minimum. This will, if the building is large enough, justify the existence of a private plant. In ordinary loft buildings, however, the conditions are often such that the available exhaust steam is insufficient for the average heating needs; hence the reason why it is not always advisable to install a private generating plant in such buildings.

A Suggestion.

The prevailing custom in loft buildings of moderate size of purchasing electric current from an outside source and generating steam at a low pressure for heating purposes, while it is often cheaper and quite as satisfactory as to operate a private generating plant, it does not necessarily follow that it is the most economical arrangement. It would be still more economical to have co-operative central plants for supply of electric currents, steam, hot water, etc., at a pro rata charge, according to quantities used.

In such plants a considerable saving would be possible. Less steam would be required for the operation of one consolidated generating plant of a given power than would be the case with a number of smaller plants of the same total power. Furthermore, less fuel would be required for a given amount of steam, due to the possibility of securing an equal, if not greater, amount of heat from a low grade of coal in a plant of this kind than would be possible with a higher grade of coal with individual boilers.

Co-operative Schemes.

Co-operative schemes of this kind would not be altogether new in New York City. There are already existing cases where a number of buildings, owned or controlled by the same interests, are operated from one central plant. There are also cases where smaller buildings are supplied with power, light and heat from plants in neighboring buildings to mutual advantage. Moreover, co-operative associations with the same object in view were started years ago, when buildings were operated entirely by steam and lighted by gas. These associations owned and controlled central boiler plants, from which steam was distributed to the share-holding consumers.

In common with most enterprises started ahead of the times, these plants were not, however, altogether successful. Proper and reliable means for measuring steam were unknown. This necessitated fixed charges to the individual buildings, based on estimated steam consumption, which led to disputes and dissatisfaction. The introduction of electricity for light and power in the buildings thus supplied with steam, and the added expense which this entailed, so increased the total operating cost that there was no longer any saving to speak of. To continue to generate steam solely for heating did not offset the added expense, as the antiquated equipment of these plants made it impossible to burn fuel with much more economy than in individual boiler plants of more modern type. The result of all this has been that the co-operative plant has not survived, despite the fact that the application of the principle was a step in the right direction.

Today, with meters and appliances both for measuring and distributing steam, electric current, water, etc., there should be no mechanical difficulty in the way. The drawback would be the difficulty of organizing such co-operative associations and securing franchises for their operation. Still, even this may be hoped for in an age when co-operation is more and more looked upon as a business necessity.

THE CARE OF OAK FLOORS.

Correct Scraping and Finishing Essential to Permanent Beauty.

IF one only knows how, nothing is easier than the care of a well-finished oak floor. Water should never be used on a waxed or varnished floor. The surface may safely be wiped with a cloth dampened in tepid water to remove dirt and dust, but the dampness should be immediately taken up with a dry cloth.

One of the best mixtures for keeping a floor in good condition is the use of equal parts of sweet oil, turpentine and vinegar, well mixed, and rubbed on the floor with waste or a cotton or woolen rag. The vinegar will cut the dirt or grime worked into the finish from shoes; the sweet oil produces a lustre, and the turpentine promptly dries the moisture.

This mixture need not be applied oftener than once a month to insure a floor finish that will resemble the sheen of a piano. Should wax finish become worn in spots from hard usage, a little of this mixture, thoroughly rubbed in, will renew the finish quickly.

The occasional use of a weighted floor brush, alone or with a piece of Brussels carpet placed beneath it, will assist in keeping the finish of an oak floor in good condition. Once a year, it is well to use a good floor wax and rub it into the floor with the aid of a brush, with or without a piece of carpet attached. Before the finish is worn down to the wood, an additional coat of wax should be applied and thoroughly rubbed.

Care Begins When Floor Is Laid.

As a matter of fact, the care of an oak floor should begin when the floor is originally laid. The laying of an oak floor is not difficult. Any first-class carpenter can make a good job, but some judgment and care is necessary in order to produce the best result. A sub-floor should be used under both the 13/16-inch and ⅜-inch thicknesses. The sub-floor should be reasonably dry and laid diagonally. Boards of about 6 inches wide are preferred. These boards should not be put down too tight and should be thoroughly dried off and cleaned before the oak flooring is laid. It is well to use a dampproof paper between the oak flooring and the sub-floor. Where sound-proof results are desired, a heavy deadening felt is recommended.

Oak flooring should be laid at an angle to the sub-floor. After laying and nailing three or four pieces, use a short piece of hardwood 2x4, placed against the tongue, and drive it up. The nailing of oak flooring is important. All tongued and grooved oak flooring should be blind nailed. The best floor made can be spoiled by the use of improper nails. The steel-cut variety is recommended for all blind nailing. For 13/16-inch use 8-penny steel-cut flooring nail; for ⅜-inch use 3-penny wire finishing nail. The maximum distance between the nails should be: for 13/16-inch thickness, 16 inches, and for ⅜-inch thickness, 10 inches. For even better results it is recommended that the nails be driven closer than indicated.

How to Scrape the Floor.

After the oak flooring is laid and thoroughly swept, it is better to scrape it, in order to get the best results for a nicely polished surface. This scraping process can be done by the ordinary scrapers, such as used by cabinet makers, or by one of the many types of power or hand scraping machines that are generally used by contractors and carpenters. Always scrape lengthwise of the wood and not across the grain. A floor properly scraped looks very smooth, but it should be thoroughly gone over with No. 1½ sandpaper to obtain the best results in finishing. After this, the floor should be swept clean and the dust removed with a soft cloth. The floor is now ready for the finish.

The finishing of an oak floor is an important feature, upon which authorities fail to agree; but the question resolves into a matter of cost, as to the color or brilliancy of finish desired. Personal taste, artistic or decorative effects are the guides for the floor finisher.

Grades of Oak Flooring.

The "clear" grade of oak flooring should have a natural oak filler—color of oak. With the "select" and "sap clear" grades a light golden oak filler should be used, and after the floor is filled it should be gone over with a little burned umber mixed with turpentine to darken light streaks. This will make the "select" and "sap clear" grades look like the "clear" grade except that it will be slightly darker in color. In filling the "No. 1 common" grade a dark golden oak filler should be employed, and the light streaks should be darkened in the same manner as the "select" and "sap clear" grades. If a little care is used in laying this grade, splendid results can be obtained.

First: Treat the floor with a paste filler of desired tone, to fill up the pores and crevices. To thin the filler for application, one has a choice of using turpentine, benzine, wood alcohol or gasoline to get the right consistency. When the gloss has left the filler, rub off with excelsior or cloth, rubbing against the grain of the wood. This will make a perfectly smooth and level surface. It keeps out dirt and forms a good foundation, which is the keynote for successful treatment of floors. Allow the filler twelve hours to set or dry before applying a wax or varnish finish. Never use a liquid filler on any floor.

Varnishes and Finishes.

A wax or varnish finish can be used. The wax finish is preferred by many, due to economy and ease of renewing places that show the wear. The renewing can easily be applied by the housekeeper or servant.

Wax Varnish.—The best method for applying the wax is to take cheesecloth and double it to get a little more thickness; then make it into a sort of bag. Put a handful of wax inside of this and go over the floor thoroughly. You will find that you can work the wax through the meshes of the cheesecloth to give an even coating over the floor. This prevents too much wax in spots and wasting it. After the floor has been gone over with the wax and allowed to dry, say about twenty minutes, it is ready for polishing. Rub to a polish with a weighted floor brush, first across the grain of the wood, then with it. (A clean, soft brush can be used in place of the brush, if desired.) Then a piece of woolen felt or carpet should be placed under the brush to give the finishing gloss. After waiting an hour, a second coat of wax should be applied in the same way as the first and rubbed to a polish.

Varnish Finish.—This is usually more expensive than the wax finish, but it gives a very hard surface, yet at the same time it is elastic. Two or three coats should be applied after the application of the paste filler. Each coat should be thoroughly rubbed with oil and pumice. Any of the standard hardwood flooring varnishes are recommended.

Floor Oil Finish.—When a high-class finish is not desired, a very economical finish can be had by the use of a light flooring oil, that is made expressly for this purpose by many paint and varnish houses and oil makers; it serves as a filler as well as a finish and is strongly recommended for oak flooring in public institutions, office buildings and stores. This oil keeps the dust from rising and preserves the floor.

Definition of Grades.

Clear.—Shall have one face practically free of defects, except three-eighths of an inch of bright sap; the question of color shall not be considered; lengths in this grade to be 2 feet and up, not to exceed 15 per cent. under 4 feet. Generally used in high-class residences, hotels, apartment houses and clubhouses.

Sap Clear.—Shall have one face practically free from defects, but will admit unlimited bright sap. The question of color shall not be considered; lengths in this grade to be 1 foot and up. Adaptable for use as an economical substitute for clear quartered where a dark finish is desired. These grades make a flooring equally durable as the first grade in high-class residences, hotels, apartment houses, churches and clubhouses.

Select.—May contain bright sap, and will admit pin worm holes, slight imperfections in dressing, or a small tight knot, not to exceed one to every 3 feet in length; lengths to be 1 foot and up. This may be used in medium-priced residences, hotels and apartments, schools, office buildings and stores.

The Assessment Rolls.

In order that the assessed value of buildings may readily be compared, the Deputy Tax Commissioners have been instructed to insert in their field books what is known as the 'building factor.' It is obviously impossible to compare the assessed value of buildings of different sizes without the use of some comparable figure. The building factor is this comparable figure and it represents the value per square foot of floor surface of every building. An ordinary loft building may be assessed at the rate of $2.50 per square foot of floor space, and the assessed value of this building may then be compared with the assessed value of any other loft building regardless of differences of size by comparison with the factor of value in each case. The President of the Tax Board says: "The Deputies are instructed to inform anyone who inquires the factor of value used in determining the assessed value of any building. In many cases where buildings are obsolete or greatly depreciated, the factor of value is very low as compared with a good building of like kind suitably located. The factor of value immediately exhibits the extent of the allowance made for depreciation or obsolescence.

"The efficient use of the publication of land units and assessment rolls, together with the detailed information freely offered to taxpayers, is all designed as a complete system of publicity to the end that the most effective cooperation may be secured with all persons informed as to value and interest in assessments. It is confidently expected that this wide open policy of the fullest publicity will both tend to the correction of errors of fact or of judgment and to the satisfaction of all property owners. All fair-minded men are willing to contribute their fair share, and when they can see for themselves that their share is fairly determined and that their property is assessed in harmony with other realty."

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

ACCORDING to an announcement made by the Koalsave Vacuum Valve Co., Park Row Building, any steam-heating plant can be transformed into an economical vapor system merely by the application of a certain type of air control which that company is introducing into this market. It is said to possess the added virtue of being noiseless in operation, sans packing and is fool-proof.

The system merely creates a vacuum in the ordinary steam-heating equipment identical with that which features the void characterizing the vapor system of heating, at merely nominal first cost.

The valve shown is simple in construction. The disc operating between an outer or steam seat, and an inner or vacuum seat is raised from the seat by the slightest pressure (less than one ounce per sq. in.) from within the valve, but is prevented from closing on seat by the hook on one extremity of the thermostat - metal tongue engaging shoulder on valve stem, thus providing ample passage around the disc, through holes the inner seat and in top of valve, for the free escape of air.

Steam entering the valve causes extremities of the thermostat-metal tongue to separate, disengaging the shoulder on the valve stem and permitting the disc to close on the seat, thus preventing escape of steam. Water entering the valve causes the inverted cup, attached to tongue, to rotate the tongue about its hanger, disengaging hook, allowing the valve to close against the escape of water. Disc is closed on seat when pressure within valve is equal to or less than that of the atmosphere, preventing air entering valve, thus creating and maintaining a vacuum.

This device is said to heat all radiators almost instantly as all the air is taken out of the system and kept out. Hence this device should appeal strongly to apartment house and hotel managers where complaint is frequently made that the radiators do not readily respond to the steam pressure supplied the system. Incidentally the coal bills are said to be reduced, for the simple reason that greater efficiency is given to the steam plant requiring a smaller amount of coal to generate the necessary supply of steam considerably quicker than is possible under the ordinary system.

It is an established scientific fact that a given amount of coal will convert a pint of water into 25 cubic feet of steam at one pound gauge pressure, while a slightly lower amount of coal will convert the same pint of water into 75 feet of steam in 18 inches of vacuum. If some method is employed to produce a vacuum in a heating system, therefore, it is logical to expect a decided lowering in the amount of coal required to put a working pressure into a heating system. The manufacturers of this device aver that the valve they are introducing will permit the generation of three times more steam with the valve installed on radiators than the same heating plant can produce with the identical amount of coal under the ordinary steam-heating system.

New Thermostatic Trap.

ILLUSTRATED herewith is a new thermostatic trap that is being introduced by James P. Marsh & Company, of Chicago. The device was designed with the idea of supplying a much-needed small unit control for moderate-sized heating equipments.

The principle of construction is similar to that of other Marsh reflux traps except that it is applicable to much smaller radiators and coils. It is especially serviceable on two-pipe gravity installations and vapor heating systems and is made entirely of metal, so that the wear incidental to the use of rubber and fibre for packing is eliminated.

The diaphram is made of phosphor bronze spun directly on the post at the top, making a tight container for the volatile fluids and a sensitive diaphram, securing a perfect automatic action of the trap. Another feature of the trap, which the manufacturers say is exclusive with this device, is a reservoir which is designed to act as a cushion to relieve the force of the expanding member.

This reservoir is simply a post with an interior chamber for the expansion of the gases generated in the diaphram. The upper end is threaded, which makes it adjustable to permit the diaphram to be raised or lowered. It is furnished either with concealed adjustment, as shown, or with outside adjustment. It is supplied with ½-inch angle pattern with nickle-plated brass body and has a capacity of 100 sq. ft. of cast iron radiation.

Finishing Floors by Varnishing.

THE most essential things in floor finishing, next to the selection of the right varnish are: First, to see that the floor is absolutely solid; that is, there must be no give to it when stepped upon, for if such is the case it will crack the finish in a new floor, while in an old refinished floor it will break the finish and will work the filler out of joints. Second, the floor must be perfectly smooth, clean and dry, otherwise a good finish cannot be obtained, even with the very best material. For treating new floors, such as hard or close grained woods, like oak, chestnut, maple and hard pine, the best way is to fill open grained wood with a good paste filler, and when this is done, give a good thin coat of floor varnish, giving ample time to dry hard, and sandpaper; follow, after dusting, with a good, full coat of varnish, and for a right good job give a third coat. If this is to be rubbed, let it dry hard throughout, then use crude oil and pumice. For hard pine, use one coat of shellac before varnishing, so as to keep back the sap or pitch. The chief requisite for good wear on a finished floor, however, is the selection of the varnish, which must not readily mar or scratch on being walked over.

To refinish an old floor, the first thing is to get rid of the old finish or whatever may be left of it, and here is where the difficulty lies. If it can be removed with a scraper or an old plane, it is not such a bad undertaking, but when a remover is used it has to be got rid of, and if not done thoroughly there will be no end of trouble. Otherwise, proceed same as for a new floor, excepting as to filling, which is not necessary, but there may be most likely cracks and open joints, caused by the shrinking of the lumber, that require filling, and for this purpose we would suggest one of the non-shrinkable crack fillers on the market.

Improved Steel Lath.

INTEREST has recently been aroused in the metal lath market by the issuance of patents to Martin Kuhne, of Portland, Ore., for a system of metal lathing that is said to have novel features. It is about to be introduced by Sasher & Bondurant, Portland, Ore.

There are numerous steep corrugations and keys running parallel its entire length, with openings to allow the thinnest coat of plaster to pass through and cover the rear side. Another feature is the fact that either side is right side in putting it on, so that even an unskilled laborer can make no mistake in placing the key side. The inventor asserts that a marked saving in labor is made possible by the versatility of the lath, as fibre or hair plaster is not necessary to obtain perfect security, as the lath provides ample opportunity for even the thinnest plaster to key securely. The supports, it is said, may be set up to 24-inch centers and even at that distance it cannot sag or bulge.

A Forty-Foot Piler.

LUMBER interests trying to solve the problem of cutting down labor cost on their distributing yards may be interested in a device that is being introduced by the Hilke Stacker Company, 1 Broadway. It consists of a portable machine that will stack lumber or timber of any size or weight up to forty feet. It is shown in operation in the accompanying cut.

The advantage claimed by the manufacturers of this device is that it reduces the area covered by stacks from 50 to 75 per cent., cuts down team mileage, alley mileage, pile bases and roofings. The machines are tight, strong and durable, according to the inventor. They are made to operate either on wide tread wheels or track. The lumber is hoisted by an endless chain system, so that instead of a few boards only being in transit from wagon to stack at a time, as many as thirty can simultaneously be moving to packers' hands on the pile.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Arcade to Be Erected by Standard Oil Company, at 50 Broadway, on Site of Old Tower Building.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Standard Oil Company of New York that plans have been accepted and adopted for the improvement of the plot at No. 50 Broadway, for years occupied by the Tower Building, an early example of steel frame construction.

Realizing that there already exists an over-plus of office space below Cortlandt street, with hundreds of thousands of square feet soon to be added to the available supply; and further that in the natural course of events to throw more floor space for office purposes on the market at this time or in the near future, would simply result in additional disaster to normal rates, the Standard Oil Company concluded to wait until demand has caught up with supply and to bide the hour when office buildings of either the normal or the "skyscraper" variety were in sufficient demand to offer to capital a reasonable excuse for investment.

But to carry their property against such a time as demanded its full development, or rather how to make it carry itself, was a problem of no little moment where, as in this case, the bare land value is estimated at more than $1,500,000.

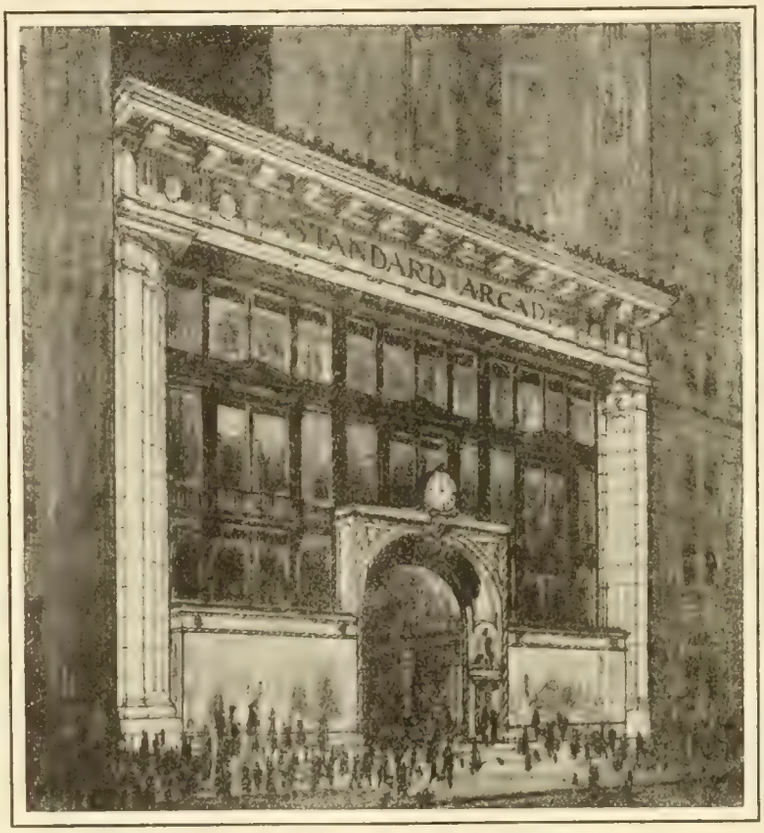
The situation was carefully studied by experts, with the result that plans have been adopted for a typical Arcade building. It will be called the "Standard Arcade." It is to be observed that this busy section of Broadway, Broad street, Trinity Place and William street, below Cortlandt street, is poorly supplied with retail shops. New street below Wall offers the single exception. Up to the present time banking houses, Stock Exchange concerns, ships' companies and express agencies have taken up all of the street space that was available. It has been difficult for the merchants to "break in." This has been due to two factors: First, the concerns above mentioned have required and been willing to pay a good rate for large space and secondly the architectural plans of the buildings in this section were not such as to properly provide for the needs of the retail merchants.

Recognizing these conditions, the Standard Oil Company developed plans for a building which would meet the requirements of the merchants and at the same time be one which would provide great service to the public. Both of these elements are covered by the Standard Arcade as planned.

The block from Exchange Place to Beaver street is one of the longest on Broadway in the downtown district. The stretch from Beaver street to Exchange Place is 655.2 feet without a direct "short cut" between these two important highways south of the Astor Building located at the corner of Exchange Place and Broadway.

Such retail shops as exist in this district are generally to be found below the Broadway level on corridors or in entrances to subway or elevated stations. The business population below Wall street alone would suggest something in the way of further convenience to the public, with considerable profit to the merchant who could locate "on the street."

It is to be remarked that New York City has been backward in recognizing the value of Arcade buildings. The European cities long since adopted this character of development for real estate in important centers, Edinburgh, London, Paris, and Milan and Moscow, all have famous arcades filled with small shops, paying large rents and doing business adequate to the demands of the several landlords. In our own country the arcades of Cleveland and Pittsburgh are well established and are paying propositions.



It was determined at the outset that the new building should be an ornament to the section; a work of art in itself with the embodiment of all the practical features which would appeal to merchants and tenants for office space. H. Craig Severance and William Van Allen have been employed by the Standard Oil Company as architects. They have developed plans for a most attractive improvement for this space. The building will be three stories on Broadway and four stories in New street. There will be about 12,000 square feet to each floor and the Arcade will be 20 feet in width by 73 feet to the top of the arch. The Arcade will be entirely open from Broadway to New street. The latter level will be devoted to stores in New street and a restaurant space of about 7,000 square feet at the Broadway end of the building.

The Broadway level on both sides of the Arcade will be devoted exclusively to commercial purposes and will be subdivided into spaces for shops of various kinds. The depth of stores from either side of the Arcade proper is about 30 feet. The height of the ceiling in Arcade shops is 25 feet. It is proposed to have galleries or mezzanine floors where required. The Arcade will be lighted and ventilated from a large central court directly above and is so arranged as to give outside light and ventilation to the stores along the Arcade.

The walls of the Arcade are to be of iron and glass between marble pilasters which support the vaulted ceiling. The ceiling will be coffered, while the floor is to be of marble decorated with mosaics. The two upper floors, above the Aracade, are to be used exclusively for office purposes. Large elevators are being installed. The ceilings of the office floors are to be 12 feet in height. All offices are so arranged as to have outside light and ventilation. The corridors are to be laid with marble floors, and the walls are to be wainscoted with marble to the height of seven feet.

The building is to be fireproofed throughout. The Broadway facade is to be of iron and glass enclosed in a frame of white marble composed of engaged columns supporting an entablature of Roman Doric order. The New street facade is to correspond in several designs and will provide a maximum amount of light for offices and stores.

Burton Thompson, broker, 7 Wall street, is representing the Standard Oil Company of New York in the management of the property.

A Queens Terminal Market.

The Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens has appointed the following Terminal Market Committee to co-operate with the members of the Market Committee of the Board of Estimate to study the market situation with the view of establishing public markets in the Borough of Queens:

Michael J. Degnon, president of the Degnon Terminal Co., chairman; Geo. J. Ryan, vice-president of the Queens Chamber of Commerce; A. L. Langdon, traffic manager of the Long Island Railroad; John Adikes, merchant, Jamaica; Frederick Russell, chairman Commerce Committee.

Complete plans have been prepared by the Long Island Railroad for the establishment of a public market, on the west side of Dutch Kills Creek, between Borden avenue and Hunters' Point avenue. These plans include in addition to a general market, a fish market, meat and vegetable warehouse, fruit warehouse, etc., where supplies can be received by train and by boat from all parts of the country and be available for immediate distribution to any part of New York City.

An estimate of the complete cost of this market is $3,500,000. The Long Island Railroad owns the land, comprising over four blocks, and is willing to co-operate in a plan for financing the erection of these market buildings. Such a market would have both all rail and water communication, and would not be limited in space. It would be a big central distributing depot, and there would be room for sales rooms and cold storage plants.

Specify ALPHA and be SURE

This great waiting room—one of the most impressive among the world's railroad stations—demonstrates the possibilities in combining the beautiful with strength and permanence. The author of "The Concrete House and Its Construction" says of this room:

"Above the costly Travertine stone, imported from Italy, the interior walls are faced with concrete, colored and cast in imitation of this stone. Even experts have been deceived as to the point where the stone ends and the concrete begins. The economy and utility of concrete for architectural purposes is strikingly exemplified in this magnificent building."

ALPHA PORTLAND CEMENT

The High-Water Mark of Quality

was used in the construction of the P. R. R. Terminal to the extent of over 250,000 barrels. Exacting tests showed, as they always do, that ALPHA could be depended upon for strength, uniformity of composition, thorough burning, fine grinding and proper ageing.

In great structures everywhere—in the New York Aqueduct; in the Bush Terminal Buildings; in the Union Station, Washington; in great sea walls, dams, and railroad bridges; in government forts, piers and dry docks—wherever the demand is for the most uniform and the highest quality, ALPHA Portland Cement has more than met all requirements.

The production of high-grade Portland Cement requires long experience and the exercise of the greatest care. ALPHA Cement represents 23 years of experience. In every ALPHA plant, chemists are real dictators. They make hourly tests throughout the process of manufacture, to keep ALPHA up to the standard that represents the high-water mark of quality. Neither sharp competition nor zeal for impressive output at low cost is allowed to lower the ALPHA standard.

Six great plants on six trunk line railroads, one with private docks directly on the Hudson River, with a daily capacity of 25,000 barrels and storage for 2,000,000 barrels, insure prompt shipments of thoroughly seasoned cement at all times.

ELEVATOR REGULATIONS.

Building Code Revisers Ask Modifications for Private Dwellings.

REGULATIONS for elevator enclosures in private dwellings is a subject that will soon be taken up in its order by the Building Committee of the Board of Aldermen and the editor of the new building code, Supt. Miller. The requirements of the present building code and the proposed code of April, 1912, which latter was prepared by the Joint Committee of City Departments, are considered by many architects as excessive, and the committee has received requests for modifications.

Speaking of the subject this week Supt. Miller said that it was being said by those in favor of modifying the law that the fire hazard in private houses is mostly confined to the cellars and basements, where it is practical to build elevator enclosures with eight-inch walls, but above the basement it is claimed that conditions change, and every inch of thickness of the elevator enclosure is a serious matter. The present requirement of a minimum thickness of wall of four inches renders the installation of elevators in many private houses impossible.

Points for Consideration.

By various architects and builders Mr. Miller has been asked to give consideration of the following points:

"The stair halls of private houses are not fireproof and the stairs are open—the result is a non-fireproof shaft of large size from top to bottom of the house.

"Any elevator enclosure which adjoins and connects with this non-fireproof hall and which does not increase the fire hazard must be built according to the excessive fireproof requirements of the existing Building Code.

"These elevators in most cases are located either behind the stairs against the wall or in the center of the house with the entrance from the hall. In many cases existing non-fireproof dumbwaiter shafts are fireproofed and used for elevator enclosures, thus reducing existing fire hazard.

"Further, the code requirements are not consistent, for after elevator enclosure is built as required, there may be placed in the most vulnerable positions—the door openings—wood doors covered with sheet metal only on the elevator side of enclosure, leaving the wood exposed on the outside!

Fire Hazard Is Slight.

"The fire hazard from a private house elevator is very slight; these elevators are automatic in their working and their mechanism requires that all the elevator doors be closed at all times or the elevator will not move.

"The Building Code properly requires that the electric elevator mechanism be enclosed in a fireproof room, so that the elevator constitutes no fire hazard to the building, as the entire installation at all times is safely guarded or houses within a fireproof enclosure.

"The Building Code should be revised to permit of some form of enclosure for private house elevators that would permit of their being erected inside existing closets, etc. For example, a skeleton steel frame with horizontal bracing spaced not more than 2 feet apart; expanded wire lath securely fastened to the steel frame and covered with 2 inches of any of the patent plastering mortars with 25 per cent. of Portland cement added.

"Or a steel skeleton frame with no unsupported panel more than 7 feet 6 inches high filled with an approved 2-inch gypsum block laid with gauged mortar. These requirements need not be confined to existing buildings, as they are good and sufficient for both new and old private houses.

"The present building code should be revised in regard to short run elevators in business buildings. The present code says all elevator enclosures must extend not less than 3 feet 6 inches above the roof. Where a tenant in a store occupies the second floor and wants a private elevator this requirement cannot be met. The proposed code prepared by the Joint Committee on City Departments in April, 1912 (section 26, clause 5) took proper cognizance of this question."

A NEW RESIDENCE AT FIELDSTON

The new home of Architect Dwight James Baum at Fieldston, the development of the Delafield estate at Riverdale-on-Hudson, shows an unusual design, its motives being derived from the old Dutch Colonial farmhouses found throughout Pennsylvania. It is built of Tapestry brick and hollow tile, the first floor has its face brick laid in Dutch bond and yellow mortar joints, while the second story, which is separated from the first by a small projecting roof, is covered with light gray stucco. The green shingle roofs come down to the ceiling line of the porches, where they are supported by large stucco columns. The porches and terraces are of tapestry brick and tile.

The interior is kept Colonial in character by its white enamel finish and mahogany doors throughout, while the main hall and dining room are paneled after old Georgian models. A vista is obtained through the main rooms of the first floor from porch to porch, and from entrance front to garden front. The kitchen, while small, is compact, and with three exposures is well ventilated. A grade entrance at the rear permits entering direct to the service stairs and rooms without entering the rest of the house.

NEW MUNICIPAL BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY
Largest Municipal Building in the World

"R. I. W." REMEMBER IT'S WATERPROOF

Damp Resisting Paint

No. 232 "R. I. W." was selected for the dampproofing of this structure, owing to its unsurpassed "service records" in every type of building construction, from the humblest dwelling to the most monumental government and private buildings.

This grade of "R. I. W." bonds perfectly with plaster, prevents the penetration of dampness, saves the cost of furring and lathing, and prevents the migration of vermin.

PERSONAL AND TRADE NOTES.

A GREAT LOCKOUT on the buildings trades of Great Britain is reported from London to be impending.

DR. CHARLES W. BERRY, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has recently been appointed Sanitary Supervisor of the New York State Department of Health at a salary of $4,000 per year.

CHARLES A. ANDRES, formerly of the Hale & Kilburn Company, in the sales department, is now connected with the Reliance Fireproof Door Company, Milton and West sts, Brooklyn.

LOUIS E. EDEN, M. E., formerly connected with Cass Gilbert, architect, 11 East 24th st, has opened offices at 1 Madison av, where he will practice as a steam, electric and sanitary engineer.

BERTRAM G. GOODHUE, architect, 2 West 47th st, has been selected to prepare the plans for the New York City Building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The building will be 120x160 feet and will cost $50,000.

R. L. VANIMAN, formerly associated with Starrett & Van Vleck, architects, has been appointed associate engineer and Western representative of Percival Robert Moses, 366 5th av. His office will be located in Vancouver, B. C.

HARRY J. MARKS, manager of New York office of the American Engine & Electric Co., 90 West st, has been promoted to the position of sales manager of the company. His time will be divided between the New York office and the home office at Bound Brook, N. J.

THE CHESTNUT RIDGE WHITE BRICK COMPANY, formerly of 122 West 42d st, has opened attractive offices in the Keen Building, West 45th st at 5th av. It will take possession today. The company occupied its former offices for twelve years.

RALPH ADAMS CRAM, formerly of the firm of Cram, Goodhue & Ferguson, architects, has been appointed Senior Professor of Architecture in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This chair was recently vacated by the resignation of James Knox Taylor.

ALFRED D. FLINN, department engineer of the Board of Water Supply of New York City, and formerly managing editor of the Engineering Record, has been appointed deputy chief engineer to succeed Col. Merritt H. Smith, who was recently made the chief engineer of the department.

COMMISSIONER JOHN T. FETHERSTON'S plan for a model street-cleaning district has received the endorsement of the Merchants' Association. The initial cost for establishing the proposed model district will be $253,000. This expenditure, it is estimated, will result in an annual saving of $50,000 in maintenance charges.

JOSEPH T. RYERSON & SON announce that it has established warehouses in St. Louis for the greater convenience of their customers requiring finished steel. It has taken over the plant, merchandise, equipment and good will of the W. G. Hagar Iron Company of St. Louis. It will be conducted, according to the formal announcement just sent out, as an independent, well equipped steel warehouse.

THE INSIDE IRONWORKERS currently reported to be striking for better wages and hours are merely trying to organize into a union. There are already two unions of inside workers, but they do not include the workmen now taking action. The leaders report that their demands are being conceded, and that building operations are not appreciably affected. Only the shops south of 25th street are involved.

HARRY BURDETT has resigned as secretary and treasurer of F. A. Burdett & Co., Inc., consulting engineers, of New York City, with whom he has been associated for nine years, and with W. C. Couch and William P. Rand has opened offices at 303 5th av under the firm name of Burdett, Couch & Rand for the practice of architectural and structural engineering. Mr. Couch has been engaged in structural engineering work for fifteen years, the greater part of that time with Post & McCord, of New York City, Fort Pitt Bridge Works, of Pittsburgh, and F. A. Burdett & Co. Mr. Rand has been engaged in engineering work for fourteen years with the Boston Steel & Iron Co.

JOSE BERRE KING, head of the firm of J. B. King & Co., leading plaster manufacturers, of No. 1 Broadway, who died April 22, 1913, left a total estate of $1,531,862, according to a transfer tax appraisal filed this week. The net value was fixed at $1,290,509. Mrs. Louise W. King, widow, of London, received all personalty, value at $4,321, and an annuity of $30,000. Edward D., David W., Elsie, Emma and Mary King, children of Mr. and Mrs. King, each received the income from $196,869. On the death of their mother they will divide equally the principal of the trust set aside to pay the annuity to Mrs. King. Mr. King owned no realty in New York State. The works of J. B. King & Co., located on Staten Island, manufacture plaster board, plaster of paris and cement. The 4,000 shares of stock held by Mr. King represents two-thirds of the entire stock. Subsidiary companies are J. B. King Transportation Company, Gypsum Packet Company, Newport Plaster and Mining Company, Windsor Cement Company and the Muralo Company.

SECRETARY HELMS of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests left town yesterday for a vacation which he will spend yachting on the New England coast with John Hays Hammond and a party of friends.

Must Replace Steam Pipes.

The New York Steam Company has been ordered by the Public Service Commission to gradually replace their present antiquated mains with a more modern type, designed to minimize the troubles which have been a source of numerous complaints in the past. The steam companies were placed under the jurisdiction of the commission in 1913, and since that time the commission has made an exhaustive investigation into the methods of operations of this company. It was testified at the various hearings, held by Commissioner Milo R. Maltbie, that the heat from the steam pipes caused thousands of dollars' damage yearly. Asphalt is frequently melted, and this results in injury to the waterproofing of subways. Pavements have been ruined by the heat; and it is difficult for men to work in manholes in the vicinity of the steam pipes. Temperatures of the ground were reported as high as 220 degrees. The company now has 14,567 feet of mains of the modern style construction out of a total of 73,553. The commission's order required that 58,986 feet of the old style be replaced by the modern type at the rate of not less than 12,000 feet a year, beginning September 1, 1914.

—Concrete roads and pavements consumed 1,750,000 barrels of cement in 1912 and 4,200,000 barrels in 1913, according to the Universal Portland Cement Co. This amount of cement would build a 16-foot concrete road, considerably farther than from New York to Chicago.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

SHORTAGE OF SUPPLY AND FREER BUYING STIFFEN LINSEED OIL AND STRUCTURAL STEEL QUOTATIONS—BRICK EASY

Current Prices of All Basic Building Commodities—War Opinion Divided

LINSEED oil jumped in price to 60 cents plus per gallon this week, a total gain of six cents in a fortnight, thus leading every other department of the building material market in price improvement. Heavy buying by shorts and continued depressing reports of the linseed crop were important factors in the East. There are prospects that a still further advance will be reported. Many heavy users of linseed oil are known to have light supplies in hand, and with the prospect of foreign supplies being shut off by reason of the martial state of affairs on the continent, there is reason, according to well-informed interests, to believe that quotations will move up much farther before harvest time arrives.

Common brick prices close the first month in the second half of the year practically at the same basis at which they entered it. The Greater New York Brick Company has just finished a count of the supply in sheds along the Hudson and estimated the number in dealers' hands in the district. The figures seem to indicate that, like the cement market, the over-production has been brought nearer to basic market requirements, through the policy of restricted shipment, so that within the next thirty days there may be a change in quotations upward. Raritan common is firm at $5.50 to $5.75 and $6.25 to $6.75 yard, Newark, Hudson common is quoted now at $5.25 to $5.75, wholesale dock, New York.

Other commodities are nervous on lists. Structural steel is being fairly well taken at the new 1.31c level. There is talk of advancing the price another $1 west of Pittsburgh and if this is done there may be another slight advance at tidewater, New York.

August lumber lists will show a slight advance in hardwoods, yellow pine, spruce and hemlock. Lath probably will remain stationary. The advance is expected to be $2 on oak, maple and yellow pine. Spruce is expected to advance a dollar on Eastern Pennsylvania.

This change is due to curtailment of production and a general tightening in market demand. The approach of the fall buying season is also partly responsible for the uplift. Credits probably will continue to be liberal to free buyers.

COMMON BRICK.

Sales Exceeded Receipts on Wholesale Market—Rain Checks Riding.

WHILE sales exceeded in volume arrivals of common brick on the wholesale market this week, rain cut down the total of brick unloaded from barges to jobs as reported by the Greater New York Brick Company, almost a million and a half. Prices are steady and the demand seems to be gradually getting back to normal.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, July 30, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

LINSEED OIL STILL HIGHER.

Advance Has Reached 6 Cents A Gallon in Last Fortnight.

WITH a total increase in local market prices of six cents a gallon in less than a fortnight in the price of linseed oil, that commodity closed in a very firm position yesterday afternoon at 60 @ — and linseed cake at $29 and $29.50.

The buying movement here has improved considerably, but the price uplift has been mainly attributed to scarcity of supply in the West. Toward the middle of the week, when the 60-cent level was reached, paint interests appeared to have come to the conclusion that there was something more than mere market manipulation that was forcing prices up and, in view of the war clouds that were then gathering abroad, paint and other manufacturers using any quantity of this commodity deemed it advisable to come in for supplies more aggressively. The linseed crop will be moderate and there were some in the trade who were ready to venture an opinion that the market is in for some of the highest prices ever known in the linseed oil market. The more conservative, however, admitted that the top probably had not yet been reached.

IRON AND STEEL.

Drop in Structural Orders Noticeable in Last Few Days.

SENTIMENT in the structural steel market this week was vacillating. Opinion was divided regarding the effect the menacing status of Continental Europe would have upon the domestic steel market.

The Journal of Commerce, in a survey it made of the local market, discovered a significant feature in the mid-week market in the fact of the impossibility of obtaining British charters for transportation of steel products from Europe. It pointed out that recently there has been a fair export trade and the leading interests anticipate a further increase if the movement of freight is not seriously interfered with by political developments abroad.

The response to the recent advance in the price of bars and plates was reported to be satisfactory to the mills in the Pittsburgh district than to those in the East and another advance of $1 is being talked of for interior points. Railroads continue to be active buyers of plan material for shop work.

PHILADELPHIA TOWER FIRE ESCAPE

History of Safety Tower From Its Infancy—Examples of Practicability In Cases of Fire—Space Always Utilized.*

By MANTON E. HIBBS, C. E.

THIS age is demanding from science a very heavy toll of duty, especially along those lines affecting specifically the human element and its welfare. A fire takes place in one of our large buildings and, for the same reason, all are concerned for the safety of its occupants. In nearly every disastrous fire that has taken place, there seems to arise a wail for more fire-escapes, to the total exclusion of the ordinary means of exit.

In order that all might get a grasp as to how Philadelphia is solving the problem of adequate means of exit in matter of panic or fire, as well as for ordinary use in her buildings, attention will be first drawn to the history of the tower, for its building, like any other mechanical device, is an evolution extending over a period of twenty years or more.

First Type to Be Used.

Probably the first kind erected many years ago was simply a vertical, metal ladder available for exit at windows with no platform at the story heights. This was replaced by fixed platforms covering two windows with immovable stairs at an angle of 45° more or less, with a movable, vertical ladder reaching from the second floor to grade line. Then came the substitution of a movable, hung stairway, counterbalanced by a weight attached to a chain or cable for the vertical hung ladder from the second-story landing.

In the next step, this stairway was counterbalanced in the rear like a cantilever. The platforms are usually of slats, channels and angles carried on brackets bolted to the walls by through bolts. It will be noticed from this evolution that the main development has been that a stairway and platform growth, with little or no attention paid to the means of reaching the fire-escape, which was, in most cases, from windows placed 3 feet above the floor. Recently, the Pennsylvania Legislature passed a law, making it mandatory that the entrance to the fire-escape platform should be by a fire-door, and all the windows covered by the escape must be of wire-glass and metal frame.

Tower Fire Escape Born.

The tale runs that a Kensington mill owner of Philadelphia was ordered by the Building Bureau to put up an outside metal escape on one of his buildings. Upon consultation with his architect, the idea of eliminating outside stairs of the escape by taking the ordinary stairs of his building and enclosing them in a tower of brick, thereby separating the stairs entirely from the rest of the building, was evolved. This forced, of course, an entrance to the tower from the outside of the building by means of the platforms of the outside metal escape, which were reached from the main building by doors, at every story, opening upon the platforms. The Bureau agreed to this, and the tower fire-escape was born.

*Excerpts from a paper read at the First Annual Convention of the American Society of Engineers, Architects and Constructors.

Under the Act of June 8, 1893, the tower fire-escape was taken as an equivalent for a metal escape and was required for mills and stores only. Later on, this same mill owner, upon advice of his architect, submitted to the Bureau a proposition that, in place of the outside platform, a vestibule be substituted with one side open entirely to the air. The Bureau consented only on the condition that if the experiment was not a success the outside platforms would have to be added. However, it was successful.

Towers Installed.

Under the Act of May 5th, 1899, stores and manufacturing establishments were compelled to install towers, and if the areas exceeded 10,000 square feet of floor, additional towers could be ordered. This, of course, applied to buildings three stories or more in height. Under the Act known as No. 236, of the date of April 25th, 1903, which is now in force in Philadelphia, all buildings of first, second or third class used as school houses, tenement houses, apartment houses, flat houses, stores, offices (first class exempt), manufactories, workshops, mills, places of assembly or resort, of three stories or more, shall have in addition to the main stairs tower fire-escapes, whose number depends upon the character of construction of the building, the number of stories and the area of the floor.

Features of Construction.

A formula for the construction of the tower fire-escape was evolved and has as main features the following: The tower fire-escape shall be divided from the building and completely enclosed with brick walls or fire-proof material; the walls must run 3 feet above the roof of the building and the roof must be of hard, incombustible material, thus the tower becomes smoke-proof as well as fire-proof. The stairs may be of metal or wood with a rise not more than 8 inches and the tread not less than 9 inches. The entrance to the tower must be by means of an outside balcony, whose floor is of solid, incombustible material through a metal or tin covered door or by means of an incombustible vestibule, one side of which is entirely open to a street or alley, and there must be also a well, separating the vestibule from the tower. The vestibules, walls, floors, ceilings, must be entirely of hard, incombustible material.

Meeting Architectural Needs.

Now, having placed in the building code the clause making nearly every kind of building that formerly required a metal escape have a tower fire-escape, also adopted a formula for its construction, then came the task of adapting the tower to meet the architectural and commercial needs of the building.

The tower can be used, especially if it has a vestibule, as an ordinary stairway at all times. In the Wanamaker building, whose floor area is 112,608 square feet per floor and whose height is 243 feet, the four double fire-towers are always used by the employees, and that is the only way of entrance or exit for them. Hence, all are familiar with them, and, in case of emergency, their value is not an unknown asset to each worker.

Saving Space.

As the stairway leads from the second floor directly to the street, it was only that space occupied by stairway necessary for tower, while one-half the tower of the first floor, and all below first, was really wasted as far as utility goes. To make this space available as an entrance to the elevator in rear, or as a stairs to the cellars, a wall was run from the basement to the landing above the first floor, while the stairs to the second floor and basement were made fire-proof. An entrance could not be made in the main wall of the tower on the first floor, and if a fire breaks forth in the cellar, the smoke ascending will be blocked by the fire-proof stairs and middle wall and the tower is still smoke-proof as if the walls were still run solid to foundation.

The fire-tower is especially adapted to theatre construction. Often, emergency exit platforms are forced beyond the street lines, which can be readily done above the first floor, and if a fire-tower can be built to cover the second floor only, these exits can run to the tower thus preventing any encroachment of the sidewalk. At the Philadelphia Opera House and the Orpheum Theatre, vestibules extend along the lines of the balcony, and by these vestibules, the people are readily led to the tower and thence to the street. In the Philadelphia Theatre Law, if towers are constructed for the use of emergency exits, the courts along the sides of the theatre are allowed to be decreased. Apartment houses and hotels use their tower fire-escapes in conjunction with their kitchens for supplies and a servants' exit.

Saving Money.

The factories have placed their elevators in the rear of towers, thereby saving one side in cost of construction. Also, by running the walls 20 feet above roof and increasing the walls below tank positions for their sprinkler systems. Sometimes, these factories have more than 25,000 square feet of floor area and division walls are necessary with no openings. In place of the usual openings with double fire-doors, a double fire-tower can be constructed on the outside of the building, and workers can readily leave the two buildings without making a journey to another stairway. In case of fire, the tower becomes a means of advantage for the firemen to reach and fight the fire at every story with perfect safety. In fact, in one fire in Vine street near Broad street, the only thing that was left was the fire-tower.

Our architects have woven the towers readily into our structures so that no building need be marred or disfigured in the same way as the outside metal escapes. In some instances, by a little thoughtful decoration in the matter of a balcony, or by window boxes of floors, a touch of the city beautiful is added to our streets.

In the matter of cost, which seems to be of greater issue today than it sometimes really warrants, I will attempt to give you a detail of costs of our towers from a careful estimate made by one of our Philadelphia contractors, the McCaul Company, from sketches furnished them by the writer. These estimates are the net costs added to the building and not as if the tower was built alone. The sketches were for a fire-tower, placed in a mill building six stories high, with a basement, and the space occupied by the tower, if of vestibule kind, 10x22, and if with a balcony, 10x18. The story height is 12 feet and wall thicknesses ran from 9 inches to 18 inches. All the other details were to be in conformity with the code of the Philadelphia Building Bureau. The results of these estimates are as follows: The vestibule tower, $2,422, and the balcony, $2,655.

Corner Towers.

If the towers are placed in the corners of the buildings, thereby making one side of the building one of the main walls of the tower, the costs are as follows; Vestibule, $1,887; balcony, $1,909. If an elevator is added to rear of the tower, the cost is still further reduced to these figures: Tower, $1,442, balcony, $1,564.

Through the kindness of another contractor, the Humphrey Construction Company, the cost of an outside metal escape, with wire-glass windows and metal doors, for a six-story mill building, will amount to $900. By comparison of these costs, you will note that the towers will cost from one and a half to three times the cost of the outside metal escapes.

But, after all, how are our towers behaving in the actual fire or panic? A fire broke out in the 8-sty fireproof factory of the John B. Stetson Hat Factory, Germantown avenue and Montgomery avenue, Philadelphia. The building where the fire broke out is known as 24, while the adjacent building, known as 23, is 5 stories high and fireproof. There are three vestibule fire-towers in these two buildings, with stairs 46 inches wide. The total number of people leaving the buildings was 705, males and females, and the maximum time consumed by the people in any room in leaving the building was 3¾ minutes. Summary is as follows:

Report Showing Employees.

"Report showing number of male and female employees on the various floors of Buildings No. 23 and 24 and the time consumed in their leaving the buildings on account of a fire in the Paper Box Department on N. W. Corner of 8th floor of Building No. 24, Thursday afternoon, March 12th, 1914.

Number of fire tower staircases, 3. Total number people leaving buildings, 705. Maximum time consumed by people of any one room, 3¾ minutes.

At the southeast corner of Lancaster avenue and Thirty-sixth street, the Pennsylvania Home for the Blind have a factory where our blind men are able to earn an honorable living by manufacturing articles, and the 100 men working on the fourth, third and second floors are able, under a fire-drill, to reach the ground by means of long platforms whose railings are as high as a man's head, and the fire-tower, in 3 minutes.

I can add the testimony of G. W. Elliott, the Fire Marshal of Philadelphia, who knows the behavior of our fire-towers under the actual fires for a number of years. I quote the following paragraphs from a letter he kindly wrote to me in reference to the subject of fire-towers:

Means of Averting Panic

"Along the lines of fire-towers I think emphasis can be placed on their use by employees in buildings adjoining places of conflagration. This has been demonstrated many times, more especially in the case of female operators. In many of our large fires, panic has been averted in large fire-proof structures surrounding the fire grounds by the knowledge of an existing fire-tower, and when it became necessary to dismiss the workers, they filed out in an orderly manner by means of the fire-tower. The mere knowledge of the existence of the fire-tower has so often allayed fear and averted panic that their value in this regard is beyond question.

"In addition, where large fireproof structures are attacked by fire, they form one of the quickest and safest means of attack in fighting the fire that could be desired. This not only by affording a fireproof means of entrance for the firemen, but a fireproof housing for hose reels and standpipes, giving instant service at each floor. Knowing the difficulties confronting firemen in mastering a fire on the upper floors of high buildings, this latter feature is in itself, not to speak of many others, sufficient recompense (from a purely financial standpoint) for the space required by a fire-tower or towers, as the case might be."

WORK BEING PUSHED ON NEW SUBWAYS

Public Service Commission Considers Station Problems at 59th Street — Contracts Awarded and Other Matters Considered.

THE Public Service Commission for the First District during the week had before it reports from Alfred Craven, its Chief Engineer, with respect to two stations in 59th street, Manhattan. For some time the property owners in the vicinity have been desirous that the 59th street station on the Lexington avenue subway should be made an express stop. This station was planned as a local stop, and as the work has progressed and it is being constructed as a local station the Chief Engineer reports that, in his opinion, it would be very inadvisable that it should be changed to an express stop. The Commission approved of this recommendation. With respect to making the Columbus Circle station, of the present subway, an express stop a report was received from the Chief Engineer stating the estimates of cost. The Commission authorized the Chief Engineer to take the matter up with the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and find out whether it would be willing to have this change made as an "extra" under the original subway contract. There are two schemes for the remodeling of the present station at Columbus Circle. In the first passages are provided from the sidewalk from four points of the Circle with ramps to a mezzanine constructed beneath the tracks at their present grade. This scheme would cost about $900,000. In the other scheme it would be necessary to depress the tracks from seven to eight feet below their present level, and would cost about $1,500,000. The scheme which will be followed out ultimately has not yet been decided upon.

During the week the Commission awarded two rapid transit contracts and authorized advertisements for two more. The contract for the construction of Section No. 5 of Routes Nos. 4 and 36, that part of the Broadway subway in Manhattan in 59th and 60th streets between Seventh and Second avenues, was awarded to the Degnon Contracting Company, for $2,819,511. This is a two-track extension of the Broadway subway, and will have two stations, one at Fifth avenue and the other at Lexington avenue. The other contract was for the construction of station finish at the six stations on the extension of the Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, subway from 43d to 86th street. The stations are located at 45th street, 53d street, 59th street, express, Bay Ridge avenue, 77th street and 86th street, express. On August 21, 1914, the Commission will receive bids for the construction of Section No. 3 of Route No. 33, in Brooklyn, and also for the supplying of more special work for the Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, subway. Section No. 3 is mainly a part of the extension of the East River tunnel, from Whitehall street, Manhattan, to Montague street, Brooklyn, for operation by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation; but it will also include part of the connection between the East River tunnel from Old Slip, Manhattan, to Clark street, Brooklyn, for operation by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. The Commission fixed the date for opening these bids in August in order that the matters could be referred to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment at its meeting on August 27, and thereby avoid the loss of any time.

The Commission has approved of a contract to be made by the New York Municipal Railway Corporation with the Federal Signal Company for the installation of track signals in the Centre street loop subway. The Federal Signal Company was the lowest bidder for this work. The Union Switch and Signal Company protested to the Commission, alleging that the Federal Company could not meet the requirements of the specifications without infringing on its patents. Commissioner Robert C. Wood held hearings in regard to this, but in view of possible delay that might ensue the Commission determined to approve of the award of the contract to the Federal Company, subject to its giving assurances of indemnity against patent claims.

The New York Municipal Railway Corporation was authorized to order another 100 new steel cars, for operation in the subways that will go to that company under the Dual System agreements. Some time ago the company ordered 100 cars, and these will be delivered next December. The second order will be placed soon, and the delivery of the cars will take place in the spring or summer of 1915.

The Public Service Commission for the First District has been notified by its counsel that after examination of the consents of property owners received from the New York Municipal Railway Corporation, it was ascertained that on the Jamaica avenue elevated extension sufficient number of consents had been obtained to legalize the route.

LOANING INSTITUTION COUNSELS CALMNESS

Walter Stabler, Comptroller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Hopes All Operations Will Proceed

WALTER STABLER, Comptroller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, one of the largest institutions lending money on building construction in the metropolitan district, issued a statement to all real estate, building construction and development interests in this locality this week in which he pointed out the reasons why the disturbed state of affairs in Europe should not seriously impair construction work here and hoped that all building operations now under way would proceed as if nothing had happened abroad. He further stated that as building materials are not now high it would seem to be a very good time to carry on building construction work.

When war in Europe broke out and the Stock Exchanges of the world closed approximately, 30,000 building tradesmen imagined at once that with a tie-up of finances they would be thrown out of employment because of a cessation of activities. This figure did not include the great army of unskilled labor that finds employment on building under construction in the district.

Effect of the War.

Thousands of these artisans have been called out of employment by consuls of various countries who are herding the reservists for duty abroad and, in the absence of advice from recognized reliable sources many building contractors were reluctant about filling their places. The same was true of great quantities of building materials in transit from various parts of the country for use in this district. If delivery was to be refused by contractors for fear of piling up demurrage and storage charges pending a possible cessation of building work, mill men and manufacturers faced the alternative of closing down their plants or at least of reducing output, thus throwing out of employment many additional thousands of laborers.

When, therefore, the necessity of giving some word of reassurance, if possible, to the building public was presented to the Metropolitan Life Company the Comptroller, after causing to be made a careful survey of the local real estate and building situation, prepared the statement which follows:

Good Cause for Confidence.

Walter Stabler, Comptroller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in speaking of the condition of the real estate market in this city, and the possible effect the European war may have on real estate interests, said:

"It would seem to me wise that we first take an inventory of the situation as it existed two weeks ago, before the appalling disaster in Europe was even dreamed of. So far as I am able to judge, conditions at that time were encouraging, except as regards certain sections of the city which have been affected by over-production, and by the change in location of some of our important businesses. Those conditions are certainly and slowly improving, but it may take sometime to restore them to a normal healthy condition.

"There has been, as is generally known, quite a cessation of building operations in the so-called Fourth avenue section caused principally by the slight over-production of space; that over-production is, I believe, being rapidly taken up, and I hope and believe by February next the amount of such vacant space will be negligible. The situation in the apartment house section, while not the best we have ever known, is certainly good and healthy, and with a few exceptions such real estate has been, and is paying a fair return to its owners.

Walter Stabler said to a representative of the Record and Guide this week:—"I hope that all building operations which have been started, or which have been financed, will proceed as if nothing had happened abroad. Certainly all contractors in building lines will be anxious to keep their men employed. The available rentable space was being rapidly absorbed prior to the outbreak of the war, and I believe that by February next that such vacant space will be negligible. The legislation enacted by Congress within the last few days would seem to put us in position to meet almost any reasonable demand that may be made on us by foreign investors. We are certain to profit from the troubles of our brothers across the seas."

Building Cessation.

"The lessening of the erection of such buildings in the last few years has materially helped in correcting a situation in this class of real estate which was becoming alarming, but it would certainly seem the present condition of these properties is in most cases as good as could be expected under the most favorable circumstances. It would seem to me, therefore, the situation two weeks ago was one which had in it elements of hope; certainly there was no ground for pessimism when the market as a whole is considered, and many important investments have been made where builders have sold at fair profits to permanent investors. Had the course of events abroad not interfered, I believe, there would have been a steady improvement in the investment market. We do not have to look very far for grounds for this belief.

"While mercantile business has not been especially good, nor has manufacturing been up to the usual average, the great basis of our prosperity, the crops, has never promised as good as this year, and this promise of abundance has also had with it the probability of good prices. The sales of these products would, without question, within the next few months have stimulated very decidedly general business conditions, and I must believe we would have seen the beginning of an era of unequalled prosperity for the country. Real estate does not feel as quickly the benefits of such improvement; it is usually the last business to be stimulated, but this stimulation would certainly have come.

Future Hard to Forecast.

"Now we are confronted with a different condition. What effect will the European war have on our Real Estate market? It is a question which seems to me almost impossible to answer. We can only wait with patience to see what will be the result, but we can wait with patience and, I think, with a feeling of certainty that because of the healthy condition of most real estate, and because of the comparatively small number of new building operations now under way, real estate will have no difficulty in weathering any storm the European trouble may produce. Any new enterprise floated on borrowed money must of necessity be postponed, as it is hardly likely any of the lending institutions will make commitments for future business until it is known what will be the general financial situation.

"Fortunately, our country is in good shape financially and able to meet most any ordinary demands upon it. The legislation enacted by Congress during the last few days would seem to put us in position to meet almost any reasonable demand that may be made on us by foreign investors. That question, time can only solve, but I have every hope and belief that the United States will bear the burdens that will be placed upon it with courage and success.

"In all this we must not forget that production of all kinds in Europe must of necessity be entirely suspended. They will need our food products in increasing quantities and at increased prices. The only doubtful question on this point being, the means of transportation, and whether or not the whole of Europe can obtain them from us at any price. This must, to a great extent, be to our financial advantage, and much as we regret the cause of this increase in demand and prices, we are certain to profit from the troubles of our neighbors across the seas.

Time Propitious.

"I hope that all building operations which have been started, or which have been financed, will proceed as if nothing had happened abroad. It would seem to me a particularly advantageous time for builders to carry on their operations, if they have secured the necessary money to do so. Certainly all contractors in building lines will be anxious to keep their men employed, and as materials are not high, it would seem to be a very good time to carry on building operations. New schemes will, of course, have to step aside for awhile. Lenders must feel confident as to what is to be the outcome of the present troubles before they would be justified in making new commitments.

"Under the circumstances I would strongly advise that holders of real estate do not consent to make sacrifices of their property unless absolutely necessary, as I can but feel that the situation, at present, is at its worst, and any change must be for the better."

J. P. Beck Wins Prize.

J. P. Beck, who is publicity manager for the Universal Portland Cement Company, has been awarded the $1,000 first prize for the best constructive and suggestive essay on advertising by the Awards Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, which recently convened at Toronto.

Mr. Beck's essay covered a hypothetical campaign for fireproof construction with concrete and dealt with the tremendous annual fire loss and annual fire tax, and the relief offered from that loss and taxation by safer and saner construction with concrete.

Mr. Beck's familiarity with the various phases of the cement industry and his careful investigation of fireproof construction formed an excellent basis for his effort. This knowledge led the judges, Professor Paul T. Cherington of Harvard University, John Renfrew, Los Angeles, Cal., and A. G. Newmyer, New Orleans, La., to pronounce his essay the best of the thousands submitted.

Mr. Beck is widely known in the cement industry as general manager of the Cement Products Exhibition Co., under whose auspices the annual cement shows are held. He was elected secretary and treasurer of the first National Conference on Concrete Road Building,

HOW THE CITY IS PROTECTED AGAINST FIRE

Department Has 289 Companies and Owns 891 Pieces of Apparatus — Realty Holdings Aggregate $8,287,965

WITH the element of fire risk always present before the owner of improved real estate and the question of insurance important in every real estate transaction, it is interesting to note what provision Father Knickerbocker has made for the protection of the property of his citizens from fire.

Fire Department Realty

On May 22, 1912, the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund requested from the Department of Finance a record of the real property owned by the city. On April 17, 1913, Comptroller Prendergast submitted an exhaustive report showing how the realty was apportioned among the various departments. In this report the holdings under the jurisdiction of the Fire Department comprised properties valued at $8,287,965, which was about $1,000,000 more than the real estate under the control of the Police Department. All told, they totaled at that time 272 parcels which are used as quarters for hook and ladder and engine companies, fuel depots, repair shops, warehouses, and as sites for future construction of fire houses. Ninety-seven of these parcels are located in Manhattan, thirty-one in the Bronx, eighty-nine in Brooklyn, thirty-five in Queens and twenty in Richmond.

Commissioner's Report.

Fire Commissioner Adamson, in his report to the Mayor of the operations of the Fire Department for the year 1913, recommended that additional sites be procured and buildings erected at twenty-six different points of the city, including twelve in Brooklyn, nine in Queens, two in Richmond, two in the Bronx and one in Manhattan. He also asked that the quarters of three of the present companies be rebuilt and that additional necessary equipment be purchased.

These recommendations are now being considered by the Corporate Stock Budget Committee. If they are approved, the matter will come up for consideration before the Board of Estimates. If that body approves of the establishment of these extra firehouses, it will be presented before the Board of Aldermen, who can cut down the appropriation, but cannot increase it. It is probable, however, that these improvements will be authorized, since the construction of the new subways has already caused a shift of population and new residential communities created which require additional protection for fire. In 1913, fifteen new houses were contracted for, and seventeen were in course of construction. Twenty-three new ones were opened during that year.

Old Firehouses.

It is interesting to note how some of the older properties were acquired. The site of the present quarters of Hook and Ladder No. 15, at Old Slip, Water and Front streets, came into the ownership of the city in 1868 under the Dongan charter. At the same time the city also acquired 261 William street, now occupied by Engine Company No. 12, and 163 East 51st street, the headquarters of Engine Company No. 8. Other early acquisitions include the store house at 199 Chrystie street, which was bought for $700 from Elizabeth Sherman in December, 1824. The station of Hook and Ladder No. 20, at 157 Mercer street, was purchased, partly in 1817 from N. Van Buren and the remainder in 1831 from J. P. Roome. The oldest Bronx parcel is the unoccupied store house at 749 East 166th street, which was bought by the city in July, 1874. In Brooklyn the present headquarters of Engine Company No. 108, at 227 Front street, passed into the hands of the city in March, 1850.

Motor Vehicles.

On December 31, 1913, the Fire Department had on its rolls 4,952 uniformed officers and firemen and 759 civilian employes. There were on this date 289 companies and 891 pieces of apparatus of all kinds. Thirty new fire companies were organized during 1913 and 755 men appointed to the uniformed force. Six of these new companies replaced thirteen volunteer companies in the Newtown section of the Borough of Queens. There were at the close of 1913 in the service 167 motor vehicles consisting of 36 motor propelled steam pumping engines, three gasoline propelled pumping engines, one electric storage battery propelled steam fire engine, four gasoline hook and ladder trucks, fifteen tractored hook and ladder trucks, seventeen regulation hose wagons, eight high pressure hose wagons, twenty-six combination chemical engine and hose wagons, one boat tender (hose wagon), three water towers, thirty-three runabouts and touring cars and twenty delivery trucks.

The fire boat fleet consisted at the end of 1913 of ten boats with a combined pumping capacity of 71,500 gallons per minute. There were at that time 1,300 horses in service, which it is hoped to see replaced by motor apparatus within the next four years. The Commissioner in his report estimates that this change will require an expenditure of $250,000 each year, a total of $1,000,000.

Automobile Advantages.

Self-propelled fire apparatus has come into extensive use during the last six years. Many cities, including New York, have determined to motorize the departments completely and purchase no more horses. One-time Fire Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo, in a paper published in 1911 by the British Fire Prevention Committee, outlined the various advantages which automobile fire trucks have over horse-drawn vehicles. He said:

"It has been demonstrated that the use of auto apparatus for fighting fires is more efficient from more than one standpoint; first, after the receipt of the alarm the apparatus can reach the scene of the fire in a shorter space of time; second, that upon arrival at a fire the driver must be left in charge of the horses of each apparatus, which means that when four engine companies and two hook and ladder companies respond six men are left to watch the horses; third, the cost of forage, shoeing and medical attendance is considerable.

"While the auto apparatus awaits an alarm there is no expense. It has further been demonstrated that to feed, shoe and give the horses proper attention costs about $600, while the actual cost of fuel for propelling purposes in one of the busiest sections of the city for 1910 was but $85." He outlined other reasons as proof of the superiority of the auto fire truck over the horse-drawn truck.

Early History.

The Fire Department began with the first Dutch settlement and gradually increased in equipment and in efficiency through British Colonial days, Revolutionary War days, right through to the present time, where it has reached the highest possible stage. In the days of Dutch control fires were of frequent occurrence; houses were constructed of inflammable material and there was no way of effectively confining a fire within a limited area. The only means for extinguishing a blaze was by hand-carried pails. Everyone in the village was a volunteer fire fighter who could be pressed into service in any emergency. As the population grew, however, the necessity of organized resistance to fire became more imperative.

The first step in the direction of systematic fire prevention resulted in the enforcement of an order preventing the building of wooden chimneys and thatched roofs. It was not until 1648 that the first important fire ordinance was enacted and fire wardens were appointed who made regular inspections and investigations for possible violations of this ordinance. In 1913 the Bureau of Fire Prevention made 136,704 inspections and issued 43,510 orders.

First Survey.

In 1656 a survey of the town was completed, and it was found that there were 120 houses and a thousand inhabitants. There are today in New York about 366,540 buildings and about 5,580,000 inhabitants. As time went on fire buckets, ladders and hooks were placed in readiness at the street corners and public places. As the city continued to grow stone houses superseded those with roofs of straw and fires became less frequent. Fire engines were introduced in 1731, when two hand machines were imported from London and the famous old volunteer companies began to be formed. When the two engines arrived in New York the city had a population of about 8,600, occupying about 1,200 houses.

Queens Boulevard Assessment.

The Board of Estimate adopted a resolution on October 19, 1911, authorizing a proceeding for acquiring title to the lands and premises required for the opening and extending of Queens Boulevard from Van Dam street to Hillside avenue, Borough of Queens, and directing that 50% of the entire cost and expense of the proceeding be borne and paid by the City of New York, 30% of such cost and expense by the Borough of Queens and the remaining 20% of such cost and expense by the property deemed to be benefitted by the improvement.

The bounds of the area of special benefit have now been amended so as to begin at a point on the prolongation of a line midway between Manly street and Mount street distant 100 feet northerly from the northerly line of Skillman avenue, and running thence eastwardly along a line always distant 100 feet northerly from and parallel with the northerly line of Skillman avenue to the intersection with a line always distant 800 feet northerly from and parallel with the northerly line of Queens boulevard; thence generally eastwardly along the said parallel with Queens boulevard and along the prolongations thereof to the intersection with a line distant 100 feet southerly from and parallel with the southerly line of Jamaica avenue; thence westwardly along a line always parallel with and distant 100 feet from Jamaica avenue to the intersection with the prolongation of a line always distant 800 feet southerly and parallel with the southerly line of Queens boulevard; thence generally westwardly along the said line parallel with Queens boulevard and along the prolongations thereof to the intersection with the line midway between Manly street and Mount street; thence northwardly along the said line midway between Manly street and Mount street and the prolongation thereof to the point or place of beginning.

RECONSTRUCTION IN MIDTOWN ZONE

Tall Office and Loft Buildings Supplant Old Taxpayers—Success of Ventures will have Tendency to Expand Movement

THERE is probably no section of the city which has shown more development during the last five years than that district roughly bounded by Herald and Times squares. To those who have not watched the transition carefully it strikes them as being Alladin in character. Only a fair idea of the vast improvements accomplished can be obtained from the street, though should one of the tall modern structures be mounted, then, and only then, can the tremendous growth be realized.

Half a decade ago there were practically no high buildings in the zone, while today their name is legion. At that time should an architect or builder have suggested erecting a sixteen-story structure in the section, its proposer would have been considered a fair subject for mental examination, and yet to-day there are not only sixteen-story buildings, but twenty, twenty-two and even thirty-story structures, not erected for specific occupancy, but as an investment and to be offered for lease to various concerns.

The New York Times building was probably the pioneer tall building in the section, but it must be remembered that the structure was erected for the use of the publication, though additional space was provided so that some income could be obtained to help defray the operating expenses and return a percentage on the investment.

One of the important features of this operation was the fact that an almost new building, which was in part occupied by the Pabst Brewing Company was demolished to make way for the improvement. The razed structure is said to have cost about a quarter of a million dollars, all of which was figured as a total loss, less the amount of depreciation charged off during the few years that it remained standing.

Owners in the section knew that they had valuable possessions, but the long wait until it "came into the market" was most discouraging. Improvements were promised and not fulfilled and delay after delay was faced. Finally the actual completion of the Pennsylvania Railroad Station and the commencement of work on the Grand Central Terminal started a building movement which revolutionized the neighborhood. The letting of the contracts for the Seventh avenue subway; also the line to be operated under Broadway gave new impetus to the movement and firms of long standing took leases for terms of years, which established new wholesale and retail centres.

Among the first deals to have marked effect upon the section was the acquisition under lease of three important corners right at Times square, namely, the Heidelberg Building and the block front on the east side of Broadway, between 42d and 43d streets, the parcel being in two ownerships, the fee to the south corner being owned by the estate of William Astor, and the north corner by Mrs. Mary A. Fitzgerald. The projects were finally completed, though by interests other than the original promoters. In the case of the Heidelberg Building the initial plan has been completed only partially.

But few large plots along Broadway are in single ownerships, estates predominating, and it is for this reason that the development has been retarded. But, like Fourth avenue south of 32d street, when the movement once started several owners fell into line and improved their holdings. The leasing of the Hobart estate property, at the northeast corner of Broadway and 37th street was a notable improvement and took out of the market a valuable corner long unimproved, except for old buildings which were ranked as taxpayers. All of the upper portion of the structure was leased from the plans and many of the stores and offers have been made for every square foot of space in the building.

The Herald Square Building, in West 36th street, a twenty-two story structure is another example of a successful operation. While the location is exceedingly central, still the thought of erecting a structure of such size, in a side street, was inconceivable to many, though from the start tenants were found readily and the building was practically occupied upon completion.

With the exception of 42d street, which is in a class by itself on account of its stragetic location, 40th street, between Broadway and Sixth avenue, has been the scene of the most striking improvements. Here will be seen, at the corner of Sixth avenue the new Union Dime Savings Bank Building, a one-story building, though having the height of an ordinary three-story structure. Adjoining is the twelve-story office building, erected by the Tilden Investing Company, while immediately to the west towers the twenty-two story structure, built by Philip Lewisohn, on the site of the old Mendelssohn Glee Club Hall, though additional property was acquired, giving a frontage in 41st street. The Philip Lewisohn Building is the last word in modern construction of this type and is from designs by Maynicke & Franke, architects. In the south side of 40th street, directly opposite this structure is the World's Tower Building, which holds the record for being the tallest building on a plot of its size.

The development of this section of the city is only now in its infancy, for, in the main, properties are improved with old buildings erected many years ago. The success of the initial ventures, however, have clearly shown that a demand exists for large floor space, properly laid out.

What a new coat of paint on the exterior of a building will do to improve its appearance is clearly demonstrated by the Park Avenue Hotel, Fourth avenue and 33d street. What was a dingy structure up to last week is now transformed into a building of entirely different appearance. The change is particularly noticeable as the hostelry occupies the block south of the new Vanderbilt Hotel.

Unquestionably the closing of the Stock Exchange was the only move to be made under existing conditions and has done much to reassure the financial world. When it is considered that during the last four days of Stock Exchange activity there was a stock depreciation of more than $500,000,000, with every prospect of the shrinkage going further the wisdom of the move can be realized. Real estate surely would have been affected adversely had the recession in prices been allowed to continue.

The highways of Queens Borough were never in better condition than at the present time, but there are a few roads which need repairing, such as Merrick Road for a distance of about four miles this side of the Nassau County Line, Jericho turnpike, near the Nassau County Line, Metropolitan avenue, and Jackson avenue at Woodside. A letter from G. Howland Leavitt, Supt. of Highways of the Borough of Queens, has to-day been received by Walter I. Willis, secretary of the Queens Chamber, in which he states: "We have just completed the arrangements for resurfacing Merrick Road to the City Line with bitulithic asphalt. The plant will be installed this week and the work will be commenced by next week."

Effect of the War.

In common with the great majority of Americans, the various people connected with the real estate and building interests of New York have been at once stunned and excited by the suddenness and the vast scope of the European war. Never before in the history of the world have the lives and happiness of so many people been so profoundly affected by an event for which there was so little warning. Foreign statesmen and diplomatists were only too well aware that a calamity of this kind had been threatened ever since the Balkan war upset the balance of power in Europe and betrayed the narrow, selfish and petty motives which determined the Balkan policy of the eastern European Powers. But the vast majority of the population had become so much accustomed to talk about war and preparations for it and so many war scares had flashed in the newspapers without any actual result that the final appearance of war in its most hideous, costly and dangerous aspect caught them totally unprepared. In its effect upon the western world, it is comparable literally to a social earthquake, and before it is done it may well work results upon the traditional structure of international politics analogous to those which the earthquake of 1906 worked upon the city of San Francisco. It will not merely destroy life and property, and bring ruin and suffering to millions of individuals, but it may shake down dynasties, break nations or governments to pieces, and undermine the European international system, a system which has proved incompetent to protect the peoples, whom it was supposed to shelter, against a war, which will necessarily cost so much more than it is conceivably worth, is a system which has outlived its usefulness.

But at present American citizens are rubbing their eyes, buying extras and trying to find how the war will affect their own individual and collective interests. The United States is placed in a position analogous to that in which she was placed during the Napoleonic wars. She is only a great neutral power, and as long as the war lasts the industrial, commercial and moral life of the country will be determined by its vicissitudes. Some Americans will profit enormously from the abnormal course of business. Others will suffer severely from the same cause. As soon as the problem of ocean transportation is solved, as it undoubtedly will be, American merchants will be selling huge quantities of war and food supplies to Europe; and they will have an extraordinary opportunity of building up a larger export trade with South America, the Far East and other neutral territory. On the other hand, whole sections of the country such as the South, will be hard hit by the necessarily low price at which great staples like cotton will have to be sold. What kind of a balance will be struck cannot be predicted as yet, but it is evident that people, who are not in a position to profit directly from the war will have to exercise the utmost conservatism.

Such is the situation of the real estate and building interests of New York. They will have a great deal immediately to lose as a consequence of the war and comparatively little to gain. Indeed, the Record and Guide cannot imagine any source of profits to the real estate interests of New York unless its net result should be to make New York more important as a center of international finance and trade. But any such result, if it ever occurs, will be harvested slowly. In the meantime the lending and investing market will be entirely disorganized for a long time. There will be no money with which to invest in real estate, and there will be no money to lend for speculative building operations. All new building will have to be financed by people who have enough money of their own for the need of their enterprise. Thus building, which was showing some symptoms of a revival, will almost cease. Even the city proposes to shut down on the operations, to which it is already committed, such as the new Court House. Fortunately, however, work on the Subway will not have to be suspended—which would make a great difference to the laboring population of the city.

For the sake of all concerned, it is to be hoped that the war will be of short duration. If it does not last more than three months the destruction of life and property and the disorganization of business may not go so far as to be disastrous. If, however, neither side wins a quick and decisive victory, and if the war is continued throughout the winter, the immediate economic effects will be most deplorable. The result will be a destruction of capital and the piling up of a mountain load of debt, from which the business world may not recover for a generation. Of course, the debt will not be incurred by this country, which will have so far a substantial advantage over its foreign competitors; but the American industry will be obliged to pay a much heavier price for the money which it will need for future expansion. Fortunately, however, there is a good chance that the war will be over before winter comes. Its cost will be so hideously large that in all probability the belligerents will get tired of it and will take the first good opportunity of coming to some kind of terms.

Passing of "Newspaper Row."

Announcements made during the past few weeks indicate that in a few years the old Newspaper Row will have entirely disappeared. Two of the three newspapers which are still published on Park Row have indicated their intention of moving, so that it looks as if the World would soon be the only journal which has remained true to the classic home of the New York daily publishing business. Twenty-five years ago practically all New York newspapers had their offices on Park Row. The World, Tribune, Sun, Times, Journal, Herald, the old Daily News, the Press and the old Commercial Advertiser all published their papers from addresses on the Row. The Evening Post and Mail and Express were only a block away on Broadway. The first deserter was the Herald, which moved up to Greely Square over twenty years ago. The Times followed by appropriating Long Acre Square as its preserve. A little later Mr. Hearst bought a block facing on Columbus Circle, which he is only just improving with a modern building. The Sun is moving to another location downtown, and the Tribune has plans to follow the example of the Herald and the Times. In the meantime the Daily News had become extinct, the Commercial Advertiser had been transformed into the Globe and moved away. Only the World remains, and it may not remain indefinitely—in spite of its dome-crowned building. At any rate the newspaper business is hopelessly scattered—more so than in any other large city. A location up-town has been found to be very advantageous—particularly for morning newspapers. A journal can get far more advertising out of its building and its baseball and other similar services in case it is situated near the amusement center. An office up-town is also convenient for reporters, who are sent on assignments all over the metropolitan district.

Objections to New Law.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

In various statements reported as emanating from the Counsel of the State Factory Investigating Commission, the conflict or multiplicity of inspections is dwelt upon as the chief cause of dissatisfaction with the Labor Law and the unnecessary and objectionable features of the Law itself are passed over or belittled.

The City Authorities are working conscientiously to clear their Departments of conflict and criticism and will be aided or criticized as their work requires, but the objectionable features of the Labor Law must be removed and the enforcement of the Law as it relates to construction, fire prevention and sanitation must be by, and only by, the City Authorities. Conflict of authority has not produced the stagnation in real estate, it is not the cause of most of the expenses incurred under the Labor Law orders. While the conflict of authority is causing trouble, it is the law itself that is complained of and in which radical changes must be insisted upon.

There must be no cessation in work for this result. The nominations for candidates for the Legislature will soon be made and candidates must be selected for their attitude in regard to the revision of this law. Determination to have the Labor Laws properly amended must be shown by all interested up to and during the next meeting of the Legislature. No factory or real estate owner, no honest workman or workwoman must abate for one minute their work for a sensible law and sensible enforcement. Building operations stopped; existing buildings empty; factories curtailed or removed will kill capital and labor in every department covered and the existing Foreign complications must be offset by the calm, common sense action of our legislature so that our home industries may be preserved and strengthened.

We can usually depend on this as even the most radical among our law makers have a way of steadying up under acute conditions and the commission and its counsel have already shown that they have their "ear to the ground" regarding the popular opinion on the existing Labor Law.

But let no one interested be lulled into quietude by generalities or by the wise but temporary cessation of the enforcement of orders, or by the delay in promulgating the rules of the various committees of the Industrial Board. The Committees of this Board have prepared rules and had hearings on same because the law requires them to. They are earnestly endeavoring to reconcile the letter of the law itself with the actual conditions existing and it is a hard and thankless job, because no matter how well they work they are bound to work great hardship unless the law is greatly amended.

The dog days of summer and the deep anxieties produced by Foreign complications interfere with and tend to postpone deep thinking and careful action on this vital subject, but the wheels must go round just the same, the selection of candidates for our legislature and Executive will soon have to be made and on these depend our salvation and our lines of defense must be strengthened and our "mobilization" continue until peace is actually secured by wise and thoughtful legislation in regard to this law. ALFRED R. KIRKUS.

Over-Inspection.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

While much has been written about over-inspection of buildings and the conflict of authority still this is such an important subject that too much stress cannot be laid upon it. At the present time "orders" are issued by several different departments, all of which means delay and expense to the property owner. There should be one department which will have the supervision of buildings.

The Bureau of Buildings at the present time has all the plans and records of old buildings. The department has the experience and is therefore more qualified to take care of the fire prevention subject as it affects buildings, than any new department which would require at least four or five years to get the proper men and accumulate the necessary experience to do what the present Bureau of Buildings could accomplish more efficiently and without additional expense. Besides, if other departments continue to have parallel jurisdiction such as they have now, with the Bureau of Buildings in the matter of plans and construction, there is bound to be conflict of authority.

On the other hand, with the heads of departments working in harmony this conflict might be reduced to a minimum, as at present. The past teaches us, however, that heads of departments having co-ordinate jurisdiction do not work in harmony. Each desires to increase rather than circumscribe his authority, and it is only by limiting that authority that harmony can be obtained. It has been found that when anything goes wrong or there is a catastrophe each department is inclined to shift its responsibility.

The lesson taught by the lamentable Triangle Waist fire was not that the danger to the worker was from the construction of the building or its design, but rather from what I will designate as "Housekeeping" or, in other words, the management and arrangement within the building itself. As will be remembered, this fire caused tremendous agitation and prejudice against buildings used for manufacturing, though it was discovered later that the particular building itself was not at fault. The danger in all legislation of this kind is that we go off "half-cocked." We give undue prominence to that which is based on some particular seed impression instead of pure reason and analysis.

Too many people have the opinion that if a building is fire resistive, of the best type, that their lives and property are safe. This feeling of safety has been reflected by the various laws on the subject of buildings which laws seek to reduce the fire loss to lives and property in buildings namely by prescribing a construction which will not burn, and fire exits without much or any regard to the management in the building.

No laws have been enacted of any consequence up to the time the new labor law under discussion, which tried to protect the occupants by rules and regulations in regard to the internal management. This first attempt is a step in the right direction and should be given more prominence by our legislators than heretofore.

Fire Commissioner Adamson is to be commended and congratulated for the attempt he is now making to place the blame of fires due to carelessness on the individual responsible. Many ignorant people blame our building construction for the $200,000,000 annual fire loss in the United States. I think some of the blame could rest there, but when it comes to fire resistive buildings no structures in the world are as well built as those in the United States, New York in particular. In Europe frame buildings are practically unknown, due to the scarcity of timber, which would naturally reduce the hazard.

I naturally advocate that all buildings should be built fire resistive and that there always be adequate means of exit; also, that in most cases where a large number of workers are employed upon inflammable goods or where such materials are stored and the occupancy is large, that the premises should be sprinkled. If lives are to depend primarily upon the proper construction of buildings and upon the means of exit, I think the result will be disappointing; we will still have loss of life in fire resistive buildings due to the occupancy rather than to the building itself. Everything possible should be done to preserve life and property and the biggest step can be taken at the present time, in my opinion, is to have regulation and inspection under one head so that authority may not be divided.

COMMON SENSE.

Stability of Realty.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

That the war conditions may not of necessity cause a paucity of mortgage money, may be a fair postulation—if indications in this true instance prove the rule.

On Friday last, July 31st, the day on which the Stock Exchange closed its doors, a Wall street man called hastily at the downtown office of a Bronx Real Estate broker and excitedly wanted immediate communication with the mortgage department. While waiting the telephone call to the Bronx branch, he explained that an investment had been offered to him in a mortgage which he desired to accept and was urgent to convert the funds, lying in his bank, into this mortgage investment without a moment's delay.

"My bank may not remain solvent, who can tell, in these times. I have no fear that the real estate security can escape from my control so readily. I prefer the latter at times like this.

"FACT."

Important Decision.

The case of Durand and Equitable Trust Co. vs. Howard & Co., just decided by a divided bench of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals is bound to prove of more than passing interest to landlords and real estate operators.

In January last, when the United States District Court in order to conserve the rights of creditors generally appointed receivers for the solvent though financially embarrassed firm of Howard & Co., jewelers, located at Fifth avenue and 50th street, there was due and owing the landlord several months' rent in arrears. The receivers, represented by Wing & Russell, 14 Wall street, exercising their option to affirm or disaffirm the lease, elected to affirm it. It was contended that by so doing they became liable for all rent in arrears, or in the alternative subject to dispossess proceedings for the non-payment of such rent.

The court in holding that the receiver was not liable for the rent in arrears stated that the landlords in such cases had no greater right than creditors generally notwithstanding the provisions of the lease, and that to grant him such rights would in effect amount to preferring his claim to that of other creditors. It was argued that the failure to allow a landlord the right to evict would tend to seriously impair the market value of high class business property. The court did not comment on this point.

New York House Made Over.

One walks along the streets of New York and receives the fantastic impression that some giant architect has made for the city thousands of houses in replica. These dismal brownstone buildings are so like without, and alas! so like within, that one wonders how their owners know their home one from another. I have had the pleasure of making over many of these gloomy barracks into homes for other people, and last year I made one over for myself, says a writer in Harper's Bazar.

The house is narrow in the extreme, and the secret of its successful renaissance is plenty of windows and light color and mirrors—mirrors—mirrors. It has been called the "Little House of Many Mirrors," for so much of its spaciousness and charm is the effect of skillfully managed reflections.

The remarking of the house was very interesting. I tore away the ugly street stairs and centered the entrance door in a little stone-paved courtyard, framed with a high iron railing, bordered with box trees. Through the great green front door you enter the entrance hall, a cool apartment, of ivory-paneled walls and black and white marble floor. Opposite you, as you enter, there is a wall fountain with a background of mirrors. The only gay color in this hall is in the blue and gold Chinese rug. Everything else is white, cream, dark green and black.

A glass door leads to the inner hall and stairway, which I consider the best thing in the house. Instead of the usual steep and gloomy stairway here is a graceful spiral stair which runs straight up through the center—not the side of the little hall. On the second floor there is the drawing-room, a great softly colored room full of sunshine and light. The dominant color is rose. Back of the drawing-room is the dining-room, with walls and woodwork of flat gray. The pictures are set into the wall with gray moldings. The furniture is painted gray. The rug is a glorious Chinese weaving of rose and blue and dull yellow.

APPEALS TO OWNERS.

The New York Hardware Association Warns Against Fire Danger.

BORELL EVANS, chairman of the Fire Prevention Committee, of the National Hardware Association of the United States, has issued from his Philadelphia office, 505 Arch street, an appeal to all property owners to guard themselves against the fire danger. He points out some menaces to property which are frequently overlooked by managers. He classifies the dangers into six different heads and a summary, and announces that the National Fire Protection Association, of 87 Milk street, Boston, will advise upon request how to organize a local chapter of the great Fire Prevention Association. Referring to exposure hazard, he said this danger from surrounding property is a heavy charge in every average city insurance survey and rate amounting often to one-third of the whole charge. Study your location and your exposure hazard thereon and the reasonable means of bettering your own property (such as fireproofing doors and windows and outside walls, extending fire walls above the roof, non-combustible roofs, etc.) so as to minimize this physical exposure hazard and consequent insurance rate.

"As to construction—A large part of your insurance survey and rate is always based on deficiency in physical construction of your property. Study this (such as unprotected vertical and horizontal openings, too large areas undivided by fire walls, concealed spaces, etc.) and ascertain how they may be reasonably remedied, and how such improvements will reduce your insurance rate.

"Protection—The best located and constructed property in the world without adequate fire alarm and extinguishing facilities on the average ultimately suffers undue fire waste, either in buildings or contents or both. A cast iron stove won't burn and it is burning up contents constantly. Study the deficiencies of your property in this respect as items in your insurance survey and rate, and better them (by installing metal waste and ash cans, fire buckets, chemical extinguishers, automatic sprinkler or standpipe, etc.) and you may find the investment highly profitable in the reduced hazard and rate.

"Occupancy—Every business has inherent in it certain dangerous fire hazard characteristics. Study the nature of your business and properly care for and isolate materials or process which may unduly occasion or accelerate fires. Such action properly taken should certainly reflect itself in a reduced insurance rate.

"Virtually all property must be heated, lighted and ventilated these days, and all this equipment, in addition to special apparatus required by almost every business, has fire hazard. Study the character of your equipment thoroughly before purchasing, and better that which you now have—all of which should reflect reduction in your insurance rate.

"Management—Keep your property clean. Half of all American fire waste comes from careless accumulation of dirt and rubbish and disorder. Teach your people cleanliness and order and organize them to detect and extinguish fire and how to call the public fire department quickly when necessity requires.

"Each one of you can apply in your factory, warehouse, apartment, or home the above correctives, which constitute the essentials of fire prevention. You can also join any other good movements in community action to carry out the above program and to study and get prepared and enforced reasonable legal regulations whereby such correctives may be demanded in the law, and finally can back up your public officials in seeing that they are applied. Insurance will be reduced and your community cost in time will become lower in life, health and property loss.

SUBURBAN ACREAGE.

Steady Influx of Population to the Outlying Districts Which Are Rapidly Being Built Up.

The fact that much of the acreage in the suburban New Jersey counties, in Westchester County and in the Bronx has been developed and improved is the preponderating cause of the strong demand for home sites in Nassau County, Long Island. For many years before this county had good transit facilities the other suburban territories had them with the result that they were in demand by the investing public although they were no nearer Manhattan in distance, in fact further in some instances; but, the fact they were nearer in time was the magnet that drew homeseekers to them. Real estate men point out that while these various suburban districts are still attracting homeseekers to them the southern half of Nassau County, from Hempstead to Long Beach, is a powerful and youthful rival. Investors in Long Island real estate now have better opportunities than those of a decade ago did because the territory has been brought closer to Manhattan in point of time and because the overflow of population later from Manhattan to the suburbs is greater than it ever was in the past, with the result that suburban real estate has a better market.

According to the Census Bureau, New York City is now the largest municipality in the world in size of population. London has been a thousand years or more attaining its population while New York has reached a greater population in less than a century. Its geographical position is so commanding that real estate values in and around it are impelled to grow with the growth of population and demand for residential space. The greater city embraces 287 square miles, while London comprises only 117 square miles. All of London is densely populated while New York yet has ample room to expand.

There are three remarkable circumstances just now in connection with the movement of population into Nassau County. The first is the most modern means of transportation; the second is that the county is more readily accessible than some parts of the greater city; and, the third is that the tendency to remove from city apartments to individual suburban homes is greater among the middle class of population than it has been in the past. Building operations in Manhattan indicate that the wealthy class of population are going into apartments to reside in greater percentage than heretofore. In the Park avenue neighborhood, in Riverside drive and in the vicinity of the west side of Central Park costly apartments of from nine to fourteen rooms are being built and readily rented to the wealthy. Fine private house construction is practically nil.

The south shore of Nassau County, in the last ten years, has changed from a territory of farms to one of suburban homes completely. The latest parts of the county to figure in the housing of metropolitan population are Oceanside and East Rockaway and the influx in those places represents an overflow from Rockville Centre and Lynbrook respectively.

SEEKING MODEL TENEMENTS.
National Civic Federation Scouring the Country for Historical Data on Housing.

Every real estate dealer in New York City probably will be interested in the quest that the Industrial Economics Department of the National Civic Federation is making in connection with its survey of social and industrial conditions. It is being done for the welfare of all wage earners. To this end the department through President W. G. Matha, of the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Company, of Cleveland, O., has addressed itself to a large number of concerns asking for information about their specific establishments with particular reference to an outline which has been prepared as follows:

"The Industrial Economics Department of the National Civic Federation is conducting a survey of social and industrial conditions in the United States at the present time, as contrasted with those of about thirty years ago.

"In connection with it a special committee is making a study of employers' welfare work. This committee desires to learn what is being done for the welfare of employees in the broadest sense. In order to assist in preparing a reply which should overlook no essential point, we are sending out an outline of activities which are found in various industries and in public employments.

"It is desired also to learn the corresponding conditions in these respects about thirty years ago or as far back as your records or information may go within that period.

"Photographs (unmounted) are much desired for incorporation in the proposed permanent exhibit of the Welfare Department, which has for its purpose to provide standards applicable to different industries for those beginning such endeavors or desiring to extend lines already established. We should be glad to have such photographs available for reproduction as occasion may arise."

Buying in New Jersey.

Significant with the fact that June and July are usually dull months in suburban real estate buying, reports for operators and dealers in the New Jersey commuting zone around about Elizabeth, have been encouraging. While the sales have not been great in numbers as compared to transactions of other years, the buying has been of a variety that shows discrimination on the part of home seeker. The speculative element has been almost entirely eliminated and in consequence the total figure of each purchase has been correspondingly higher, so that the grand total in dollars in this section has very nearly equalled sales of past years.

The opening of the several new trolley lines from Elizabeth as a starting point has had its effect in bringing some remote districts in close touch with the city center. The recent additional appropriation by the City Council to plant trees and repave some of the important thoroughfares in outlaying districts has added force to the growth. Three new streets are now being brick paved in El Mora, one of which is a county highway leading to Plainfield.

Purchases on Long Island.

The central and southern parts of Nassau County, Long Island, were active contributors during the last week to the total of suburban real estate dealing adjacent to New York City. Most of the dealing in this country, which is immediately east of the city line, was in old established communities along the lines of electric transit, such as Hempstead, Floral Park, Oceanside and East Rockaway. Lynbrook, Rockville Centre and Freeport also displayed a satisfactory movement of real estate.

The dealing was about evenly divided between vacant and improved property. Home sites, especially in towns along the electrified branches of the Long Island Railroad and within twenty-five miles of New York, are in good demand, and many plots are being improved for occupancy.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

The real estate market showed strength this week not only on account of the volume of business transacted but on account of a demand for nearly all kinds of properties. Dwellings, business properties and building sites figured in the news. A row of nine lots near Claremont Park, in the Bronx, passed into the hands of builders for improvement with flat houses. Important, also, as affecting the building market was the announcement that the contract had been let for cutting up the former New York American League Baseball Park, comprising four blocks from Broadway to Fort Washington avenue, 165th and 168th streets, owned by the New York Institute for the Blind. At an estimated cost of about $400,000 the streets will be cut through, sewers laid, and the grading and curbing, etc., that is necessary will be undertaken in order to place the property in the market for building plots. The lower part faces the subway station and there has been considerable apartment house development in the immediate vicinity which may indicate that the ultimate improvement of this property will be along the same lines.

Country properties figured prominently in the business, the more important transactions concerning valuable acreage at Garrison, N. Y., and the old Mill Neck Club property at Oyster Bay.

While business in the main in New York City concerned small properties a number of the deals lacked the element of trade which has been the characteristic of the market for some time. This situation indicating, as it does, an outlay of cash by buyers may be generally viewed with optimism. Taken all in all, the week's trading is most encouraging and indicates that real estate remains the most stable and conservative of investments and is the last to become effected, if at all, by adverse conditions.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 18, as against 18 last week and 18 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 6, as compared with 4 last week and 4 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 12, as compared with 14 last week and 14 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 149, as against 129 last week, 16 having stated considerations totaling $368,620. Mortgages recorded this week number 77, involving $1,431,798 as against 85 last week, aggregating $1,960,258.

From the Bronx 5 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 14 last week and 9 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $1,803,441, compared with $736,056 last week, making a total since January 1 of $27,151,550. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $264,488, and the total from January 1, 1913, to Aug. 9, 1913, was $37,220,299.

City Options School Site.

The property at the northwest corner of Lexington avenue and 22d street, has been obtained under option of purchase by the city from the owners, the Wheeler estate, Magistrate P. T. Barlow, Henry H. Jackson, and the James McCullough Farr estate, as a site for a ten-story structure for the Manhattan Trade School for Girls, now at 209-213 East 23d street. The properties form a plot 75x100. The proposition was submitted to the Board of Estimate on July 30, and was laid over until its next meeting on August 27, when action must be taken if the city wants the properties, as existing leases expire on September 1.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the subject of installing heating systems, of any kind or make, properly in the situation upon which they are to perform their duties.

No system ever brought forth, or that ever will be invented, will in itself make up any lack of capacity in boiler, piping or radiating surfaces, or poor workmanship in erection.

We Guarantee Our Work.

We design complete heating plants, furnish working plans and specifications and co-operate with owners, contractors, and architects solely to insure the perfect operation of our product.

OBITUARY

THOMAS J. CREAMER, State Tax Commissioner, died on Tuesday at the Post Graduate Hospital, of an abscess in the throat. For half a century he had been prominent in local politics and identified with many important public improvements. He was associated with Mr. Andrew H. Green in forming Greater New York and introduced the bills creating Riverside and Morningside parks, the widening of Broadway from 32d to 59th st, and for a new charter for New York. Mr. Creamer was head of the Young Democracy that fought William H. Tweed and was active in various reform moves. He was Tax Commissioner under Governors Flower, Sulzer and Glynn.

MAX BERNSTEIN, a real estate operator of 781 Lafayette av, Brooklyn, with offices at 55 Liberty st, Manhattan, died on Saturday in a room at Grey's Hotel, Surf av and West 22d st, Coney Island.

JOHN H. KATHMEYER, 62 years old, a real estate operator of Brooklyn, died at his home, 167 Dean st, of Bright's disease.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

This week's auction market furnished several interesting transactions involving valuable properties sold under foreclosure. The Mutual Life Insurance Company, as plaintiff, became the owner of the Hudson Building, at 32 and 34 Broadway, through to 69 and 71 New street, a twelve-story office structure on a plot 53.3x200, which was sold for $825,000, more than $28,000 below the judgment. It is one of the oldest office buildings in the downtown section and was acquired by the Hudson Building Company in 1895. It is just south of the plot which is to be improved with an arcade by the Standard Oil Company. The Middletown Savings Bank, as plaintiff, bought the Barney Court Apartment at the northwest corner of Audubon avenue and 177th street for $135,000, as a result of an action brought against the New York Real Estate Security Company to cover a judgment of $145,627 and back taxes amounting to $4,017. An unusual transaction concerned the dwelling at 73 East 124th street which went to David Jacobson for $6,450. The judgment under which the sale was conducted amounted to over $12,000.

An important corner in the Pennsylvania Terminal district on a plot 82.6 x100 at the southwest corner of Sixth avenue and 31st street, formerly occupied by Mahler's Department store, is to be sold at foreclosure proceedings in the latter part of the month as the result of two actions. One is scheduled for Aug. 27, and the other for the following day. The judgment sought to be recovered is $23,223 together with taxes, etc., amounting to $5,081.

BOND ISSUES ON IMPROVED PROPERTIES

By S. W. STRAUS, of S. W. Straus & Company*

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for The American Real Estate Co.

WELL designed, well located and well operated office buildings are valuable and profitable classes of property, and bonds secured by such properties, under conservative precautions and restrictions, are safe investments. I doubt if there is any class of bonds in the investment market which contribute so much to our national prosperity, to the building up of our cities, to the improvement of our downtown districts and to the enhancement of property values, as office building bonds. We are driven by sheer force of economic necessity to build skyward. Old three and four story buildings, which have been depreciated until they are, practically speaking, liabilities rather than assets, must be torn down to make room for new, modern, fireproof office buildings mounting ten, fifteen and twenty stories into the air. The service which tenants now demand and receive in high class office buildings has made the newer structures increasingly attractive from a renting standpoint.

When Owner Must Improve.

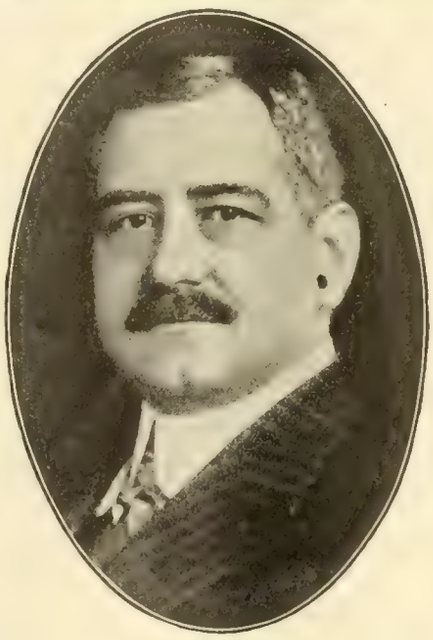
The owner of downtown property frequently finds himself in a position in which he must improve his land with a first class, modern building, or else see the return on his capital whittled down to the vanishing point. In normal times new industries are constantly forming, new fields for capital are constantly developing, and the demand for office space is one that must be constantly met. Owners are driven, therefore, to the erection of steel frame, fireproof office buildings. The question then arises: how may the construction of such a building be most profitably and conveniently financed?



Taking the situation by and large, however, there is no doubt that the issuance of bonds, maturing over a term of ten to fifteen years, is from many standpoints the most convenient and most profitable method of financing an office building. In many cities temporary building loans are common, replaced at a later date with a permanent loan. It may be safely said, however, that the plan of financing office building construction through the issuance of first mortgage bonds, secured by the property, is one which is enjoying a steadily increasing popularity. This is practically the only method of permanent financing which is generally applicable. It is needless to say, of course, that permanent financing has every advantage over temporary financing, and the office building owner who can schedule his obligations for ten or fifteen years in advance with accuracy is in the best position to get the highest efficiency out of his invested funds.

Confidence Necessary.

Without the confidence of the investor, the owner is helpless. Without the cooperation of the investment banker, the owner and the investor alike are helpless, since he is the middle man who alone can arrange the financing of the building under this method by the sale of the bonds.

I have the very strongest belief in office building bonds of the better grade. I have the heartiest contempt for office building bonds which are issued in an attempt to put up a 16-story building on a towering superstructure of mortgages piled high as the building itself, with the bond buyer contributing all the funds

*Excerpts from an address delivered at the Seventh Annual Convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, Duluth Minnesota, July 15.

but the handful of coppers which the promoter has advanced as his share of the ready cash.

There are cities which are over-supplied with offices. I have in mind one Western city in which the number of rentable offices was increased in one single year from 4,000 to more than 8,000. Several issues of office building bonds in that city went into default during the two years following. It is against such conditions as these that the investment banker must set himself firmly.

The investment banker must see that the bond issue is well made, well secured and amply protected. There is nothing inherent in office building bonds to prevent them from going into default. They must be protected by ample physical assets which safeguard the principal and by ample earning power, which insures the prompt payment of interest. Bond issues which do not conform to this standard of safety should be thrust into the outer darkness.

Safeguarding Clients.

To safeguard the interests of his clients, it is only necessary for the investment banker specializing in office building bonds to adhere to a few simple rules.

First, the building must be erected in response to a real rental demand in a city where real estate values are sound and stable and constantly growing as the result of normal, solid increase in population, and not as the result of booms or speculation, and the bonds must be a direct first mortgage on the property.

Second, the location must be such as to insure its constant rental.

Third, the equity representing the cash investment of the owner of the building must be sufficient to protect absolutely the interests of the bondholders.

Fourth, the margin of assured rental earning power over the annual interest charges must be ample.

Fifth, the mortgagor must be responsible.

Sixth, the bonds must mature serially, so that a portion of the loan is being paid off each year during its life, thus more than compensating for the depreciation or obsolescence of the building.

These are the standards of safety in office building bonds to which investors have been educated, and which investors today are demanding. Bond issues which conform to these requirements can be assured of prompt purchase by responsible investment banking houses, and prompt distribution to investors. Bonds which do not conform to these requirements were better never issued.

Reason for Losses.

Those instances of loss which have taken place have been, without exception, instances due to violation of the above rules. Violation of conservatism and the principles of sound finance must inevitably bring their own punishment. Where the loan is conservatively made and backed by well built, well managed property of ample value and ample earning power, there is no safer class of investment.

During the last ten or fifteen years many insurance companies have loaned money secured by mortgages on office buildings and the land, thus stamping them as investments of the most conservative character. If such a mortgage is divided up into a series of bonds, of course it loses nothing of its safety. Indeed, if the bonds mature serially, as they should in all cases, the safety of the loan is actually increased, because as the earlier bonds mature and are paid off, the margin of safety over and above the loan is constantly increasing, and the bonds of the final maturity are protected by a much larger equity than the earlier ones. Money market conditions frequently render it impossible for large banks, trust companies, or insurance companies to make long term mortgage loans of large size on office buildings. By dividing up the loan into bonds, it is disposed of without difficulty. It gives the investor with $10,000, with $1,000, or even $100, participation in a large mortgage suitable to the investment of a fund of the largest and most conservative institutions.

Another Aspect.

There is another aspect from the viewpoint of safety to office building bonds. We will suppose that a given piece of land is worth $800,000, the building occupying the site costs $1,000,000, and a first mortgage bond issue stands against this property in the sum of $1,000,000. It would be protected by an equity of $800,000. The property must depreciate to that extent before the bondholders' interests would be in danger. It is obvious, at least to me, that such an investment is safer and better protected than in a mortgage loan of the most conservative character where the property worth $15,000 secures a loan of $5,000. The margin of safety here is three to one, but the equity is only $10,000, and, of course, the equity of $10,000 will be much more quickly impaired than the one of $800,000.

Of recent years the very common practice of making long term leases on downtown property has brought about the issuance of bonds secured by buildings and leaseholds. The lease must run for a long period of years at a fixed and not excessive ground rental and be fair to the lessee in every particular. In a leasehold bond issue the income from the first floor alone should be sufficient to pay ground rent, taxes and insurance, leaving the income from all floors above the first to pay the remaining operating expense, interest and the serial maturities of the bonds. Summing up in regard to leasehold bonds, such a loan may be fully as safe as bonds secured by building and land when the proper conditions are complied with.

PREVENTING FIRES.

Tenants May Avoid Conflagrations By Use of Furniture Designed to Reduce Hazard.

HOW long will we continue to build 'fireproof' office, loft, warehouse and factory buildings, and continue to equip them with fixtures and furniture of a decidedly inflammable nature, and then wonder why disastrous fires originate with their consequent loss of property and often life"? was recently asked by a well known building manager. "The Potter Building fire is still vivid in the memory of many New Yorkers, and there have been others of a nature equally as serious. In the case of the Potter Building, the structure itself was left practically intact, so much so that reconstruction was easy and safe, but the contents consisting of much valuable merchandise were completely destroyed.

"Recently the Fire Prevention Bureau and other departments have made many provisions and rules with the idea of fire prevention, but the occupants of lofts and offices could do much to lessen the fire hazard by the installation of furniture and fixtures that would reduce this hazard to a greater extent than all Fire Prevention Bureau rules as yet promulgated.

New Ideas Introduced.

"To make buildings of this type fireproof or fire resistive a great amount of time and money has been expended in planning and construction, and it is possible with but little additional expense to provide them with such fire-resistive furnishings that would go a long way toward the protection of the lives of the tenants and employees they house, as well as the protection of valuable merchandise and records. New ideas and improvements in fire-resistive and fireproof fixtures are constantly being introduced and they can be installed at little additional cost when compared with the reduced insurance premium and the feeling of security from fire risk.

"In lofts, warehouses, and stores, shelving could be of metal or other fire-resistive material, and where the contents of these shelves are of an inflammable nature they could be provided with doors of the same material; or if required to be glazed, wired glass fastened with metal could be used. Instead of having dark closets and wooden wardrobes, metal clothes lockers could be used. They are far more sanitary and are vermin proof.

"Tables, chairs, desks and benches, are now made of metal or other fire-resistive material. In fact, furniture for all uses is now being manufactured and on the market at prices only slightly in advance of that built of first quality wood. This furniture may be finished in such a manner that it is hard to distinguish it from wood except by touch.

Fireproof Partitions.

"Partitions, instead of being built of wood, should be constructed of asbestos, plaster blocks, terra cotta blocks or other fireproof or fire resistive material, and may be plastered or not as their location demands, and where required to be glazed, the material should be wired glass set in metal or kalameined sash and frames. All waste and rubbish should be kept in metal receptacles, provided with covers. There are many such appliances on the market for all purposes. Oily waste should be kept in metal receptacles raised at least twelve inches from the floor.

"Where it is necessary to keep on hand excelsior and similar highly inflammable material necessary for packing it should be kept in a separate room provided for the purpose with metal covered doors and frames.

"Screens, curtains and hangings of an inflammable nature have no place in a business building except where shown as samples.

"The storage of paints, oils, varnish or grease, in a separate room or closed, provided for the purpose and equipped with fireproofed partitions and self-closing fire-resistive doors, will eliminate the danger which often arises from the storage of these highly inflammable materials in open spaces where a carelessly thrown match will cause a fire that can do great damage.

"The Bureau of Fire Prevention has made rules regarding smoking or carrying lighted cigars, cigarettes or pipes into buildings where there is material of an inflammable nature exposed and if employers themselves would set the example the employees would surely be more careful to obey this rule and many fires originating from carelessly thrown cigar or cigarette ends or pipe embers would not have occurred.

"Fires will always be a hazard, but by co-operation with existing bureaus in compliance with the existing rules and the installation of such devices, furniture and fixtures known to be fireproof or fire resistive much of the danger and loss arising from a fire in a mercantile building can be eliminated."

FIRE RESISTING MATERIALS.

Members of the Committee Which Formulated the Tentative Regulations.

The tentative regulations for the use of fireproof and fire-resisting materials now under consideration by the Industrial Board, were prepared by a committee of which Richard J. Cullen, member of the Industrial Board is chairman, with the following other members: C. K. Mallory, engineer of construction and maintenance, Solvay Process Co., Syracuse; James H. Haste, manager Kodak Park Works, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester; John Gill, Bricklayers' Union, New York City; E. A. Tredwell, Real Estate Board, New York City; J. O. Hammitt, Chief, Bureau of Fire Prevention, New York City; P. J. Gillespie, Chief Engineer, State Fire Marshal's Department, Albany; John H. Derby, Fire Prevention Engineer, New York City, representative of the National Fire Protection Association; F. J. T. Stewart, superintendent of Board of Fire Underwriters, New York City; Miss Frances Perkins, Executive Secretary, Committee on Safety (Fire Prevention), New York City; William Guerin, former Chief, Bureau of Fire Prevention, New York City; George W. Olvany, Real Estate Board, New York City. Special Committee on Definitions—Richard J. Cullen, chairman; James P. Whiskeman, Harold Perrine, F. H. Dewey.

Elevator Rules.

The elevator regulations were prepared by the board's committee on dangerous machinery, of which Mr. Flaesch, who lives at Unadilla, is chairman. Other members of the committee are: George C. Lefever, efficiency engineer, Delaware & Hudson Railroad Company, Watervliet; Matthew E. Kennedy, S. & T. Kennedy Valve Company, Elmira: C. L. York, Safety Engineer, General Electric Company, Schenectady; M. H. Christopherson, Production Manager, Otis Elevator Co., 11th avenue and 26th street, New York City; Arthur Williams, New York Edison Company, Elm and Duane streets, New York City (president American Museum of Safety); John P. Coughlin, 135 Adelphi street, Brooklyn (Organizer International Association of Machinists); James Wilson, Secretary District Council of Machinists, 35 Nassau street, New York City; John J. Munholland, business agent, Pattern Makers' Association, New York City; Jesse Walker, Textile Workers' Union, Cohoes, New York; John F. McGraw, manufacturer (McGraw, Beniamin & Hays), Rochester; William H. Hill, the Crosby Co., Buffalo, New York.

General Provisions.

Under the proposed regulations fire-resisting partitions must extend through the wood floors to the underside of the timbers, to which they shall be secured, and shall form with the fire-resisting doors, floors and ceilings an unbroken fire-resisting protection separating the stairway and exit passageways from the non-fire-resisting portions of the building.

In general, fire-resisting partitions shall be self-supporting or safely supported on fireproofed steel or reinforced concrete beams, girders and columns, or upon wood beams, girders and columns made fire-resisting by approved fire-resisting materials.

In special cases, in existing buildings, where the fire-resisting partitions are not in a vertical line, they may rest upon wood beams and girders, provided, that all the header and trimmer beams supporting said partitions are made fire-resisting by approved fire-resisting materials on that portion where the extreme fibre stress exceeds three-quarters of the safe allowable working stress.

Wire glass not less than ¼-inch thick will be permitted in fire-resisting partitions and doors when set in stationary fireproof sash and frames, not exceeding, however, 360 square inches for any single pane of glass and not exceeding 720 square inches on any story. Provided that in each case, the approval for the use of wire glass is given by the Commissioner of Labor.

Standard Tests.

Outlines of the methods of conducting tests to determine the fire-resisting qualities of various materials and forms of construction used in building practice are appended to the tentative rules. These outlines are given in full detail, as to the construction of the test huts or chambers, the method of conducting the tests and recording the results of same, in order to fully set forth for immediate use a method of procedure to be followed for the purpose of obtaining the approval of any new material or form of construction.

However, the Industrial Board may recognize tests and methods of testing, other than those specified, when the same are of equal severity, and when duly authenticated records of such tests are submitted. To be acceptable, such other tests shall have been arranged on scientific lines and conducted at laboratories of recognized standing by disinterested scientific men. All reports of such tests must state the facts and occurrences, and shall be accompanied with tables, diagrams, illustrations and a log of the test in sufficient detail to give an accurate description of the test specimen, a complete record of the skilled conduct of the test and the effect of the test upon the construction under observation. A list of the professional men in attendance shall accompany each report.

The appendix also contains lists of approved floor and roof and partition constructions.

Cheap Materials Encouraging Building.

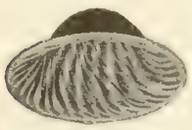
Architects and contractors have more time just now to prepare plans and carry out contracts than in periods of activity. In discussing the subject a prominent architect expressed himself regarding the prices of building materials and the cost of labor, that the person who intends to build a home and has the funds with which to do it can build it now to far better advantage than when a boom comes at a much less cost and with greater care and attention on the part of builders in all their various branches. This is the period when every manufacturing concern which realizes its need for new equipment, or the enlargement of its plant, and has the means available, should perform the work.



There are many concerns and individuals who are intending to erect homes and business buildings, but they are waiting. When they do undertake to build, no doubt materials and labor will cost them considerably more, and they will find greater difficulty in obtaining the same attention in construction work as could be had now. Almost over night a change in business could be brought about if those who are in a position to do this building would undertake it now. There is no doubt but that this is the time when all our municipalities should push their improvements in order to get the benefit of lower rates in materials now prevailing.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Concentrates Light Rays.

ILLUSTRATED herewith is a reflector that has several important innovations that the ordinary reflector does not possess. The idea is to so control light rays as to make them more efficient without giving eye-strain. The principle is very simple. It seeks to follow the diffusion of the light waves and to radiate rather than to project them. This is accomplished by a corrugated mirror which is the only surface which reflects the light rays thrown against it on exactly the same angle as it strikes this surface. The light rays are sprayed back, so to speak. They are made by the National X-Ray Reflector Co., of 12 East 39th street.

Paint and Galvanized Iron.

AN old painter was discussing, the other day, some old kinks that he knew, and among them were a few secrets about when to and when not to paint galvanized iron. It seems that galvanized iron should never be painted until it has stood to the weather for a year or so. If it is necessary to paint galvanized iron before a reasonable weathering has been possible, the surface to be painted should be treated with a coat of liquid strong enough to cut the grease or galvanizing so as to give the paint a hold. Where the finish demands a coat of paint it may be prepared with this formula:

Take two ounces of copper chloride, copper nitrate and sal ammoniac, all to be dissolved in one gallon of soft water, preferably. Then add two ounces of muriatic acid. Mix in a wooden vessel and apply with a broad bristle brush, one coat. When dry the surface may be painted. No paint or varnish will scale from this surface. A gallon of this wash will coat about 25 to 30 squares of 100 feet each. It is inexpensive and easily applied. At first it is black, but this turns gradually to a grayish color. Copper acetate will do the work just as well as the other mixture, six ounces to the gallon of water. A film of black copper oxide is deposited on the surface and to this any good paint will readily adhere. Copper acetate is merely an acid in which copper has been soaked. The Government specifies for the purpose simply strong vinegar, while some master painters advise and use strong ammonia water, allowing it to dry on, and then painting over it.

Foot Control Garbage Tank.

ANYTHING that will permit a person to avoid touching a garbage receptacle while pumping refuse into it should prove popular and for that reason the device shown in the illustration is worthy of note. This contrivance is an improvement upon the garbage tank set flush with the walk, floor or lawn because it affords a means for opening it without the necessity of the hands coming in contact with the device in any way. It is done entirely by foot power. It is also designed so that waste paper can be burned in it.

Return Draft Fireplace.

HERE is a combined ventilator and fireplace for any room in the house. It is made by the Rathbone Fireplace Manufacturing Company of Grand Rapids, Mich. It will be seen that the fire pot, flues and ash pan are encased in an iron jacket, forming an air chamber. When the firepot A and the flues B become heated before the 30 square feet of radiating surface over which the cold air entering openings at either side of the base E passes, they heat and throw into the room through register F a constant circulation of warm air, thus thoroughly ventilating as well as heating the room in which the fireplace has been installed.

In starting the fire in this fireplace the damper is opened and the blower put on until the flames come up freely through the fuel. It is then removed and the damper is closed. When the damper is open the products of combustion pass directly up into the smoke pipe, as in the ordinary direct draft grate, but if closed the hot gases impart their heat to the iron surfaces over which they travel. This heat, in turn, creates a draft which draws the cold air from the floor and returns it comfortably heated.

Pedestal Urinals

CONSIDERABLE attention is being given by fixture manufacturers to the subject of improving, if possible, the style and adaptability of lavatory accessories and among the latest is that being introduced to the trade by Thomas Maddock's Sons Co., Trenton, N.J. This urinal is shown in the accompanying illustration. Its distinguishing features are perfect syphonage and proof against clogging due to ordinary refuse that finds its way into fixtures of this sort in public places. The latter fact alone would seem to make it appeal strongly to owners and operators of apartment houses, hotels, clubs and other places where the cost of keeping open the drain pipes in lavatory fixtures, and especially in urinals, is an important item. The manufacturers also aver that the material that is used in making these urinals will not craze. It is the crazing of the ordinary surface material in these fixtures that permits the admittance of acids beneath the surface which soon discolor the fixture and make the lavatory unsightly.

Polishing Brass Fittings.

POLISHING of brass fittings, like screws, knobs, hinges, etc., may be easily accomplished by boiling them for half an hour in an aluminum vessel. The dirt, grime and grease comes to the surface leaving the articles bright and clean. A little rubbing with a dry cloth gives them a brilliant and permanent shine.

Portable Power Buffer.

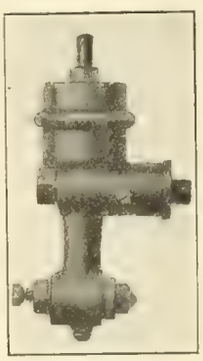
BUILDING managers can save in the cost of metal polish, labor and polishing cloths if they will look into the merits claimed for an electrical portable buffing machine that is being introduced on the market by the Stow Manufacturing Company of Binghamton, N. Y. The illustration tells the story as far as its application is concerned.



The device consists of a one-eighth horse power motor, a long, flexible shaft, champ spindle and two buffing wheels. All that is required is to hook the socket into one of an ordinary electrical light bulb and then turn on the power at the business end of the contrivance. The buffing wheels are applied to the sign or surface to be polished and time is saved by the wholesale, according to the manufacturers.

Mercury Control of Gas Lamp.

CONTROL of gas lighting at a distance is made possible, according to the General Gas Light Co., of 44 West Broadway, which is introducing a mercury valve which it claims solves the problem of distance control of gas lighting beyond the simple chain-pull method. The valve shown in the accompanying illustrations is designed especially for use on lamps where the piping used beyond an easily reached point is exclusively supplying Humphrey indoor or outdoor Nos. 30 or 50 lamps, and where a by-pass cock may be inserted in the line. This valve is made in one size, and without adjustment or change will operate on any service with a pressure from 20 tenths to 60 tenths.

A mercury valve for each lamp attached to the fittings and in the same manner as the ordinary removable single pull cock valve on the regular Humphrey Nos. 30 and 50 lamps in addition to a by-pass cock to be inserted in the line supplying one or one hundred lamps comprises the entire equipment for an installation.

The valve and its operation is simple. The gas supply to the lamp is obstructed by a small inverted cup sealed in mercury. All at pressures below 18 tenths this seal is maintained, shutting off the supply at this point. Any pressure above 18 tenths will raise the cup, permitting gas to pass to the burners which are adjusted for operation at the normal pressure available within the wide range from 20 to 60 tenths. When the lamp is shut off the pilot, located in back of the mercury seal, operates under 10 tenths pressure. The manipulation of the gas supply to furnish sufficient gas to maintain the pilots under 10 to 12 tenths pressure or to supply the burners at normal pressure is the function of a simple by-passed stop-cock inserted at some convenient point on the riser or on the line of pipe supplying the lamps.

St. Joseph's Church, Pacific Street, Brooklyn, Embraces Beauty of Architectural Design, Together with Splendid Workmanship.

AMONG the many notable churches of all denominations, in the Borough of Brooklyn, the recently completed St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church stands out as a worthy example. Architecturally, both the exterior an interior strictly adheres to the style and traditions of the denomination, and the construction of the edifice evidences splendid workmanship, a careful study of the specifications, and the intent of the architect.

Francis J. Berlenbach, Architect.
INTERIOR OF ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH.

St. Joseph's church fronts in Pacific street, near Vanderbilt avenue, extends through to Dean street, and covers a plot 127 x 207 feet. The building proper is 88 feet wide with a width across the transepts of 127 feet. The structure is built of pink granite and a grey brick manufactured of a specially imported clay and the ornamentation of the facade is of full glazed, polychrome terra cotta. The construction is thoroughly fireproof throughout and of approved design.

The church was designed and erected under the personal supervision of Francis J. Berlenbach, architect, of 260 Graham avenue, Brooklyn, who has designed a number of the borough's notable church buildings.

The John H. Parker Co., 315 Fourth avenue, N. Y. C., was the contractor, and it is largely due to the care and thoroughness of this company that Brooklyn's reputation as a borough of fine churches is advanced.

A Roman Facade.

The design of the facade is strictly Roman and is carried out to the most minute detail. The portico in front of the main entrance is reached by a series of granite steps and a terrace. It has a vaulted ceiling of Guastavino tile, supported by massive piers and columns of polished granite. Above this portico the front has been treated as one unit, with bold pilasters and engaged columns and with a heavy cornice and gable which is richly ornamented in relief and inlaid with Paonazzo marble. This central motif forms a natural frame and setting for the large nave window. The front is flanked on both sides by twin towers, with belfries and lanterns, which rise to a height of 176 feet above the curb.

Entrance to the church proper is through three sets of large double doorways placed directly opposite to three similar sets of vestibule doors and give openings in excess of the combined capacity of the five aisles of the church. A large vestibule extends the full width of the nave and is wainscoted in panels of solid Sienna marble with a floor of marble mosaic. A doorway from this vestibule leads into the westerly tower, which contains an iron stairway with marble treads and landings, which, in turn, leads down to the basement and up to the gallery floor. The east tower contains the bapistry on the first floor. Between the bapistry and the auditorium is a set of solid ornamental bronze grilled gates of beautiful workmanship.

The nave is 44 feet wide and 69 feet high with side aisles 19 feet wide and 31 feet high. Across the transepts the interior dimension is 122 feet. The nave is 168 feet deep from the interior of the north end wall to the apse wall.

The sanctuary is 40 feet deep with semi-circular apse and side altar niches. Two semi-circular niches are set in the northerly wall forming shrines. In the auditorium are five aisles with floors of Sienna marble mosaic with ornamental borders. The floor of the sanctuary is of similar material.

The walls of the auditorium are wainscoted in panels to a height of 7 feet and the sancturay to a height of 11 feet.

Marble Columns.

The arcade columns are of polished marble with richly carved capitals and support the arcade arches which have moulded and carved architraves and paneled soffits. A heavy cornice separates the arcade from the clerestory and from this cornice rise the pilasters which carry the ceiling of the nave. This ceiling is elaborately paneled and enriched with carvings in relief. The organ gallery has received a similar treatment and is elaborated with carved ends and divisions.

All lighting fixtures, the sanctuary lamp and candleabra are of solid cast and candleabra are of solid cast bronze of beautiful design and workmanship and harmonize perfectly with the architecture and decorations of the interior.

The baldacchino of the main altar is of Roman classic style after "Vignola" and rises to a height of 45 feet from the sanctuary floor. It is built of solid sections of Carrara marble of the finest texture. It has four arcades and is supported by four fluted columns with elaborate capitals, resting on solid pedestals. The entablatura and pediment consists of architrave, frieze and cornice with dentils and ornamental brackets.

Four angels with trumpets are placed at the four corners of the dome. The cupola is spherical in form seven feet in diameter and is crowned with supported bases and fluted columns with enriched capitals, architraves, frieze and cornice, the whole surmounted by a bronze cross equipped with electric lights. A full size statue of St. Joseph is erected in the lantern.

The main altar, erected under the baldacchino is carried out in the same style. The mensa is adorned with a central panel of the "Last Supper" after Leonardo da Vinci, in high relief on either side of which are placed ornamental panels. The tabernacle is enriched with high relief carvings and panels surrounded with mosaic and gold plated door.

Altars of Marble.

The two side altars in the sanctuary and the two side altars in the transepts, the pulpit and sanctuary railing are all of the finest marble, elaborately carved and further enriched with panels of marble mosaic in design. These marble altars baldacchino, pulpit, baptismal font railing and in fact all of the marble work was especially carved in Italy. The mural paintings and decorations and the stained glass memorial windows were designed by Alexander F. Locke and executed and erected under his supervision and direction.

Prizes Awarded for Highway Papers.

The Barber Asphalt Paving Co. has announced the awards for the competition recently held among engineering students on the subject, "Asphaltic Materials for Highway Construction." The company has awarded prizes of $100 each to the following contestants: Frederic O. X. McLoughlin, of New York City, a student at Columbia University; Harry Schindler, of Brooklyn, N. Y., Cornell University; B. J. Fletcher, of Parrott, Ga., University of Georgia; John W. Hill, of Chicago, Ill., University of Illinois; Robert S. Johnson, of Ireton, Iowa, Iowa State College; M. V. Holmes, of Kansas City, Kans., University of Kansas; F. P. Gilbert, of Beverly, Mass., Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Harold P. Lalonde, of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., University of Michigan; Benjamin Wilk, of Virginia, Minn., University of Minnesota; Alvin C. Smith, of Lyons, Neb., University of Nebraska; O. H. Gosswein, of St. Louis, Mo., Purdue University; Alfred A. Berkowitz, of New Britain, Conn., Sheffield Scientific School, and W. J. Campbell, of Cohoes, N. Y., Syracuse University. The competition which was for the purpose of turning the attention of engineering students to street and road construction as a promising field for future endeavor, was judged by E. J. Mehren, editor of the Engineering Record, and H. P. Gillette, editor of Engineering and Contracting.

Results of Fire Tests.

The British Fire Prevention Committee has issued a volume recording the results of its earlier fire tests with partitions, the results of the test being presented in tabular form, which facilitates comparison and makes the record particularly useful for reference purposes. These earlier tests, which were conducted between 1898 and 1905, have been forgotten by many, yet they deal with many materials used to-day in respect to which particulars may be valuable. The seventeen partitions dealt with in the report are grouped according to their classification under the British Fire Prevention Committee's Standards of 1903. They vary in thickness from 2 in. to 5 1-2 in., but for modern everyday uses those of from 2 in. to 3 1-2 in. thickness merit primary attention. Among these a 2 1-2 in. porous terra-cotta partition obtained the two and a half hour classification of affording "full protection," and a 3 1-8 in. pumice slab partition the classification of affording "partial protection" on a two-hour test. The fire tests are run up to temperatures of about 2,000° F., and are followed by the application of water under pressure.

Skyscrapers in Old Rome.

There were skyscrapers in old Ostia, a part of ancient Rome—buildings seventy to ninety feet high, in the opinion of Professor Arnaldo Cervesato, who is studying the ruins of the Roman Campagna. He said in a recent interview in the New York American: "It is not too much to say that Ostia bore a striking resemblance, both architecturally and commercially, to the river-front and downtown section of New York. Of course I do not mean to say Ostia boasted a structure comparable in any way to the Woolworth or Singer Buildings, but my excavations prove the amazing fact that Ostia was composed almost entirely of buildings between seventy and ninety feet high."

Not Too Many Signs.

The unauthorized placing of "To Let" or "For Sale" signs upon properties in charge of a fellow broker should never occur, nor the posting of numerous signs, even if permitted to do so, as these practices handicap the efforts of the owner and every broker represented and awaken the ridicule of the public against the entire real estate fraternity.

In addition to its being a dishonorable act a member of a real estate board, it being in part a fraternal organization, cannot consistently seek to secure information concerning a deal of a fellow broker or make use of that which may come to his knowledge accidentally, for the purpose of eliminating the man who has begun the deal, in order to close it himself or to endeavor to interest his customer in another property.

If the commission which it is usual to charge in the locality in which the broker is operating is a fair one to the owner and broker alike, each broker owes it to himself, to his other clients as well as to his fellow brokers to maintain the rate.

Newtown Creek Improvement.

Capt. Frederick Russell, Chairman of the Commerce Committee, and Walter I. Willis, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, were present at a conference with Colonel S. W. Roessler at the United States Army Engineer's office to take up the matter of the further improvement of Newtown Creek. About fifty representatives of large factories in Queens and Brooklyn were present. At the present time Newtown Creek has a depth of 18 ft. at low water. The Queens Chamber of Commerce is desirous of securing at least 20 or 22 ft. of water at low tide, to enable large boats to bring their cargoes direct to factories situated on this stream. One factory in Queens, which received 150,000 tons of copper ore by boat from South America last year, could have saved over $125,000 in lighterage, stevedore and other charges, if they could have brought these boats direct to their docks. The Chamber of Commerce also urges that the United States Government take over the jurisdiction of Dutch Kills Creek, a tributary to Newtown Creek; and that this stream be dredged to at least 18 ft. in order that car floats can be conveniently brought to the docks of the Degnon Terminal Company, which is spending millions of dollars in the improvement of the adjacent territory for large factories.

Foundations for Transit Line.

Oscar Daniels has a regiment of excavators and concrete masons at work along White Plains avenue, all the way to the Mount Vernon line, putting in the foundations for the elevated structure which is to give rapid transit to the Williamsbridge section. Reports of real estate activity ought to be coming from that direction soon.

New West Street Building.

Arthur M. Duncan, 320 Fifth avenue, has started preliminary plans for a store and office building to be erected at 350 West street for William E. Aiken, 287 West street. The number of stories is undecided.

Figuring for Richmond Court House.

The city is taking estimates until August 25, for the new court house to be erected at St. George, Staten Island. The building will be four stories in height, fireproof, about 150x150 feet square with a facade of light brick and limestone. Carrere & Hastings, 225 Fifth avenue, are the architects. About twelve contractors are estimating on the work.

Figuring for Colony Clubhouse.

Delano & Aldrich, 4 East 39th street, will take bids on the general contract about September 1, for the new clubhouse at the northwest corner of Park avenue and 62d street, which the Colony Club is to erect at a cost of about $450,000. The exterior materials will be of brick and marble. The height will be six stories, 100x125 feet. Mrs. Frank Griswold is chairman of the Finance Committee.

200 Residences at Bergen Beach.

M. Daua Morrell, 1201 Pennsylvania avenue, N. W. Washington, D. C., architect, has completed plans for two hundred residences, costing $1,750 each, to be erected at Bergen Beach, Brooklyn. The buildings will be of poured concrete, 1½ stories in height. It is expected that work on ten of the residences will be started shortly. The architect represents the company who will do the building.

South Brooklyn Improvement.

Maynicke & Franke, architects, 25 East 26th street, are preparing plans for a group of eight buildings to be erected in South Brooklyn in the Bush Terminal section. They will each be built of reinforced concrete, ten stories in height and occupy plots 280x500 feet. The estimated cost of each building is $700,000. These buildings are to be built for and will be occupied by Montgomery Ward Company, Chicago, Ill. Active operations will be started very soon and it is proposed to erect the buildings in groups of two at a time.

PLANT FOR ELEVATOR SUPPLY COMPANY

Maynicke & Franke, Architects.

HOBOKEN PLANT FOR ELEVATOR SUPPLY & REPAIR CO.

AMONG the interesting industrial developments now in course of construction is the new plant being erected, from designs by Maynicke & Franke, architects, 25 East 26th street, on Hudson Boulevard, Boulevard East, Willow avenue and 16th street, Hoboken, N. J., for the Elevator Supply and Repair Co., 111 West 40th street, Manhattan. The construction work is being done by E. P. Decker and the estimated cost is between $250,000 and $300,000. The plant is divided into three units, the foundry, office building and machine shop. There is a large shipping yard in front of the premises and direct connection with the railroad will be had by means of a siding which will extend in front of the shipping platform. In front of the office building a plot of considerable size has been laid out as a garden.

New Building for W. R. Hearst.

Plans have been completed by J. C. Green, architect, 103 Park avenue, for the construction of a twenty-five story brick and stone office building in Columbus Circle. The building will be erected by the Veronica Realty Corp. (W. R. Hearst), and will contain the offices and plant of the New York American and other Hearst publications. The building covers the entire plot bounded by Columbus Circle, Central Park West, Broadway and West Sixty-first street. At present a three-story building will be built containing stores on the first floor and basement, with direct access to the subway. The twenty-five story tower will be erected at a later date. The project is estimated to cost well over $1,000,000.

New Quarters for Pictorial Review.

Renwick, Aspinwall & Tucker, architects, 320 Fifth avenue, are preparing plans and specifications for an office and loft building to be erected at 216-220 West 39th street. The building, which will be built of brick, limestone and terra cotta, is owned by Julius Kayser (glove manufacturer), 45 East 17th street, and has been leased for a term of years to the Pictorial Review Co., 222 West 39th street. The new building will be twelve stories in height and will cover a plot 60x100 feet. It is planned to call for estimates about September 1, 1914.

Large Mid-town Contract Awarded.

Kenn Well Contracting Co., 12 Elm street, N. Y. C., has received the general contract for the construction of a converter station at 117-119 West 39th street for the New York Edison Co., 130 East 15th street. The building will be of brick and limestone, six stories in height covering a plot 50x100 feet. The plans for this project were prepared by W. Weissenberger, Jr., 55 Duane street, architect for the N. Y. Edison Co., and the work will proceed under his supervision. The estimated cost of the building is about $250,000.

OFFICE SYSTEM.

Best Method of Listing Properties—What the Sales Book Should Show.

In these days of keen competition, do you, as a business man, ever stop to figure what it costs you to do business? Every one of us can sell property and take in a few hundred—or a few thousand—dollars as our commissions, but at the end of the year, then what? Have we any of those thousands left?

We know the manufacturer must have a cost system, whether he manufactures cameras or automobiles, else he would soon be in bankruptcy, but the most of us are like the old-time farmer; we take our earnings, pay some of our bills, and if we have a couple of hundred dollars left at the end of the year, we call that our profit and let it go at that.

One man says he can afford to sell property for one per cent. commission. Another says he must have three per cent., but do either of them actually know just what it costs them to do business?

In the first place, what percentage of the commission on a given piece of property can we afford to spend to get the listing of that property? That, of course, depends somewhat on the class of property, but in our own office, where the number of sales are about equally divided between farms and city homes, we allow our salesmen one-sixth of the commission for securing a listing that is sold within a year, irrespective of who makes the sale, the listing commission to be paid when the sale is made. Inasmuch as he gets no pay for making the listing unless it is sold, he will work harder to keep the listing price and terms down.

In the ten months on which I base my figures we have spent on an average 6½ per cent. of the commission charge on the properties listed to secure these listings, to which cost must be added the proportionate share of overhead expenses which will bring the cost up to approximately ten per cent. of the commission charged as a fair estimate of what it actually costs to get the average listings.

Filing Method.

When the listing is once secured, the question arises as to the best method of filing. I believe you will all agree that either a loose-leaf binder or card listing blank is the best method, each listing to be given a number, and a record kept of the active listings on hand. That is, if on the first of January, the last number is 205, each new place as it is put on the list should be given a consecutive number. Out of the 205, probably about half have been previously sold or cancelled, so that the number of active listings on the first of the month would be, say, one hundred.

To determine the number of listings which you have to work on during the month of January add the number listed, say ten, and deduct the number cancelled, which we will say is three, leaving 107 active listings for the month of January. Suppose we sell five of this number during January. This leaves 102 active listings on the first of February. Follow the same method each month, at the end of the year add up the places you had to work on and divide the total by twelve, which gives the average number of listings you had for the year, and by dividing the total sales for the year by the average number of listings you get the percentage of properties sold.

A very important part of our office accountings should be a salesbook or a sales chart. This book should show the date of the sale, number of the property, the owner's name and address, number of acres if it is a farm, or the location if it is a piece of city property, the purchaser's name and address, and any other details which are of importance in your particular office. In addition to this we have a sales chart which shows the total commissions from farm and city property for each month of the year, and as this sales chart is carried forward from one year to another, it also shows the comparison for each month of 1913 with the same month in the preceding years.

In addition we show on this chart the total expenses for the month, the number of listings on hand, the number listed, the number cancelled, the number sold, and the number carried forward to the month following. This may sound like a whole lot of work but in reality it is very simple, as it is only a condensed transcript from the books for ready reference and probably doesn't take over half an hour a month for the stenographer to get it off, and it is certainly worth gold dollars to you, for in no other way can you keep in as close touch with your business.—W. J. Russell, president New York State Farm Brokers' Association.

Art of Varnishing.

Varnishing is not an easy task, where one expects the best finish. Many house painters do not know how to apply it, and if they could watch a carriage painter using it they would get some good pointers, no doubt. It should be applied freely, with a full brush, not with a partly filled brush, as though trying to stretch it out, and do not work the varnish more than necessary to produce a level and even surface. The less working with the brush the better. Yet, in making this full application, be careful to avoid runs and sags. Very much will depend upon the varnish, but more on the workman. A free flowing varnish will permit of applying a very full coat, and allow the workman to work or brush off the surplus, using very gentle strokes with the brush, using only the tips of the brush. Some of the best varnishers use an old paint brush that has been cleaned for the purpose, rather than the usual varnish brush.

Here are a few useful hints on varnishing.

Clean pot, clean varnish, clean brush, clean shop, clean overalls, these are among the essentials.

Excessive working of the varnish with the brush destroys the luster more or less.

Apply the varnish while warm; let the object to be done be warm also, if possible; also the room. Likewise keep up the warmth of the room until the varnish is dry.

To produce a brilliant finish, have the surface free from dirt and grease, dust, etc., and let the surface be smooth.

To avoid brush marks, use a size brush fit for the surface, a small brush only for small surface or object, and vice versa. Working varnish too long also produces brush marks.

A very thin coat of varnish will not bear out well, will not give a full effect. But if too heavy, then it will not brush out well nor level up smooth.

Light bodied varnishes are easy to brush out and are not liable to show brush marks. Heavy bodied varnish should be worked very little, if any, but be put on in a full coat, and it will level up itself.

The surface of the varnished work may appear dry, but one must be careful that it is really dry all through before applying the next coat. Applying a coat on a not-dry coat produces sweating, or loss of luster, etc.—Painter's Magazine.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

BUILDING PLAN FILINGS $682,435 MORE THAN THOSE OF LAST WEEK—NO BREAK IN PRICES OF ANY COMMODITY

State Measures Department Postpones Application of Lath Counting Law

TAKING all the lines of business as a whole, there is none that is affected so little by the death grapple of empires now in progress east of the Atlantic, than is building materials and building construction. While other lines are for the moment stagnated, building construction and building materials loom up as a mighty bulwark where progress goes on uninterruptedly.

Structural steel was the only material that showed the least fluctuation in price. Quotations made yesterday went from 1.31c to 1.36c for tees, zees, angles, beams and steel bars, tidewater, N. Y. This quotation still puts the bottom level at the range quoted last week but provides a top range which for several weeks has been occupied by the quotation 1.31c prior to last week when the latter was low and the high range was left blank. This advance was due to the shutting off of ferro manganese supplies abroad.

Personal contact with building financiers, leaders of activity in building material circles, great contractors and generals among the army of realty holders, not only here, but throughout the great metropolitan district, proves that hard headed American business men are giving as fine a demonstration of what courage is as any foreign soldier can give on a battle plain.

And there are sound reasons for this stability. Practically all building construction is financed far ahead of actual construction work. A large lender of building money, for instance, said that he had engagements ahead for various types of buildings that would not be completed before January 1, 1916. These involve an outlay of several millions of dollars. And it was not the only case of its kind.

Practically no staple building commodity depends for movement to consumption upon the foreign trade, nor upon sea-going bottoms. The only notable exception is that of Canadian spruce, which, of course, has been shut off from this market. But there is Pennsylvania spruce. Paint ingredients, brick, steel, cement, lime, plaster, slate, marble, gypsum, asphalt, sand, gravel; everything that goes into, onto or under a building is produced right here, so that outside of the state of the financial market there is no reason why building construction and materials should not occupy the same position as commodities they have occupied heretofore.

As far as the financial situation is concerned, it is not so gloomy as it might be had it not been for a very resourceful Uncle Sam with money enough in his pockets to take care of his family at home as well as that part of it which is cooped up abroad. Values of securities are temporarily low, but the shutting off of European trade will hurl back upon American industries the commodities that a reduced tariff enabled American consumers to buy abroad, as witness the fact that the United States Steel Corporation was announced to be already in the market for ferro manganese, the source of supply of which has been cut off by the hostilities abroad.

An important financier in the building loan business said this week: "How much better it is that this should have happened now than in the fall of 1911, when the metropolitan district was overbuilt. Today we are in a state of readjustment with respect to business, pleasure and residential location, just exactly as we were prior to the Civil War. It is not possible that a general shutdown of building construction can occur because there is no slack to be taken up, taking the district as a whole. Prices of materials are not inflated and real estate is cheap, hence we have no great heights of prosperity to fall from and we cannot go lower than we already were.

On the Building Material Exchange there was not the least fluctuation in prices. Buying was moderately active and even became brisk when it became known that the Veronica Realty Corporation had, in the face of the unpleasant news from abroad, filed plans for a million-dollar, 25-story office building in Columbus circle. Plan filings in all the boroughs of this city were $682,435 more than those of last week, thus indicating beyond peradventure that the building industry is not panic stricken.

Plan filings for the five boroughs for the week ending Friday noon compared with the filings made last week before the current stress came upon the country, follow:

| | Week ending July 31.— | | —August 7.— | |

IRON AND STEEL.

Beams, Channels, Angles and Tees Move Up Slightly.

ALTHOUGH prices of structural steel shapes were advanced this week from 1.31c. and to 1.31c. and 1.36c. it was no indication that heavier orders had prompted it. As a matter of fact the movement was made to counteract the higher cost of obtaining certain supplies for which the steel companies had depended to some extent on Europe. It was the only commodity that showed any change in quotations, not even excepting linseed oil, which has been sharply rising in this market for the last few weeks.

It was considered significant in building circles that the railroad companies were still actively in the market with orders for equipment. Building orders in this locality showed no appreciable fluctuation in tone.

LUMBER.

Requisitioning of Bottoms Spurs Dealers to Act.

THROUGHOUT the entire metropolitan district there is a feeling of keen anticipation evident among the building material dealers as to the effect the possible requisitioning of bottoms by the government will have upon the lumber-carrying trade between eastern and southern ports. Certain it is that, unless there is a big buying movement before long, many dealers will find themselves short on ordinary building grades of lumber if the exigencies of the war in Europe compels the government to take over boats flying the Stars and Stripes to help sustain the fighting armies of wrangling Europe.

Jobbers told the Record and Guide representative this week that they had never before encountered such a problem. The market has for nearly a year been buying from hand to mouth. Dealers were running low in anticipation of reaping the price benefits that were due to accrue with the first slight improvement in the general building movement. Instead, the war clouds broke over the continent, shipping is at least temporarily paralyzed, Canadian shipments are entirely shut off and, as this is being written, Uncle Sam is scurrying around to find almost any kind of a boat that will keep grain dry to make his foreign shipments in. Schooners that can handle lumber can handle grain. Crops will be moving before the month closes and the railroads will be taxed to handle it, so that Pacific Coast woods will be hard to get, according to the jobbers and manufacturers agents here, and the Panama Canal will offer little help.

LATH TAGGING POSTPONED.

State Department Puts Off New Regulation for a While.

ANNOUNCEMENT from the office of the State Sealer of Weights and Measures that it has deferred the application of the new law requiring the tagging of all bundles of lath with a statement as to the total number of lath in each bundle, has been a source of relief to the lumber interests of this market.

Much of this lath comes down from Canada, but the Canadian product was exempt from this regulation because the law, naturally, cannot affect products coming in from outside of the boundaries. Therefore most of the lath that will come into this market for some time will come from upper New York state. If this lath had to be labeled and counted and bundled it would have added another burden to the building material market and building public which would have been exasperating, to say the least, at this time, according to opinions expressed in the market this week.

Lath in their manufacture are never counted at the mill. This material is a by-product thrown off by saws trimming other grades of lumber. When the rack takes in enough cut strips to make a bundle of lath, it is tied around, taken to a saw and cut off to the required length and shot down the chute to be sent to market. Just where the counting would be done is a question, but it is certain that it would add another ten cents a thousand to the lath anyway. The application of the law has tentatively been deferred until January 1.

COMMON BRICK.

Unloading a Million in Excess of Last Week's Total.

UNLOADING records as compiled by the Greater New York Brick Company showed an actual gain of a little more than a million common brick riding to job this week as against last week's total. The record is next highest to the best made so far this year, which is another, sign that building construction interests have kept their heads in the late crisis. Quotations are unchanged and there are only eighteen left over cargoes in the harbor, as against 66 in the same week last year, indicating that the market is in careful hands.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Aug. 6, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson brick unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

PAINT INGREDIENTS.

Small Painting Contracts Feature of an Improving Market.

PAINT ingredients show little or no reflection of unusual conditions in the painting department, except that here and there may be found some lines like linseed oil, that is strengthening in price. Prices, on the whole continue to be on a steady basis and any variations from list usually depend upon the seller. Lead and spelter continue to sell at low price and prevent any advance in values for pigments.

White lead stands pat at the 7½-cent level, according to the best authorities in the trade, and the quotations at this level are fairly stiff.

This state of affairs is directly traceable to the firmness in the present prices for pig lead. —The demand for white lead is improving, but not in sufficient volume to indicate a heavier demand from building contractors. It is almost entirely traceable to small job contractors.

Red lead and litharge are reported quiet, with prices rather weak. The manufacturing trades which use quantities of litharge are able to buy this commodity at 5½ cents a pound, but on smaller quantities prices are the same as for red lead, which rules at 7½ cents.

Ready mixed paints are finding a stronger call in the suburbs, but the weather conditions of the last fortnight have checked the movement so that there is little activity among jobbers.

MUNICIPAL UNION FREIGHT TERMINAL

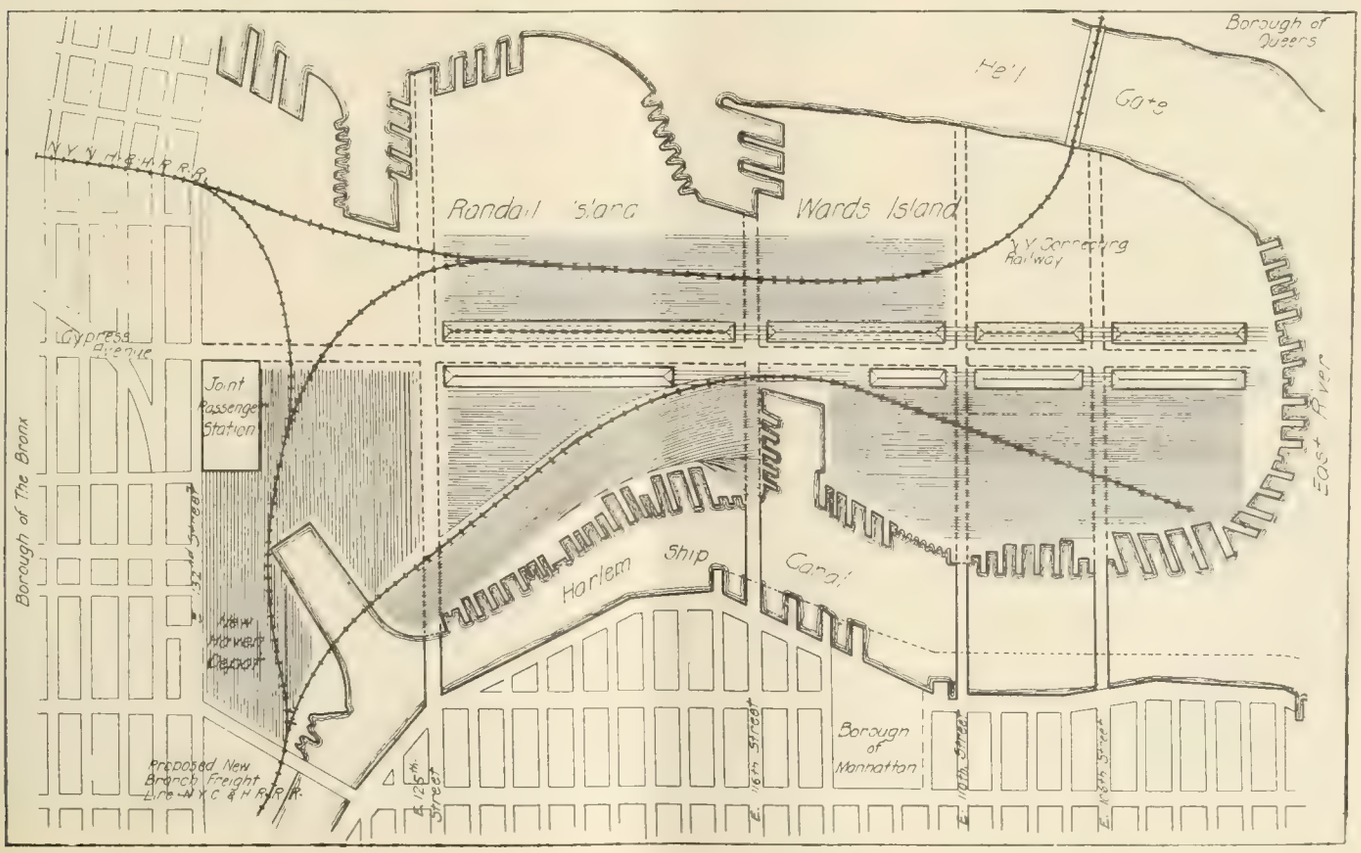
Project Provides for Connecting Ward and Randall Islands and the Elimination of Existing Yards Along Hudson River Frontage

By J. BLEEKER MILLER AND REGINALD P. BOLTON



IN city-planning, it is axiomatic that land which can be used for house area, is too valuable to be occupied by a freight yard, particularly in consideration of the depressing effect on adjacent property-values, of the nuisances which are always connected with the freight-yard and with its attendant freight-railroad. As the water-front of a harbor city is its most characteristic and valuable part, it follows that this principle applies most strongly to the water-front of a port. If the attendant freight railroad is also extended along the water-front, it may be said to deprive the port of the main, peculiar advantage of a harbor, i. e., free access of the inhabitants, with their goods, to and from the water-front, and to reduce the port to the disadvantageous position of an inland city.

Subject, however, to this objection, it is of the first importance that the freight-depot should be located as near the center of the city as possible; the locality where freight is broken-up, after its transshipment by rail, offers great attractions to manufacturers, on account of the short haul to their warehouses.

Another disadvantage of placing a freight yard within the house area is that, when the city expands it is difficult to accommodate the increased amount of freight which then requires to be handled.

Applying these principles to the City of New York, the reasons for the long dissatisfaction with the present system of freight terminals, particularly those of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company, are apparent. The yards are within the house-area, on the water-front, and, with the attendant freight-railroad, occupy a large part of that water-front and threaten, if the demands of the railroad are complied with, to reduce the port almost to the condition of an inland town. Moreover, the yards are not near to the center of the present City of Greater New York; they were laid out when the Borough of Manhattan was alone to be considered, and, even as to that Borough, no idea of its present size was entertained.

Dock Commissioner Tomkins claimed to have solved the problem by locating the future central freight-yard on the meadows of New Jersey; the suggestion offers many advantages, but entails the danger that manufacturers would abandon this City and State, in order to locate their factories near the place where the freight is removed from the trains.

Is there not a locality, within the City and State of New York, where the same advantages could be obtained? Could not the Borough of the Bronx be extended southward, by filling in the narrow, useless waterways which now separate it from Randell's and Ward's Islands and by, in turn, connecting these islands by bridges, with Manhattan Island? The great demand, at the present time for place in which to dispose of the material excavated from the subways, obviates one large item of the expense.

The entire north boundary of the terminal space could be margined by East 132nd street, to which are at present connected all of the main north and south avenues of the Bronx.

Islands Owned by City.

The islands are mainly owned or controlled by the City of New York and occupied only by public institutions, in no way requiring a water-front, for which other and larger locations could easily be found, in Queens County or on Staten Island. The city has also acquired the right to condemn water-front property for the purposes of port improvements, so that any outstanding title could easily be acquired.

Within a radius of ten miles from Ward's Island, there lies the whole of the Boroughs of Manhattan and of the Bronx, the Borough of Queens as far as Flushing, and Jamaica, the Borough of Brooklyn, as far as Red Hook and East New York.

The water area, within the same space, includes the lower part of the Sound from the city line, the whole of the East River, all of the Harlem ship canal, and the Hudson from the city line to the Battery. Within a water-travel of fifteen miles from this point, every part of the Hudson River, south of Manhattan, can be reached, either via the East River, or the Harlem Ship Canal. Within the same radius, there can be reached on the South, the Narrows, the Kill von Kull, the Upper Bay, the Bush Terminal, all of Jersey City and Hoboken, and on the north, within a similar distance, lie New Rochelle and Yonkers.

The islands are also advantageously situated as regards marine and Barge Canal traffic, owing to the proximity of the Harlem Ship Canal; while the Sound and East River pass their shores.

Area of Islands.

The area of the combined Islands, available for freight and float terminal is one and a half miles in length and three-fifths of a mile in width, including an area of twenty-seven million square feet or approximately one square mile.

The area along the Hudson River, owned by the New York Central is approximately, that same amount and the area occupied by that railroad, but owned by the city, is twice that amount. This area is extended along the eight miles of water-front from Spuyten Duyvil to the 59th street freight yards. The railroad could be required to surrender this water-front, in exchange for privileges on the Islands above mentioned. The gain to the city of New York arising from the removal of this water-front nuisance, along its main residence district, and affording those residents direct access to the Hudson, through parks and boulevards, would be simply incalculable; besides it would allow for a great future development of commerce, if that should ever become necessary.

Extension of Traffic.

An extension of the New York Central freight traffic can readily be made from 155th street, along lands now chiefly vacant, extending on the north-eastern side of the Harlem Ship Canal and crossing over the New Haven Morris yard, by an elevated road. A little distance to the northeast is the Port Morris Yard of the New York and Harlem already connected with the New York Central System. If the above-mentioned extension along the north side of the Harlem Ship Canal should not be deemed advisable, there would be no trouble whatever in connecting this last mentioned yard with the islands, by a span of half a mile in length.

The Pennsylvania Railroad already crosses these islands by the New York Connecting Railroad and a short tunnel, if deemed necessary, to Long Island would connect the Sunnyside Freight Yard and all of the Long Island terminals, although this connection might be made by the connecting railway.

Terminal of 110 Acres.

The terminal of one hundred and ten acres, consists of two spaces, one of fifty acres for general terminal and float purposes, and the other of sixty acres for the storage and assemblage of cars.

This latter space would also include a docking basin, six hundred feet long by four hundred feet wide and would be fringed by a mile and a half of docks or float approaches. The size of this terminal space of one hundred and ten acres may be compared with the present thirty-six acres, occupied by the freight yards between 59th and 72nd streets—a large part of which, including the docks, belongs to the City of New York.

On the East River side of the islands a yard of twelve acres could be provided with deep water docks three or four hundred feet in length and a barge basin one thousand feet long by two hundred and fifty feet wide. The New York Connecting Railway could be brought into the terminal and the space of ninety acres devoted to storage and assemblage of cars; within this space could be another basin, one thousand feet in length, and five hundred feet in breadth, which could be admirably used by the freight vessels in the Sound and northeast coast lines. The New Haven Railroad at Morrisania could be left in its occupation, but largely extended in area and dock facilities.

Other Possibilities.

The proposed terminal for the general classification yard could be constructed upon the center of the area, with a width of seven or eight hundred feet, upon which eighty or ninety miles of trackage could be laid accommodating between eight and ten thousand cars and connected with all of the railroads.

Lack of space forbids taking up the possible distribution of freight in Manhattan Island by means of a subway, to connect with the present location of factories and warehouses; sufficient, for the present, to say that the New York Central has always contemplated a large expense in order to obtain permanent rightful access for its freight into the center of Manhattan Island. Thirty-four millions is mentioned, I believe, in the papers, on which the present proposed consolidation of the New York Central lines is based. For a much smaller sum ample freight subways could be constructed on Manhattan Island, connecting the islands with the present freight yards on the Hudson, and with the docks of the New Jersey Railroad, as well as with local freight stations throughout the Manhattan Island, which merchants would have but short hauls for their goods.

Until this freight-subway is established, it would be perfectly practicable for the freight cars to be transported by floats to piers along the waterfront, and then transferred over the water-front street to local freight depots—as the Erie Railroad now manages its freight on the Hudson River, north of Twenty-third street.

MONEY SITUATION WILL NOT STOP WORK

In view of inquiries with respect to the continuation of rapid transit work on account of the present financial situation in the country, Chairman Edward E. McCall of the Public Service Commission for the First District during the week made the following statement:

"The Commission will continue to rush the completion of the Dual System with all expedition. With so many parts of the system nearing completion or under contract, it is vital that the remaining portions should be constructed at the earliest moment. For example, it is essential that not a moment's time shall be lost on such connections as the Grand Central diagonal station, William street, Nassau street and Willoughby street, Brooklyn. There are now engaged on our work upwards of 11,000 men. I am assured that we will suffer no inconvenience on account of lack of labor."

On the recommendation of Commissioner George V. S. Williams, the Public Service Commission has ordered the Long Island Railroad Company to build a new passenger station on the south side of South street, Jamaica, on the Old Southern Division of the railroad. The new station must be completed and ready for use by November 1, 1914.

On the recommendation of Commissioner George V. S. Williams, the commission adopted an order fixing the rate of fare 15 cents on all trains of the New York Consolidated Railroad Company (Brooklyn Rapid Transit system) from Manhattan to Rockaway beach. The order was served on both the New York Consolidated Railroad Company and the Long Island Railroad Company, as part of the Rockaway Beach line is operated over the tracks of the Long Island company. The fare at the present time is 15 cents, when a passenger buys a through ticket. If he just passes through a turnstile, paying 5 cents to get on the train, and then offers to pay a cash fare for the entire ride, 15 cents more is demanded, making a total fare of 20 cents for the trip.

At the meeting of the commission on August 21 advertising for bids for the construction of Routes Nos. 43 and 26, the Diagonal Station at 42nd street, connecting the Lexington avenue subway with the existing subway at the Grand Central Station will be ordered. The bids will be opened September 11, 1914. This is one of the most important contracts yet to be let under the Dual System agreements. The contract has now been sent to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the operating company, for its criticisms and suggestions, and will be returned by that company within a few days, when it will be put in permanent form by the commission. All contractors submitting bids for this work will be required to deposit a certified check of $75,000 with their bids. The successful contractor will be required to give a bond to the city in the sum of $500,000; and make a deposit, either in cash or securities of $250,000 to protect the Interborough Company. In addition a percentage of all monthly payments will be withheld by the commission until the completion of the work.

The entire work must be completed within twenty-eight months from the signing of the contract. The commission's engineers state that the construction of this connection will present many new engineering features, and that it will be one of the most difficult engineering problems in the Dual System. This contract extends from points in Park avenue near 38th and 41st streets (tracks connecting with the present subway at both of these points) north under Park avenue and the Grand Union Hotel property to the north line of 42nd street; also, at a lower level east under 42nd street to about 100 feet east of Lexington avenue to a connection with the Steinway tunnel.

The construction of the line from 42nd street under the property of the New York Central will be carried on under an agreement with that company. The work on the Park avenue end of the connection will have to be prosecuted while trains in the present subway are operating, in the rush hours on a headway of less than two minutes.

WATER SHED SUPPLY TO NEW YORK CITY

Growth and History of Systems Since 1774—Capacity of Present and Projected Reservoirs Dwelt Upon*

By THURSTON C. CULYER

IN this geographical portion of our country, and in which the area that constitutes the State of New York is specially favored, there exist climatological conditions of remarkable uniformity, in the usual periodic changes of temperature, and in the precipitation of moisture in the form of rain, snow, etc. For more than three-quarters of a century records kept and preserved by the Board of Regents at Albany and of the Department of Water Supply establish the yearly average precipitation of moisture, remarkably devoid of extreme variation, as between forty and fifty inches.

These facts would seem to substantiate the claim of fortunate stability in the matter of our natural water resources, and assuring to the two extensive reservations of territory now partly owned and controlled by the City of New York a practically unfailing and incomparable supply of water for domestic and industrial use.

First Public Well.

In 1774, the population of the City of New York at the time being 22,000, under a proposition of Christopher Colles and sanctioned by the Common Council, a large well was dug on the east side of Broadway, between Pearl and White streets, near "The Collect," a fresh water pond, where the Tombs now stands. The water from the well was pumped into a reservoir and distributed by pipes consisting of hollow logs. This work was abandoned on account of the Revolution. In 1799 the Manhattan Company, the legal successor—now the Manhattan Bank of this city—was incorporated. This company constructed a well at the northwest corner of Reade and Centre streets, from which water was pumped into a reservoir erected in Chambers street, between Broadway and Centre. This reservoir had a capacity of 550,000 gallons, which was distributed through pipes also made of hollow logs. In 1829 a small reservoir was constructed by authority of the Common Council in 13th street, near Irving place. This water was intended only for the use of fires, and the reservoir had a capacity of about 234,000 gallons. From this reservoir two lines of pipe were laid —one down Broadway, the other down the Bowery.

Old Croton Dam.

In 1834 the Legislature passed an act authorizing a provision for supplying New York City with pure and wholesome water, and Major D. B. Douglass was made the chief engineer of the commission, comprised of five members. Under this act, between the years 1837 and 1842 the Old Croton Dam and reservoir were constructed, and the connecting aqueduct, 37 miles in length.

Before the completion of the Old Croton Dam, part of the earth embankment which formed the major portion of the structure was washed away by an unprecedented freshet which occurred on January 7, 1841, continuing for 48 hours, the ground at the time being covered with 18 inches of snow, with a rising temperature. The water passing over the crest of the dam reached the abnormal depth of 15 feet. The masonry portion of the dam fortunately received but little injury. Incidentally, since the construction of the New Croton Dam this original structure lies 36 feet below the present level of the reservoir.

*From an address delivered before the Ninety-fifth meeting of the Insurance Society of New York.

On June 27, 1842, the water from Croton Lake was first received through the aqueduct into the reservoir at 86th street, and on July 4 into the Murray Hill Reservoir, now the site of the public library.

The celebration of the introduction of Croton water took place October 14, 1842. Water was first introduced into the new Central Park reservoir north of 86th street on August 19, 1862, and the reservoir was completed the following year.

Watershed Development.

The development of the Croton watershed has been as follows:

In 1866 the construction of Boyds Corners dam and reservoir was begun, and completed in 1873, the capacity of the reservoir being 2,727 m.g.

|---|---|
| Middle branch, completed in 1878, total capacity..... | 4,002 m.g. |
| East branch, completed in 1891, total capacity..... | 9,463 m.g. |
| Titicus reservoir, completed in 1893, total capacity.... | 7,167 m.g. |
| West Branch reservoir, completed in 1895, total capacity ..... | 10,070 m.g. |
| Amawalk reservoir, completed in 1897, total capacity ..... | 6,692 m.g. |
| New Croton reservoir, completed in 1905, total capacity ..... | 33,815 m.g. |
| Cross River reservoir, completed in 1908, total capacity ..... | 10,038 m.g. |
| Croton Falls divtg., in 1910, total capacity ..... | 888 m.g. |

The city owns or controls the following lakes and ponds in the Croton watershed:

The right to draw 3 feet of water from Lake Mahopac between September 1 and March 1 of the following year, 560 m.g.

The right to draw 12 feet of water from Barrett Pond, 170 m.g.

The right to draw 18 feet from Kirk Lake, 565 m.g.

Owns Lakes Gleneida, Gilead and White Pond, with a total available capacity of about 1,000 m.g.

In the Byram and Bronx watershed the city owns Byram Lake, with available capacity of 500 m.g.; Wampus Lake, capacity 60 m.g., and Rye Lake (now known as Rye Dike), capacity 4,936 m.g., and on the completion of the New Kensico Dam and reservoir there will be a total capacity of 40,000 m.g., and available capacity of about 30,000 m.g.

Present Water Supply.

The source of the present supply of water for the City of New York (Manhattan and the Bronx) is derived from, first, Croton watershed, comprising an area of 360 square miles, and is located mainly in the counties of Westchester and Putnam; second, the Byram and Bronx watershed, comprising an area of 22 square miles. Within these two watersheds the city owns about 22,000 acres, half of which is flooded by the reservoirs and lakes.

From the water stored there was delivered to the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx during the year 1912 an average daily supply of 303 m.g., or 110,500,000,000 gallons for the year.

The maximum storage capacity of these lakes and reservoirs, including Flash Board storage, is about 110,000 m.g.

Total capacity of old aqueduct is 90 m.g. daily; total capacity of new aqueduct is 300 m.g. daily; total capacity of Bronx pipe line is 19 m.g. daily; total, 409 m.g. daily.

Water pumped for high-pressure fire service for year 1912, Manhattan, 130.2 m.g.

The total length of new Croton aqueduct is 30.75 miles, of which 5,924 lineal feet in cut or on embankment.

The Catskill Water System.

The four drainage areas, or watersheds, from which the new supply is to be drawn are situated west of the Hudson River, in the Catskill Mountains, and lie between lines 75 and 135 miles from the City Hall, New York City.

In the aggregate these watersheds have an area of nearly 900 square miles, and individually as follows: Esopus, 225 square miles; Schoharie, 228 square miles; Rondout, 131 square miles; Catskill, 163 square miles, to which can be added several small contiguous areas helping to make up the grand total.

From this gathering ground it is estimated that even in a series of extraordinarily dry years 770,000,000 gallons daily can be drawn the year through. To collect these waters for the city's use, several large impounding reservoirs are to be created from time to time, as found necessary, and interconnected by aqueducts.

Only the Esopus watershed is being developed now, but its only reservoir, known as the Ashokan, is by far the largest and most important of them all. From this reservoir the Catskill aqueduct will convey the water into all five boroughs of the city. The Esopus cannot be depended upon to supply more than 250,000,000 gallons each day, but the aqueduct has been constructed to carry 500,000,000 gallons daily. It will take the water almost three days to flow from the Ashokan reservoir to the borough of Richmond.

Many Miles of Aqueduct

From Ashokan to the city's northern boundary there are 92 miles of aqueduct. From Ashokan to Croton Lake, 65 miles. Between Catskill and Croton Lake, 99 per cent. of the work completed; to Hill View equalizing reservoir, 95 per cent. completed. The Ashokan dam is 190 feet through at the base, 23 feet at the top, 210 feet above bed of river, and the elevation of the water in the reservoir will be 590 feet above tide.

Beside the connections of the Catskill aqueduct with Croton Lake, Kensico, Hill View and Jerome Park reservoirs, there will be connections at all the shafts throughout the city with the present mains, and with the mains of the high-pressure fire-service system, although water will not be supplied to all of Manhattan and the Bronx.

Interesting Statistics.

Interesting statistics have been compiled by the Literary Digest dealing with the income tax situation. In that section of Manhattan bounded by 24th street on the north, the Bowery, Mott and Catherine streets on the east and the Hudson and East rivers, containing about two square miles, 15,000 persons have a total income exceeding $1,000,000,000 a year, while that section immediately adjoining on the east and bounded by 14th, Bowery, Mott street and the East river, having an area of one square mile, and a population of about 600,000 persons, contributes practically nothing in the form of income tax.

NATURE AND PURPOSE OF A FREE PORT

It Gives Special Advantages to Shipping and Control Over Merchandise—A Study of European Free Ports.*

WHEN it comes to the practical consideration of a free port for New York the question has reached a point where the public must understand more definitely what a free port is, whether it has been a success abroad and whether it can be applied to American conditions.

The first impression one has in reference to the free port proposition is that of interest because it is peculiarly a German institution. At a time when the United States is looking to the foreign market as the coming outlet for her industry, it is natural that she should turn to German methods, because in thirty or forty years Germany has developed from an agricultural nation to an industrial and commercial nation of the first rank.

There can be little doubt that Germany has been a pathfinder along a route which we are now traveling. Our change from a predominately agricultural nation to an industrial nation has been easily discerned by those who have been reading the signs of the past ten years. The census of 1910 tells us that we have declined eighteen per cent. in the per capita production of cereals since 1900. Argentine beef and corn have been coming into New York harbor to feed the people who a score of years ago were supplying food to the nations of the old world. The census of 1910 tells us, on the other hand, that ten years saw an increase of 77 per cent. in the tonnage of our blast furnaces and rolling mills. And during the last year one of our infants, the steel industry, has been contributing an export of nearly a million dollars a day.

The Free Port at Hamburg.

When Hamburg entered the German Customs Union in 1888, she inaugurated the administration of her free port which for five years previous had been in process of construction. The free port is located on the river Elbe directly abutting the city, which is 65 miles from the sea, and takes in the entire river for a stretch of five miles from Altona to Elbe bridge. The land area comprised within this zone was in 1883 occupied by 16,000 inhabitants, who were evicted when the land was condemned by the state. There is in the free port a land area of 1,325 acres in addition to 1,370 acres of water area, all of which is shut off from the inland by means of a canal on the city side of the harbor and by means of floating palisades on the other sides. The entrances to the city and to the upper and lower Elbe are guarded by customs stations.

Within the free port goods are unloaded, stored, packed, mixed or manipulated, or manufactured with as great freedom as though customs officials were an unknown species to commerce. There is an interesting way of bringing ships up the river to the free port. The red tape amounts to nothing, except that the pilot is a sworn man, who is under oath not to allow any goods to leave the vessel while it is in his charge. There has never been an evidence of bad faith on the part of these pilots.

The Hamburg free port is practically the entire harbor, because, with the exception of river barges en route between the upper and lower Elbe which take the canal around the free port, all the the shipping comes to the free port. The free port is a place of varied activity in transshipment from ocean vessels to river barges and the circular railway, in lightering to the city and to the free port warehouses, and in the rapid movements of tugs and small power boats, all centered in a relatively small space. In addition to this activity at the quays and on the water there is an important commercial business being carried on in the rows of warehouses which are employed not only for storage but also for selling headquarters and offices, and close by are two great shipbuilding plants, and just beyond rows of small factories which front directly on the water. Whoever has seen the harbor of Hamburg has seen one of the most impressive sights of a great commercial nation.

Other German Free Ports.

The general character of the free port in Hamburg has been copied by the other German ports, except in respect to manufacture, which is a privilege restricted to Hamburg. Bremen, for instance, has the warehousing and transshipment features, with entire freedom in the way of packing, mixing or manipulating, but her frequent petitions to the Empire for the right to manufacture have been unavailing. Since Bremen embraced Bismarck's proposal three years later than Hamburg she has had to suffer for her scepticism by this limitation.

Bremen, which is on the river Weser, 46 miles from the sea, located her free port just down the river from her old docks. A large inland basin was excavated from the dry land and connected directly with the river; this was surrounded by quays, transshipment sheds, warehouses and circular railways and isolated from the inland by means of a fence. Bremen's shipping quickly transferred itself to the freeport, and the old warehouses and quays abutting the city have fallen into decay. In order to accommodate the growing traffic of the free port it later became necessary to add a second inland basin adjoining the first.

Copenhagen, Denmark, the Queen of the North and the commercial center of the Scandinavian countries, had watched with interest the installation of free ports in Germany, and her parliament decided in 1891 that the best way to meet German competition in the Baltic was to copy the German free port. There is one decided difference, however, to be noted in the free port of Copenhagen, which is that the old harbor was left unaltered and the free port was planned as only one unit in the whole harbor. The land for the free port was reclaimed from the sea, as the site selected was seaward from the old harbor, so much so that a breakwater had to be constructed. The land area, only 148 acres, consists partly of projecting arms on which are located over 4,000 yards of quays and the warehouses, and an outer fringe of ground on the city side, utilized for administration buildings, freight yards and factories.

General Success in Europe.

If New York is a logical place for a free port from the standpoint of duties, it is of interest to us to inquire into the management, the special services and the general success of European free ports.

The capital investment in the three major free ports of Hamburg, Bremen and Copenhagen has been provided partly by the state and partly by private enterprise. In each instance the state paid for the land, dredged the harbors and built the quays, while private companies, called free port warehousing companies, paid for the warehouses, railway tracks, cranes and their administration buildings.

The harbor administration in Hamburg and Bremen is controlled by the State through harbor and engineering departments. In Copenhagen the harbor administration is undertaken by the Department of the Interior of Denmark, which controls the entire harbor of which the free port is a part. At all these ports the harbor departments assign berths to ships, collect the harbor dues and generally administer the shipping.

Adaptability of New York Harbor.

The first question which one should answer in considering the proposal of a free port for New York is as to whether it is feasible from a terminal standpoint. That is, is it a practical matter? The salient character of free ports, their unity and co-ordination, may seem impracticable in a harbor with such a long and broken water front as we find here. It would be impracticable, doubtless, to attempt to make the whole of New York harbor into a free port. The administrative difficulties facing the Customs, in such a case, would make an impossible task. And as the harbor has been developed with no idea of a free port clean-cut corelation would be outside of the question.

No such objections, however, stand in the way of a separate free port zone in New York harbor. Were an unoccupied area selected it would be possible to construct a terminal all at once and abreast the latest models. Such a scheme has much to commend it. New York needs to provide accommodations for growing traffic, and she is now suffering from the lack of unified and specialized terminals. The freight congestion problem which has arisen in Manhattan, a solution of which seems so difficult, should hasten the consideration of a special zone for our transit foreign trade.

No Extra Burden Laid.

A free port would not lay an extra burden on the Customs regulation of the Port of New York. It seems from foreign experience that there is no question about the success of guarding an isolated free port zone. In New York it would merely divert labor from the administration of bonded warehouses and drawbacks to stretching a guard around the free port.

It is an advantage to be rid of customs fees, and it is an advantage to have goods come in quickly, but it is an even greater advantage to have control of your own goods. The free ports are used in many instances for assembling parts prior to direct shipment. One American firm in the Hamburg free port puts Elgin watch movements into Keystone cases, packs shipments, and sticks firm labels on the packages, all in a room in one of the free port warehouses. Another firm, next door, brings in Panama hats and fits them out with hatbands.

Needed at New York.

Although the immediate need of a free port in New York harbor is as a base for transit and domestic imports, the possible manufacturing claim should not be ignored. Some manufacturers are using foreign materials and at the same time sending part of their product out as export. The drawback figures show that there is a fairly large volume of this trade. In such cases, where a special factory could be established to care particularly for the foreign export, there would be a great advantage in locating a plant in the free port.

EAST GRAND STREET A RETAIL CENTER

Small Mercantile Concerns Have Invaded Section—Many Transfers of Properties During Last Year—Stores in Demand

EAST Grand Street, the retail shopping district of the lower East Side continues, as it has for many years, to be a popular business thoroughfare. It was in this street that Ridley and Lord & Taylor at one time conducted their large establishments. The Grand Theatre at the southeast corner of Grand and Chrystie streets, formerly occupied by Lord & Taylor, is now a vaudeville and moving picture theatre. Before it was occupied by the well known dry goods firm, it was for many years a coal yard. The Ridley firm before it retired from business occupied the entire block front in the south side of Grand street, between Allen and Orchard streets. After the building was razed it was superseded by a row of smaller buildings now occupied by retail establishments dealing chiefly with women's wearing apparel.

Class of Occupants.

An interesting detail in connection with the commercial development of Grand street is the grouping of the businesses into two divisions, each occupying opposite sides of the street. Invariably the south side contains stores which cater to a trade in women's clothing, cloaks and suits, millinery and lingerie, while on the north side, most of the stores deal with men's furnishings and clothing. Scattered along the street there may be found, also, piano firms, furniture establishments and a large number of restaurants. Grand street is known, not only as a shopping district, but also for its eating places.

Business development is noticeable particularly between Clinton street and the Bowery. West of the Bowery the Italian tenement section begins and it extends to Mulberry street. From this point west to Center street there are a number of machinery and metal concerns which have spread out from Center street, which is the center of the machinery trade. The businesses in Grand street form part of this colony.

In Grand street, east of Clinton street, the retail stores apparently are not as well located, since a number of car lines turn north at this point to connect with the Williamsburg Bridge. That section of Grand street, the extreme east, lacking as it does the transit facilities that the western portion enjoys, has not progressed as rapidly.

Realty Conditions Good.

Considering the length of the street and the character of the buildings and real estate conditions of the last two years, a fairly good number of transactions have been recorded involving property in Grand street. During 1913 titles passed to buildings at Nos. 245, 277 and 279, 363 to 365, 279 to 279½, 451 to 455, 466 to 370, 476, 478, 484 to 488, 542 to 544, and 581 to 585, mostly tenements, with the street floors occupied by retail establishments. Since the first of this year conveyances have been recorded which involve Nos. 213 to 217, 229, 408 to 410, 415, and 444 to 446. The building at No. 242, just east of the Bowery, was sold twice, having been acquired last February by Lewine & Kempner, who resold it to an investor from Erie, Pa.

Building Operations.

Building operations in Grand street have been, however, few and far between. The prevailing types of construction are old-fashioned dwellings, the lower floors remodeled for trade purposes, and tenement houses with stores. There are very few modern buildings to be found, nor have any plans been recently filed which would indicate any tendency to such activity. The last building operation undertaken was the erection of the three-story Assembly Hall and Theatre at No. 466 to 470. The lack of modern buildings is generally attributed to the scarcity of the demand. Most of the properties derive their income from the ground floor stores and in Grand street customers are apparently loath to patronize retail establishments which involve stair-climbing.

Opinions of Brokers.

"The third tracking of the Third avenue elevated road with an express station at Grand street, in addition to the station at Allen street on the Second avenue line, will mean an increase in business for this street," said Hiram Rinaldo, a local broker, "and the merchants are looking forward with optimism to its installation. Work on the proposed third tracking is progressing as rapidly as possible since the railroad company has begun obtaining the consents of property owners along the Bowery. The United Cigar Stores Company, evidently anticipating an increase in business as a result of this improvement, has taken a new store in the Brush Building, Grand street, corner of the Bowery, although they have another store in Grand street near Chrystie street on the next block."

August Buermann, of C. Buermann & Company, long established in this section, said: "That section east of Grand street and west of the Bowery has held its own for many years. When the Lord & Taylor and Ridley establishments left the street there was little or no decline in business, contrary to expectations. As a matter of fact, since the departure of these concerns their places have been taken by smaller merchants who are evidently prospering, since a number of business banks have recently been established along the street, including branches of the Public Bank, and the Corn Exchange Bank. This in itself is an indication of an increase in business since the banks are there for the benefit of local storekeepers. Other similar financial institutions include the Security Bank, the Century Bank, the Mutual Alliance Trust Company, and a number of private banks.

"There is a steady demand for stores in Grand street and in several instances recent renewals show an increase in rentals. Business has been stimulated recently by the efforts of the merchants to install additional electric lighting and the illumination in the evening is attracting many new shoppers. Former residents continue to patronize the stores, coming in regularly from the Eastern Districts of Brooklyn and the Bronx.

Transit Facilities.

The Second avenue line, connecting with Harlem and the upper East Side, brings large numbers of shoppers from that section of the city. East of Clinton street, Grand street is handicapped by a lack of transit facilities, the only road of service now being the crosstown line."

That part of Grand street comprising the extreme easterly end and extending over to the Grand street ferry for Brooklyn is principally a Jewish tenement section. As it nears the waterfront, several factories, warehouses and lumber yards may be found, which have availed themselves of the advantages of proximity to the East River. The largest and probably the most important industrial plant in that part of the city is the big printing press establishment of R. Hoe & Company, which occupies the entire block bounded by Grand, Broome, Sheriff and Columbia streets.

Among the larger lumber concerns are the Herman Lumber Co. and Masson Brothers. The Metropolitan Street Railway Company car barns are located at the junction of Grand, Corlears and Madison streets.

East Grand street, however, figures as it does among the downtown business thoroughfares, principally as one of the most important retail shopping centers of the Lower East Side. While the street has always been popular for these purposes, its apparent indifference to the shifting of similar districts to points further northward, indicates its firm establishment.

It is evident that so long as there is an East Side population to patronize it, just so long will there be a Grand street retail store. The firmness of the renting situation as indicated by the lack of unoccupied store space, shows the desirability of a location in the street for retail trade purposes.

Since the commencement of the European war building contracts aggregating more than $1,500,000 have been awarded, the improvements to be made in New York City and its environs. In itself this condition is a strong indication that the monied interests regard the technical condition of the market as being healthy.

The Panama Canal will be opened to commerce today for all ships requiring not more than thirty feet of water, which includes a majority of merchant vessels. There will be practically no ceremonies attendant upon this opening, as that will be left for the official opening in March, 1915, which will be according to a programme to be announced at a later date.

From statistics compiled during the last one hundred years it has been shown that the wealth of the United States has increased from about $1,750,000,000 to something like $150,000,000,000, or nearly 8,500 per cent; and the income has risen 6,900 per cent. During this period the population of the country has increased from 8,000,000 to 98,000,000, an expansion of 1,125 per cent.

Speaking of Opportunity for American business men as a result of the European war, about $1,177,000,000 is annually exported by South America, a large part of which must be diverted to this country for completion of manufacture or transshipment across the Atlantic, as a large part of the merchant marine plying between South America and the European nations comprises British ships. The only apparent avenue of outlet for this vast quantity of exports is to follow the three-mile neutral coast line, through the canal to New York.

Conditions About Normal.

The real estate market has been quiet during the past week, but no more so than it usually is during August. So far as one can judge business up-to-date is proceeding much as it would have proceeded in case the European war had not broken out. Of course some operations have been abandoned, but the list of necessary delinquents has not been as large as might have been anticipated. There is every disposition to go ahead with building projects which have already been financed. Doubtless some which have not been financed will be held up, until the critical period of the war is over and until some idea can be obtained of its probable duration, but in any event the volume of new projects would not have been large during the coming autumn and the postponement of building operations for a few months will have certain substantial advantages. There is still an over-production of rentable space in some of the districts in which speculative building takes place. It is necessary that these vacancies should be filled before a wholesomely active building market and an advance in prices can be expected. The real estate owner has certain arrears to make up. He is entitled, not merely in the old mercantile district, but in all the centers of speculative activity, to higher rents and a smaller burden of vacancies. He has been obliged to meet a very considerable increase in taxation extending over a number of years, without being able to shift any of this burden on the shoulders of the tenant, and he must be able to get better net returns on his property before any considerable amount of investment buying can be expected. The expectation is that a fair percentage of existing vacancies will be filled during the coming autumn and winter, and in spring the situation of the owners of modern mercantile and apartment buildings will have become substantially better. Then when peace is restored in Europe the necessary foundation will exist for an active and advancing market. Of course this is assuming that the war will not be prolonged throughout the winter, and as to that it is impossible to make a plausible guess at present. In the mean time, while there is no cause for alarm, there is every reason for the exercise of reasonable prudence.

One of the operations of importance announced during the last week was that of a new apartment house for Park avenue, just north of the Grand Central Terminal. Thus Park and Fifth avenues continue to be the only avenues in Manhattan, the vitality of whose growth is not affected by the adverse conditions which have prevailed recently in the real estate market. Park avenue is becoming more and more established as a thoroughfare of great apartment houses, and it is particularly well adapted to the purpose. Its unusual width offers builders an opportunity of erecting fourteen or sixteen-story houses as against only ten-story houses on Lexington and Madison avenues. At the same time Park avenue has the enormous residential advantage of being free from the noise and the disturbance of surface cars. It is certain to be lined with apartment houses from 50th street almost up to the street at which the cars of the New York Central Railroad Co. emerge from the tunnel. One phase of the development of Park avenue is the large numbers of buildings, which are being erected for the accommodation of very rich people. The new building, the construction of which has only just been announced, will contain only one apartment on a floor and will be extended for the accommodation of families, which have been occupying private residences on or near 5th avenue. A few years ago people of this class would not have thought of living in an apartment, but so far as one can judge, a constantly increasing proportion of them are coming to prefer the less arduous manner of living which an apartment house permits. They can obtain in such a house just as many rooms, the great majority of which will receive better air and light than can be furnished in any but the most expensive private residences. They obtain these rooms, connected in a more convenient manner, and so arranged that fewer servants are necessary. Finally, an apartment is less of a responsibility than a residence during the many months of the year, in which families of this class spend out of town. Hence it is that Park avenue apartment houses are getting a large portion of the increase in the number of millionaire inhabitants of the East Side. Its prosperity, like that of Fourth avenue, further south, has been purchased at the expense of other neighboring sections, which have been occupied in the past by the same class of people.

Improvement in Architecture.

There is one respect, in which New Yorkers can legitimately take an increasing pride in their city, and that is in the increasing excellence of its architectural appearance. In practically every class of current building the average structure erected today is an improvement upon its predecessor of ten years ago, both in the quality of the materials used and in the dignity of its appearance. This is conspicuously the case with the most recent sky-scrapers. All the important ones, erected of late years, such as the Woolworth Building, the new Western Union Building, the building of the American Express Co. and finally the new Equitable Building, are architectural credits to the city. Each in a different way gives evidence of careful study and of intelligent and effective expenditures of money for legitimate architectural purposes. Moreover, the three bank buildings recently erected or remodelled, which are not sky-scrapers—those of the National City Bank, the Guaranty Trust Co. and J. P. Morgan & Co.—have no competitors in London or Paris for simple and unostentatious dignity of design. The same statements are true of commercial and residential building in the upper part of Manhattan. The mercantile structures of 4th avenue are a considerable improvement on those of lower 5th avenue or lower Broadway. The apartment houses on Park avenue make a much better architectural average than those of upper Broadway; and the improvement is even more noticeable in interior decorations than in the street facades. It seems to indicate not merely a higher standard of competence in the architectural profession, but a better standard of taste on the part of the public.

Administration of Building Laws.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Upon my return to the city after two or three months abroad I am impressed by the mass of material that has accumulated in my absence on the subject of the simplification of the administration of the various laws affecting building in this city. Although I have only just glanced over this material, I realize its importance. It gives me great satisfaction to communicate my hearty approval of some of the valuable expressions of opinion on this subject that have appeared in your periodical and in the public press.

In the first place, I was much impressed by the excellent brief presented under date of May 26th, by Rudolph P. Miller, before the State Factory Investigating Commission. His experience in the Building Department has made his opinion invaluable and he has used his experience to good effect in this brief He not only realized the illogical character of the present subdivision and complexity of supervising and inspecting functions, but has pointed out some of the important steps that must be taken properly to co-relate these functions.

Equally important as confirming Mr. Miller's position is the testimony given by Julius Franke, architect, before the same Commission. (Mr. Franke's position was outlined in an abbreviated form in your issue of July 11th). It is interesting to find an architect of Mr. Franke's experience confirming in so many ways the point of view of the Superintendent of Buildings of the Borough of Manhattan. Mr. Franke calls attention firstly to the conflict of authority and the unnecessary complications in the enforcement of the various laws affecting buildings. Secondly, to the annoyance caused by orders issued by different departments on almost parallel subjects, and, thirdly, to the expense devolved on the property owners by some of the provisions in the law. While the last point is not one which need be considered in this connection, his suggested solutions for the first two difficulties are valuable contributions toward any careful study of the subject.

Both these authorities, as well as other correspondents of your paper, have referred to the growing need for consolidation of the various powers now delegated to the Building Department, the Fire Department, the Tenement House Department of the city and the Labor Department of the State. It appears certain that those directly interested in building matters in this city are almost unanimous on this subject. The New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects has already expressed its opinion on this matter in no uncertain terms, and I believe the Joint Committee (representing the building trades, the architects and the engineers) has also put itself on record as favoring consolidation. It now remains to be seen what steps can be taken to achieve the desired results. Perhaps the desired reforms can be brought about through amendments to the State laws prepared by the Factory Investigating Commission. It may be that an effective improvement can only be attained by means of the new charter for the City of New York, which we are told is to be prepared and discussed during the coming winter.

It is important that the ideas to be incorporated in any such new legislation should be worked out in the meanwhile with great care by the persons best qualified to work them out; namely, by the engineers, architects and builders of the city. Not only must consideration be given to the points so ably raised by Mr. Miller and Mr. Franke, but careful consideration should be given to such questions as these: Shall all building supervision powers be merely consolidated in the five Borough Building Departments, or shall there be one Department of Safety with one chief for the whole city with sub-bureaus in each borough of the city? What are to be included within the powers of that department? How can uniformity in the interpretation of the building codes or rules of the various departments be attained in all boroughs? Should not the power to revise the building code be placed in the hands of the Board of Estimate rather than the Board of Aldermen (what qualifications have the members of a Board of Aldermen to act on technical subjects like those included in a building code?) and finally, should not the Board of Examiners be distinctly a technical body, composed of experts in building and in industrial safety? Should this board have not only its present powers over building code interpretations and definitions, but also parallel powers now assigned to the Industrial Board, and have new but similar powers over the interpretations of the Tenement House Law?

ROBERT D. KOHN,
President New York Chapter
American Institute of Architects.

Harbor Improvement.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The letter of Mayor Mitchel, appointing a committee of citizens to confer with the Terminal Committee of the Board of Estimate on the scheme for comprehensive harbor improvement, contains this surprising statement: "Certain plans affecting port development have already reached a stage so far advanced that their completion and execution should not wait on the comprehensive study which will be undertaken by the Terminal Committee of the Board of Estimate and the Advisory Committee now created. These plans are that comprehending the construction of a municipal marginal freight railway along the water front of South Brooklyn and that for the elimination of surface operation by the New York Central Railroad on the west side of Manhattan Island."

Is not a scheme for comprehensive harbor improvement without reference to Manhattan's waterfront from Spuyten Duyvil to Canal street, and without reference to the Brooklyn waterfront, south of the Brooklyn Bridge, something like the play of Hamlet with the character of Hamlet omitted? Moreover, is it not news that the plans for the elimination of the surface operation of the New York Central on the west side of Manhattan "have already reached a stage so far advanced that their completion and execution should not wait" on further study, etc.? When the representatives of the property owners' organizations appeared before the Terminal Committee of the Board of Estimate, about two weeks ago and urged action, they were informed that their suggestions were inopportune, as the matter was not under consideration in any form.

Dock Commissioner Smith announced in an interview that the organizations above referred to were premature in pressing for action; the Appellate Division in the case of Hearst vs. New York Central Railroad, gave as one reason for vacating the injunction against the railroad the failure of the city officials to act on the plans submitted by the railroad company.

Can it be that the Mayor is not aware of what was said and done with reference to these plans proposed by the Sub-Committee of the Board of Estimate of which he was chairman at the meeting, after he resigned from the Board of Estimate? It is impossible to suppose that he is not acquainted with the opinion of the Corporation Counsel which, according to the City Record, was read at that meeting and with the variance between the views therein expressed and the assumptions of the subcommittee as to the ownership of the land occupied by the tracks of the railroad north of 59th street, how can it then be claimed that this question is so near settlement that it cannot await the report of the Committee of Citizens? On the contrary, the interests affected by the settlement of this West Side problem are so numerous and conflicting that the fullest and freest discussion should be allowed and citizens should be urged to bring forward their plans and suggestions so that a plan may finally be agreed upon, not only for the benefit of the railroad, not only for the benefit of the merchant, not only for the benefit of the various local property owners' associations, but also for the benefit of the whole Greater New York.

J. BLEECKER MILLER.

Real Estate Mortgages.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

What will be the effect of the European War on real estate and mortgages? At best, one can only hazard a guess, the wish being father to the thought. Up to the time of actual hostilities, there was a strong promise of revival of business, due to general confidence, based on the settlement of the currency, and other important questions and the production of a crop that generously out-rivaled previous years. It may safely be assumed that Europe's loss is our gain. With agriculture at a standstill, and the loom silent, America will be called on to supply Continental Europe with its bread-stuffs, and wearing material, so that gold must necessarily flow from debtor to creditor. Our lack of ships for transportation purposes will not prove an insurmountable obstacle, as necessity drives, and means will be found.

Our isolated position, and freedom from entangling alliances, gives us command of the world's affairs, as all foreign nations must necessarily turn to us for their sustenance. Our trade will be unusually stimulated and the immense proceeds will be invested in the most stable of securities—real estate mortgages. The American market will find a ready outlet, not only for its bread-stuffs, but also for its iron, steel and the many other commodities essential for the reconstruction of the railways and bridges. Materially the war will prove a great benefit to us.

With our finances under control, the productions of Europe suspended, and our ability to supply the deficiencies of the Old World, an era of unparalleled prosperity ought surely set in. Real estate is here to stay. It is stable and fixed, and its ultimate value cannot be affected by foreign issues. As a consequence real estate mortgages when based on conservative percentage, are the safest investments and least liable to harmful fluctuations.

Real estate may depreciate, but there is always sufficient equity left, if loans are conservative, to secure the investment. Mortgages are permanent, not readily negotiable, like bonds and stocks, and they stay in a family longer than money. The influence of war on the money market is only temporary. Money cannot longer remain idle. It is better to lend on bond and mortgages when prices are low than during a boom period. The intelligent lender will not jeopardize his principal for the sake of securing a temporary advantage. Even in these times of depression the writer has secured for numerous property owners, many loans, both large and small to the entire satisfaction of both borrower and lender, thus presenting an object lesson that money is plentiful, for safe and sane mortgage investments.

When export sets in, there will be a rush for investment. It would prove judicious to remind real estate interests of the advisability of continued co-operation. It would be well to merge the various departments under one head, so as to minimize the persecution, to which owners of real estate are now subject. The owner is put to great difficulty and expense in complying with the many and diverse requirements of each and every department. There are now a number of departments, with practically the same functions, to wit: Bureau of Fire Prevention, Health Department, Tenement House Department, Police Department, Department of Electricity, Gas and Water and License Bureau. All of the Departments should consolidate under one responsible head, so that an owner of property will not have to meet conflicting orders.

As a summary, real estate conditions are encouraging and the mortgage market promises results this early autumn that will surprise even the most optimistic. The entire world will soon be our debtor, and the deluge of money will find a multitude of investors, who will turn to real estate mortgage as their Mecca. It has been well said by one of the officers of a well-known loaning institution, that the intrinsic value of New York City real estate, both present and prospective is such, as to make it exceptional security for loans or mortgage, and there is no reason why a holder of a normally margined first mortgage on such security, even in the present crisis, should feel disturbed.

JOHN FINCK.

Moving Buildings.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

When it is desired to move a building from one site to another what is necessary to be done? Must a permit be obtained and are any other requirements necessary? INFORMATION.

Various conditions are imposed upon those desiring to move buildings. Often it is necessary to obtain consents of the adjacent property owners. Usually it is forbidden to move frame building within the fire limits. The grantee must file a bond with the city as security against damage to the city or other property. In some cities the moving must be done by regularly licensed house movers. In Greater New York the several borough presidents are authorized to grant permits for moving buildings through or across public highways. A penalty of $250 is imposed in cases of violation of the ordinance requiring the obtaining of permits.

TURN IN THE TIDE.

Real Estate Once Again in the Ascendency—Money Plentiful for New Operations.

ADOLPH BLOCH, a member of the Advisory Council of Real Estate interests, and of the Board of Counsel of the United Real Estate Owners' Associations, in speaking of the effect of the European war upon real estate in this city, said:

"I see no cause for alarm. The ruthless slaughter of perhaps hundreds of thousands of men and the destruction of billions of dollars of property cannot be viewed except with horror, and should not be weighed in the balance with materialistic things. The immediate result should be that the United States will find a tremendous market for the products of its fields and factories. We will have to feed Europe, supply its necessaries, handle the commerce of, and probably finance the world.

"The country was never better equipped to assume so huge a task than it is just at this time. Its crops are unprecedented, its financial condition has recently been vastly improved by beneficial laws, and its enterprises were never on a more conservative basis.

"Real estate is just emerging from a great depression caused by the financial crisis, over-speculation and oppressive legislation and regulation. Its progress cannot now be checked, especially with the booming of our industries, which must inevitably follow through the requirements of the European war. The late panic, while disastrous to many who held their property insecurely, has left conservative owners and mortgagees safer than before. It has taught the expensive lesson against over-speculation, that a man should not own two houses when he can afford to own only one, and should have a smaller rather than a larger mortgage on his property. New York City real estate conservatively held and managed still affords the best security for the small investor, especially if it receives the personal attention of the owner.

"I find renting conditions better now than for a long time past. It is not unusual that in an ownership of ten or twelve houses in different parts of the city, there is not a single vacancy. Mortgage money hitherto available has been ample to meet all conservative demands. I am certain that all proper mortgage requirements will be promptly and sufficiently met, regardless of foreign wars.

"Owners and others interested in real estate are better organized than ever before, with capable leaders and representatives who are doing splendid, intelligent, constructive work. There are usually two sides to every question. This is none the less true in matters affecting regulation and ownership of real property. If unrestricted, it may amount, and there are many cases on record where it has actually been tantamount to confiscation; and there is assuredly another side, oftimes lost sight of by some owners.

"As a matter of moral obligation, as well as sound business judgment, it is the best policy to keep houses up to a high standard of repair. It always pays to make improvements voluntarily that add to the safety, health and comfort of the occupants, thus avoiding the intervention of the municipal departments. The inspector finding some cause for complaint, frequently issues an order unnecessarily drastic and expensive of compliance, and involving numerous inspections. It has always been my idea that necessary reforms should be instituted by the owners themselves before conditions became such that compulsory legislation be enacted. I find now, more than ever before, that the municipal authorities are willing and even anxious, to recognize and consider the owners' side. Today it is generally recognized that our real estate and its value must be conserved, for it is the chief, indeed, almost the only appreciable, source of the city's revenue.

"I feel particularly optimistic regarding property in the Yorkville section. On Fifth avenue high-class business has already made its march of progress northward to practically 59th street, and beyond this is the finest residence street in the world. The vast improvements now under way and projected in the Grand Central Terminal zone will prove nothing less than a transformation. Madison avenue, receiving its impetus from the Brooks Brothers building at 44th street, is bound to be one of the greatest retail streets in the city.

"Park avenue, from 42nd to 96th streets, is already one of the great apartment house avenues of the city. Lexington avenue, when the subway is in operation, will throb with business activity; so will Third avenue.

"One of the greatest crosstown thoroughfares will be 86th street, already a prominent street, with its banks, theatres, clubs and business establishments; what its future will be, with its subway express station, and, as has just been announced, its express elevated station at Second avenue, requires no vivid imagination to foretell. All the side streets and the avenues east of Third will experience in generous measure the same beneficial effects.

"No, this is not the time for pessimism, rather one for cheerful optimism. The war now raging in Europe cannot arrest the city's development. There is a plethora of money. During the depression millions have been, and now are deposited in savings banks and trust companies, simply for security, not investment. This money will slowly but surely find its way, as has been the case in the past, in good New York City real estate and first mortgages, safer by far than fluctuating stocks and bonds controlled by manipulations unknown to the investor.

"Confidence in real estate as an investment, upon which a fair return may safely be expected, depends in no small measure upon the soundness of our laws. We have great economic problems, far-reaching in their effect, that have to be solved by our state and municipal officials. Public officials are doing the best they can. It is the duty, and should be regarded as the privilege, of every owner of real estate or of its mortgages, to interest himself in public questions and to assist and co-operate with the officials honestly and fairly in reaching a correct solution, one just to all that may be interested therein. This can be done individually or through representatives in our realty owners' associations and committees.

"It is a long road that has no turning, and I think the turn for the better in real estate has arrived, regardless of foreign wars."

Safety of Mortgages.

As to the present and future effect the European war may have on the New York real estate market, Harry A. Kahler, President of the New York Title Insurance Co., entertains optimistic views.

"It is obvious," said Mr. Kahler, "that the magnitude of the present European struggle is without precedent. It is therefore impracticable to forecast with certainty the effects of the war on the market for New York City mortgages. Our whole country must share some of the burdens resulting from the great destruction of men and wealth. But the freedom of the United States from entangling alliances stands out in this crisis with greater clearness than ever before. Our national isolation may now be turned into a great asset. The resulting opportunities for American commerce will be extraordinary. It also seems certain that New York City must take its position as a world financial center. These different forces will all make for further growth of New York City and add to the general stability of its real estate values.

"There is no disposition on the part of the New York Mortgage and Security Company to press borrowers for payment of loans. It is surely better to lend money on bond and mortgage when values are low, than during a period of great activity and high prices. Financial institutions generally throughout the country will avoid fresh commitments until there have been the necessary readjustments to enable borrowers and lenders alike to determine what shall be the price of credit under the new conditions. It is probable that the making of building loans, particularly, will be discontinued temporarily.

"The intrinsic value of New York City real estate, both present and prospective, is such as to make it exceptional security for loans on mortgage, and there is no reason why any holder of a normally margined first mortgage on such security, even in the present crisis, should feel disturbed."

Landmarks Now Memories.

A number of residences in Varick street were recently demolished which, if they could have been retained, would have been interesting memorials of the early history of our city. Operations in connection with the widening of this street into a one-hundred-foot thoroughfare to connect with Seventh avenue at Eleventh street have made the sacrifice necessary. Many of these buildings were of great interest to artists, architects and historians, as in style they were perfect types of urban Colonial architecture and much of the history of the city and country was made in the Greenwich Village section of the city.

Three old houses have lately been demolished which have long stood as reminders of the past glories of Greenwich Village and which from an architectural viewpoint embodied the best design of the period. They stood on the southeast corner of Varick and Beach streets where for many years they attracted the attention of students and artists by their simple yet dignified lines and beautiful proportions. The entrances of these houses in particular were much admired by the passing visitor to the neighborhood. Their slender doorposts surmounted with Doric capitals and the simple designs in the graceful archways over the doorways were the characteristic features of the architecture of the time.

The interiors of these residences received a treatment more elaborate in style but combining the best architecture of the time with good taste and judgment into a harmonious ensemble. The parlors usually were adorned at one end with columns with Doric capitals enameled in white and the mantels were for the most part of white marble carved in high relief. Many of the best of these mantels, doors, etc., have been saved from the wreckers and will be reset in modern homes.

To Extend Industrial Education.

The National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education is planning to raise a large sum of money during the coming month, to go toward the expenses of the organization for the next five years. The committee is to raise $100,000 in New York City alone, and other committees will be formed in various big cities throughout the country.

The members of the society believe that the worker must be trained to work and that the State should train him. In a democratic country, they say, education is one of the most important functions of the State. A worker who is not trained to work is not educated. The State should give him the broadest mental equipment possible in the given time, and at the same time fit him for more or less specialized work.

There is abundant provision, the society feels, for the youth who can take long years of schooling to prepare for a profession; public funds and private endowments are at his disposal. But the boy or girl who would be trained for the trades, the industries or the household has hitherto been left to his or her own devices, with lamentable result.

There is an ever-growing demand, however, for industrial education. Labor unions, manufacturers' associations, social workers, educators, citizens in general are aware of this great need. Industrial schools are springing up all over the country, and it is confidently believed that they will receive Federal aid. For the prosperity of the country depends largely on the efficiency of its workers, and the more adequate their technical training, the more successful they will naturally be.

The National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education is a centralizing agency where those who have special knowledge of industrial education bring that knowledge and make it generally available. Its committees are at work on such problems as those of legislation, work for girls and women, industrial and trade schools, practical part-time schools and evening industrial schools, endeavoring, by legislative and educational means, to raise the general standard of industrial efficiency.

Old Holdings of City.

Battery Park, comprising about twenty-one acres, became city property in 1686 and 1730 under the Dongan and Montgomery charters. Under the same grants, the city acquired Jeanette park at 1 Coenties slip, Bowling Green about one-half acre in size, Rutgers park at Rutgers slip; Catherine park at the foot of Catherine slip; Canal street park at Canal and West streets; four and one-half acres of the present Madison square park, and about 5 acres of the present Bryant park.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Improvement of the northwest corner of Park avenue and 54th street with a twelve-story apartment house, foreshadowed by its lease by the New York Realty & Terminal Company to builders, was the principal item of interest in the brokerage reports of the current week. The concensus of opinion of well-informed men identified with the real estate market, in all its branches, confirms the reports already printed in the Record and Guide concerning the stability of realty in Greater New York and its environs. Local owners need have no fear that their holdings will be seriously affected by the European upheaval, the period of panic having passed. Loaning institutions are taking a broad view of the situation and will be chary about calling in overdue loans. While no immediate uplift in the sales market is anticipated, still the lack of forced sales is an indication of the underlying strength of the market. Loans on properties, having a good equity are obtainable at reasonable rates, for at the present time there is a plentiful supply of currency

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 9, as against 18 last week and 17 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 4, as compared with 6 last week and 7 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 5, as compared with 12 last week and 10 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 120, as against 149 last week 14 having stated considerations totaling $1,380,450. Mortgages recorded this week number 61, involving $1,339,- 807, as against 77 last week, aggregating $1,431,798.

From the Bronx 8 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 5 last week and 3 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $745,263, compared with $1,803,441 last week, making a total since January 1 of $27,896,813. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $600,558, and the total from January 1, 1913, to August 16, 1913, was $37,820,857.

Madison Avenue Block Re-Sold.

One time Governor William M. Brown of Pennsylvania has re-sold the two eleven-story apartment houses on plot 200x90, occupying the block front on the east side of Madison avenue, from 82d to 83d streets. The buyers are said to be Brooklyn investors who gave in part payment a large tract in Plainfield, N. J. The Madison avenue houses were acquired by Mr. Brown last April from the builders. In the purchase of the houses he gave the builders 2,000 lots near Garden City, L. I., known as Stewart Manor, in a deal which involved about $2,000,000.

Builders Enlarge Plot.

Stuyvesant Wainwright sold to the Swan-Brown Company the three-story dwelling, 108 East 55th street, on lot 18.9 x 100, which gives the buyer control of a plot 108.9 feet in 55th street and 100.5 feet on Park avenue. This plot will be improved with a twelve-story apartment house from plans by Cross & Cross, the facade of which will correspond with that of the apartment house recently completed by the Swan-Brown Company on the same block, at the northeast corner of Park avenue and 54th street.

E. A. Kerbs Sells "Benmore."

The Nason Realty Company, Max N. Natanson, president, has purchased the "Benmore," a six-story elevator apartment house at 449 to 453 West 123d street, on plot 75 x 111, from Edward A. Kerbs. Title passed to the buyer on Tuesday. The seller acquired the property last month for $109,000 as plaintiff in foreclosure proceedings, as the result of an action brought against the New York Real Estate Security Company.

23d Street Warehouse in Deal.

Contracts are about to be signed for the sale by the United States Express Company of its stables and warehouses at 553-557 West 23d street extending to 540-550 West 24th street, a plot 75 ft. in each street and 197.6 ft. deep. The land is under lease from the Clement C. Moore estate. The brokers are Colin M. Eadie and James N. Wells' Sons.

Manhattan—South of 59th Street.

SOUTH ST.—Jacob Wollenstein sold to Samuel Brody, through William A. White & Sons, the 5-sty commercial building at 177 South st, northeast corner of Roosevelt st, on plot 31.4x84.

19TH ST.—Frederick J. Sterver is reported to have resold his 3-sty residence and studio at 139 East 19th st, on lot 23x75, which has been held at $50,000. Mr. Sterner recently purchased the two dwellings at 154-156 East 63d st, which he is converting into one.

Manhattan—North of 59th Street.

76TH ST.—John R. Higbie has sold through the F. R. Wood, W. H. Dolson Co., the 4-sty dwelling, 158 West 76th st, on lot 20.10x102.2.

97TH ST.—Alice Beck has purchased from Henry W. Vought the 3-sty dwelling, 35 West 97th st, on lot 17.6x100.8.

113TH ST.—The 501 West 113th Corporation, with a capital of $10,000, and Edward A. Powers, John A. Terry and Louis J. Zanderer, directors, has been incorporated to take over from Hannah Elias, the 5-sty apartment house, at the northwest corner of Amsterdam av and 113th st, on plot 50.11x100.

128TH ST.—The D. H. Jackson Co. bought from the estate of Karl Stein 73, 75 and 77 West 128th st, 3 and 5-sty flats, on a plot 57x100. Derschuch & Co., and Goodale, Perry & Dwight were the brokers.

Bronx.

REAL ESTATE APPRAISALS.

The following valuations were placed on real estate properties this week by the State appraisers in transfer tax proceedings. The amount specified does not in every case indicate the equity or interest of the decedent. It simply quotes the estimated market value of the realty, regardless of mortgages or other liens:

MARGARET G. PHILIPSE.—17-19 West 17th st, $180,000, and 171-173 Macdougal st, $80,000.

OBITUARY

FREDERICK L. DAYTON, for 22 years associated with the Manhattan office of the British Foreign Marine Insurance Co., died, aged 67, on Monday, at his home, 2 Waterbury st, Richmond Hill. He is survived by a widow and one daughter.

JAMES B. LORING, registrar of the Equitable Life Assurance Society until his retirement 11 years ago, died on Monday at his home, 18 Cranberry st, Brooklyn. He was 77 years old.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Apartment house properties figured prominently in the Auction Mart this week. "Halcyon Hall," at 408 West 150th street, formerly owned by the New York Real Estate & Security Co., became the property of John G. Moore and others, on a bid of $105,000, as the result of a foreclosure action brought to recover $110,000. The "Bellmore" at 605 West 115th street was at foreclosure and acquired by the plaintiff on a single bid for $79,314. The action was brought by Abraham Davis and others against G. R. Smith and others to satisfy a judgment of $12,405. There were also taxes and other liens against the property totaling $1,000.

An outside bidder, Arthur M. Wilner, obtained the three tenements at the southwest corner of Lexington avenue and 108th street, for $40,325. The buildings were sold to recover a judgment of about $10,000 due on a second mortgage. The property carried a prior mortgage of $36,000.

Light Your Halls

Twenty inspectors have recently been detailed by the Tenement House Department to see that hallways of apartment and tenement houses are lighted at night in accordance with the law.

The law reads that there shall be a light at night in the lower hall and one in the hall on the second floor. Many owners and occupants of tenement buildings unconsciously violate these provisions because of an inadequate method of controlling the light.

If you feel that the hallways of the buildings you own or occupy are inadequately lighted or the lighting improperly controlled we shall be pleased to render you any assistance in our power.

Write us and one of our lighting experts will show you how electric light will not only protect you against law-violation, but he will prove to you that it's the most economical form of lighting for hallways.

BUREAU OF BUILDINGS—MANHATTAN.

Marquises and Awnings.

Marquises or awnings may be erected across the sidewalk, in connection with entrances to buildings, provided they are not less than ten feet above the sidewalk, are constructed of iron and glass or other incombustible materials, are supported entirely and securely from the building, and are properly drained. (Second paragraph, Section "d," Bulletin No. 1 of 1911; Bulletin No. 23 of 1911; and Bulletin No. 48 of 1912 are hereby rescinded.)

ALFRED LUDWIG,
Superintendent of Buildings.

Bulletin 13.
Dated July 15, 1914.

BUREAU OF BUILDINGS—BROOKLYN.

Modifies Section 21.

A modification of Section 21 of the elevator rules and regulations, to substitute adequate and substantial helical buffer springs for the required oil buffers, is hereby made and approved under the following conditions, viz:

2. When the speed of car is more than 350 feet per minute, oil buffers will be required.

When the speed of car is 350 feet or less per minute, helical buffer springs will be accepted.

P. J. CARLIN, Superintendent.
General Order No. 25.
May 11, 1914

Brick Partition Walls.

On and after June 1, 1914, all plans submitted to this Bureau must comply strictly with the following paragraph of Section 31 of the Building Code:

"Brick Partition Walls—All non-fireproof dwelling houses erected under this section, exceeding 25 feet in width, shall have brick fore-and-aft partition walls. All non-bearing walls of buildings hereinbefore in this section specified may be 4 inches in thickness, provided, however, that none are less than 12 inches thick, except as in this code specified.

"Eight-inch brick partition walls may be built to support the beams in such buildings in which the distance between the main or bearing walls is not over 33 feet; if the distance between the main or bearing walls is over 33 feet, the brick partition wall shall not be less than 12 inches thick; provided, that no clear span is over 26 feet. No wall shall be built having any one thickness measuring vertically more than 50 feet.

P. J. CARLIN, Superintendent.
General Order No. 26.
May 15, 1914.

MATERIALS APPROVED.

"B. G. & B." Block.

The 2-inch plaster block bearing the brand mark "B. G. & B.," manufactured by B. Goetz & Bro., 1492 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, has this day been approved for use in this borough. Sample of this block can be seen in the laboratory.

Cement Wash Tray.

The cement wash tray manufactured by the Standard Wash Tray Works of New Haven, Conn., having passed the requirements of this Bureau, has this day been approved for general use in this borough.

P. J. CARLIN, Superintendent.
General Order 24.

Partitions.

The 2-inch solid reinforced partition with ½-inch plaster board core in centre, as manufactured by Gerard Geraerdts, 1433 Boone avenue, Bronx, is hereby approved as Fireproof Partitions in Fireproof Buildings in the Borough of Brooklyn. Except for hall partitions and elevator enclosures or vertical shaft enclosure walls.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

VALUE OF AN APPRAISER TO PURCHASER

By J. W. MOOYER

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for the American Real Estate Co.

THE question asked of me, in the final analysis, resolves itself into the query, "Why is an appraiser?" The query having its present pertinence as applied to purchases of, and loans upon, loft buildings. There is probably no other class of real property in the handling of which the services of a competent appraiser are more vital. Loft property, probably more than any other class, is affected beneficially or adversely by neighborhood development and changes, and by the trend of the city's growth, these may not result in an accretion of land values, which will offset the inevitable deterioration of the buildings which comes not alone from ordinary wear and tear, but because of the improved modern construction and facilities of the newer buildings.

There are many classes of loft buildings, the old five and six-story, located principally in lower part of the city, then the seven and eight-story, and the newer ones, ten, eleven, twelve and higher, situated chiefly in the midtown section. The newer buildings, with their fireproof construction, greater conveniences, better light and elevator service, inevitably draw tenants from the older buildings. In some cases these vacancies have been replaced without loss to net income and without expensive alterations, in some cases structural changes and increased facilities have resulted in the maintenance of the normal income, while in others the migrations to new quarters have resulted in severe and permanent reduction of income, and therefore of selling and loaning value.

Appraiser Must be Posted.

It is the business of the appraiser not only to keep fully posted of neighborhood changes and developments, but also upon structural changes, the character and kind of facilities and service demanded by tenants in different localities, and in so far as humanly possible, to forecast the development and changes of the immediate and distant future.

An appraiser must divorce himself from preconceived ideas and prejudices so as to enable him to take into account all diverse conditions, present and future, which have an effect upon the actual value of the property under consideration. It is not lack of ability but lack of application and continuous broad experience which makes it almost impossible for the ordinary loaner and purchaser to take into full account all the favorable conditions and influences, present and prospective.

Older Loft Structures.

Interest in a property may inevitably and in accordance with human nature result in some influence on personal judgment of values, however conservative and wise a man may be he may not entirely divorce his judgment from his interests, the appraiser is not concerned in either a high or a low valuation, his chief and most carefully guarded asset is his reputation for accuracy, for the dependability of his estimate of value, his sources of information are wide and varied, the client may disregard his opinion and go ahead on his own judgment, but at any rate he has the benefit of an absolutely unbiased and disinterested opinion of valuation, and can operate with an added factor of safety.

In examining the older loft buildings, the appraiser must take into consideration that they are mostly non-fireproof, and that the elevator service is generally poor in comparison with modern buildings, but he must also consider the possibility and cost of improvements and their effect upon net income.

J. W. MOOYER.

Vacancies have resulted in many cases where certain classes of trade have occupied given buildings. If conditions are properly understood changes can be made and the structures filled by an entirely different class of tenants, with no loss of income.

In the more modern buildings not only the value of the land and cost of the buildings affect the appraiser's estimate of value, but he must give attention to the number and location of elevators, both passenger and freight, the possibility of sub-dividing floors, with the least possible loss of space, the adaptability to certain classes of business, shipping facilities, traffic conditions, the presence or absence of sprinkler systems —net rental received, suitability of the building for the locality, the amount of competing floor space in the section, that is, the question as to whether or not the locality is over built or is likely to become so in the near future.

If a building is to be permanently profitable to its owner it must be profitable to the tenants, the building must be fitted to its locality and to the uses of those who are expected to occupy it. A hand-power hoist in an old five-story twenty-foot building may be adequate for the needs of the tenants, not every tenant needs all of the facilities of the modern buildings, but large floor areas in high buildings demand modern elevator service well located both for passenger service and for loading and unloading on the freight elevators.

Value of Appraisers.

In short, the competent appraiser must take into consideration many elements and conditions which at first glance seem to be no part of his business, and appraiser's services are not only valuable in the case of existing loft buildings, he may even be highly beneficial to the one contemplating the erection of such a structure. The appraiser's experience in his observation of the results, in the net income, from loft buildings in many sections, and of varying types and cubic contents has given him a fund of invaluable information as to the relative percentage of returns, to be obtained from loft buildings of different characters. For instance, in some localities, the erection of a six-story loft building on a lot 25 feet x 100 feet would be a profitable undertaking. Whereas, in others the best results would call for a building twelve stories or higher on a plot at least 50 feet x 100 feet.

Scores of details enter into the problem to determine the percentage of net profit, or percentage of loss, on one operation. It is the opinion of many that the services of a competent and fully disinterested appraiser are as desirable, and even necessary to assure the true value of the property, as the policy of a guarantee company to insure the title or of a fire insurance company to provide against disaster by conflagration.

CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the Northwest Electric Light & Power Association will be held at Spokane, Wash., September 8 to 11. In connection with this convention an electrical show is being arranged by M. C. Osborne, commercial manager of the Washington Water Power Company.

The Pacific Coast meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers is to be held in Spokane at the same time as the Northwest Association convention. There will be one joint session between the societies.

The Northwest Association has arranged the following program of papers: "Rates and Physical Valuation," by W. W. Cotton; "A Balance of Stores System for Utility Companies," by Edward A. West; "Outdoor Type of Transformer Stations," by J. C. Martin; "Rates: A Resume and Comparison of Rate Theories," by Stacy Hamilton; "Extension of Electric Service into Small Country Communities and Rural Districts," by M. C. Osborne and J. C. Davidson; "Wrinkles," by P. A. Bertrand; "Electric Development on the Pacific Coast," by W. E. Herring; "Electric Appliances," by W. B. Pierce; "Organization and Operation of Branch Offices and Plants," by Lewis A. McArthur; "Public-Policy Review," by F. T. Post.

The following papers will be presented at the sessions of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers: "A Distribution System for Power Purposes," by F. D. Nims; "Electrical Application in the Lumber Industry," by E. F. Whitney; "Operation of the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific 24,000-Volt Direct-Current Railway," by J. B. Cox and C. A. Lemmon; "Considerations in the Control and Application of Electric Motors for Gold Dredges," by Girard B. Rosenblatt; "The Effect of Delta and Star Connections Upon Transformer Wave Forms," by Leslie F. Curtis; "Transmission Economy," by Magnus T. Crawford; "The Big Creek Development of the Pacific Light & Power Corporation," by Edward Woodbury; "Telephony," by A. H. Griswold.

Loading Platform Problem.

Borough President Marcus M. Marks has requested a number of the representative architects of the city to cooperate with him in his endeavor to solve the loading platform problem. A letter was recently sent to a number of architects by Mr. Marks in which he states "It will be difficult to improve the situation concerning loading platforms already in existence, and which are declared to be illegal, but with the help of the architects the evil can be prevented from spreading."

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Time Annihilator in Construction.

PRACTICALLY every sub contractor working on a building has to break through floors, partitions and walls of concrete, hollow tile or partition block, brick, architectural terra cotta or stone.

To put a man at this work with a cold chisel and hammer is to invite considerable consumption in time, which is costly. To overcome this there is being introduced on the market by the Orr & Lockett Hardware Co., Chicago, the handy tool illustrated herewith. This appliance is made to strike a great many blows a minute, the speed depending upon the rapidity with which the handle is turned. The action of the hammer is by centrifugal force to the elimination of springs, rubber or leather buffers, cushions, etc. It is made in a variety of styles and sizes to meet all classes of work. It may be purchased either for hand or electric power and is invaluable for use in caulking, surfacing, chipping or boring. The power strokes can be regulated to conform to the requirements of the material that is being worked on, the strokes being approximately 1,000 a minute. The picture shows the drill hammer at work. There is a long adjusting rod. The lower end of this is allowed to rest upon the floor while the other end is applied to the work. As the controlling handle is turned it takes up the slack made by the gnawing done by the cutter and at the same operation the intensity of the stroke may be diminished or increased.

A Non-Spattering Shower.

INVENTORS have been seeking for years to find some sort of a shower bath that will prevent spattering of water all over the bathroom floor and at the same time provide the bather with the luxury of the shower, but it seems to have remained with the Oswald Manufacturing Company, of Fullerton, Pa., to bring out a jet bath that will accomplish all the foregoing results. The construction is simple. It consist of two nickle-plated shower pipes that are suspended along the upper inside edge of the tub and connected with the faucet by means of rubber tubing. When the water is turned on there is a copious flow from both sides of the tub directly on the bather. The shower can be converted into an invigorating needle spray by simply turning on the shower faucet. No rubber hood or curtain is required as the water will not touch the head unless desired and cannot spatter upon the floor. The shower pipes are easily cleaned.

Interlocking Tile Test.

SOME time ago D. A. Abrams and A. N. Talbot conducted at the University of Illinois, an exhaustive test of the strength of the Denison interlocking hollow tile and the two illustrations presented herewith show how the material behaved under the fearful strains put upon them. In addition to tests of the tile in the wall itself, tests were made of individual specimens in a manner much like the test made by the government. There were five wall specimens one foot thick, three feet wide and ten feet high. Three were entirely of tile, and two carried a four-inch veneer of building brick. The specimens were loaded to failure in a compression test after they had been laid up thirty-four days. The tile were furnished by the Clay Product Company, of Chicago, and were taken out of stock. The walls were laid in one-third Portland cement mortar with a small quantity of hydrated lime. The result of the test is shown in the two pictures. The first one shows the tile in place in the machine, the second after it had sustained a load of 211,400 pounds before breaking as shown.

Pile Driving Under Apartments.

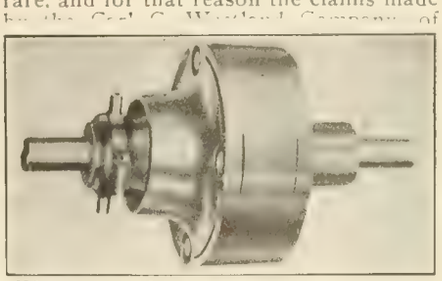
IT has been said that almost anything can happen to a building in New York. Consequently anything can happen in the way of making repairs. Therefore, when a large apartment house in the Bronx began to settle at one end, heroic measures had to be taken to keep the building from collapsing. The worst part of this emergency was in the fact that the settling occurred in different parts of the lot so that if something had not been done the house literally would have been divided against itself and would have been unable to stand. This is what occurred and what was done to correct it according to the Engineering Record:



Where the walls were in very bad condition the portions below the street floor, involving in all about 6,000 cubic feet of stone work and 600 feet of brick work, were removed down to the tops of the piles and 50 new steel piles 9 inches in diameter were driven in staggered rows, one in each face of the wall, to clear the old wooden piles. These piles are made of steel pipes driven in 10-foot sections, with cast-steel conical points. They are driven by a 1,000-pound Goubert steam hammer suspended from the needle beams by a differential hoist. When down to rock they are concreted, their tops capped with ¾-inch steel plates and connected by a concrete girder 2½ feet wide and 3 feet high, continuous through the full length of the wall, and bearing on both the new and old piles. The bottom of this girder is reinforced by four ¾-inch longitudinal twisted rods and by transverse rods 6 inches apart on centers. Concrete is made 1:2:4 with Atlas Portland cement.

Before driving the new piles the muck with which the cellars were back-filled was either shoveled outdoors or was thrown to different parts of the building to expose the original surface of the ground, below which pits were sheeted down about 4 feet to a depth of 1 foot below ground-water level.

New Type of Coupling.

CLUTCHES and couplings that are dependable, not only in an emergency but in ordinary machine overload, are said by machinists to be extremely rare, and for that reason the claims made by the Cook Co. Worcester Company, of Worcester, Mass., for a new type of coupling and clutch are at least worthy of note. The general design of the clutch is shown in the cut. The manufacturers claim that it combines the coupling and clutch which is an advantage in close pump work in building basements where room has to be conserved and shaft room is likely to be at a premium. The coupler shown appears to have great strength and certainly the principle of split-clutch does not permit of slipping under heavy load.

Apartment House Building on Washington Heights. One Operation to Cost $1,300,000 and House 390 Families.

DURING the last few months plans have been prepared for many new apartment houses on the upper West Side of Manhattan, which will represent an expenditure of several million dollars. One of the largest operations about to be started, which will furnish homes for nearly four hundred families, will be erected by the Hudson View Construction Company, 189 Broadway, of which Henry Friedman is president. There will be nine houses in the group, three being situated in the north side of 160th street, between Riverside drive and Fort Washington avenue; three in the south side of 161st street, and three in the north side of 161st street, between Fort Washington avenue and Riverside drive.

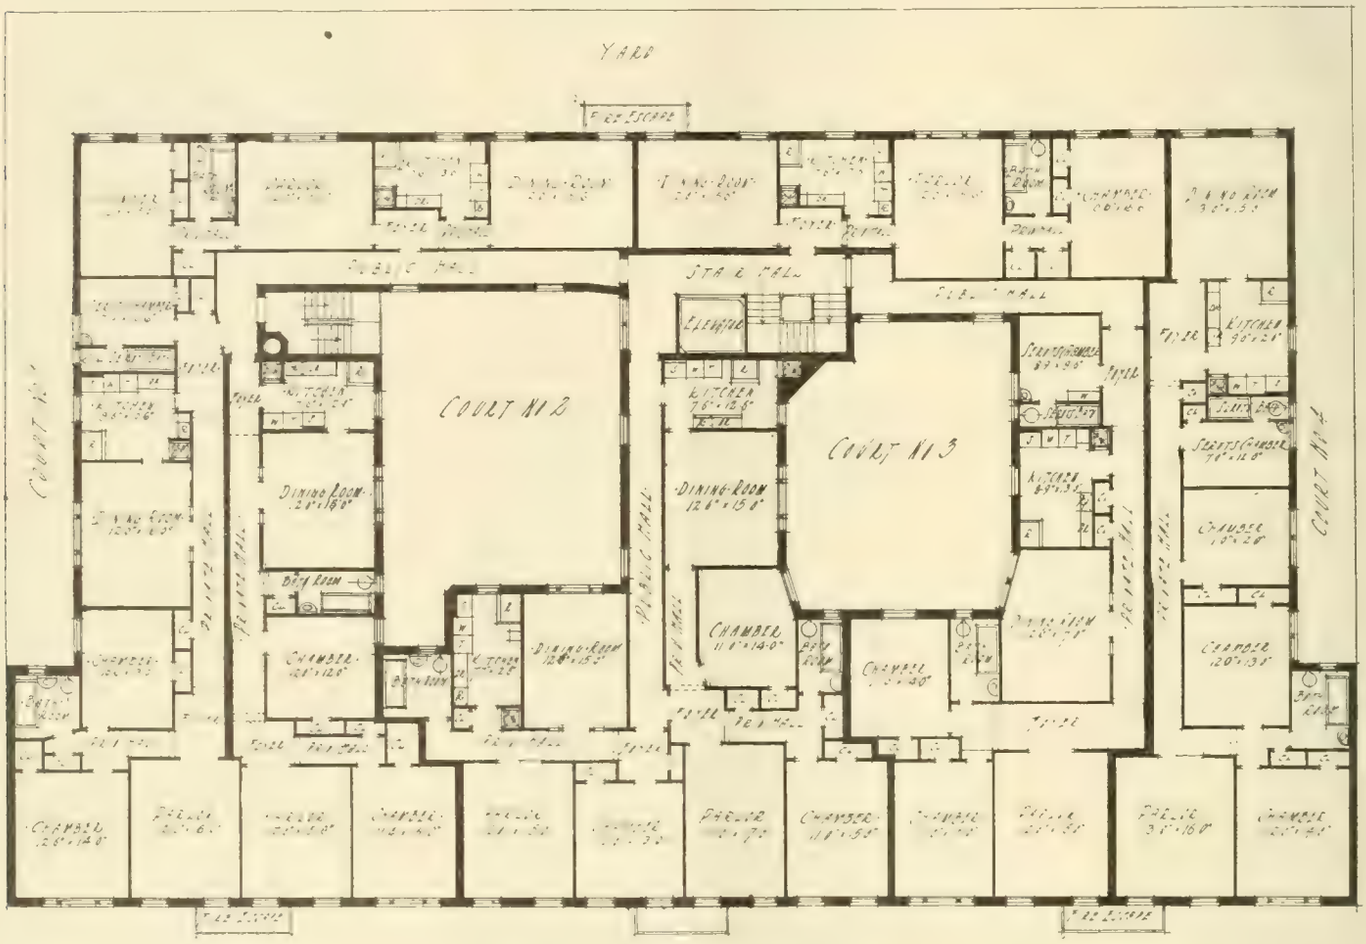
Seven of the buildings have dimensions of 125x86.1 feet, containing in all apartments for forty-two families each, of three, four, five and six rooms. Two buildings have frontages of 150 feet with eight apartments on a floor, a total number of 242 rooms in each house or quarters for forty-eight families each.

The main bed-chamber of each apartment is located to the front with baths between, and the suites have short private halls and large foyers. The entrance hall is 15 feet, taking in the full width of the wing between courts No. 2 and No. 3, with walls finished in Caen stone and marble with an Elizabethian style plaster ceiling. A feature of this hall is the non-appearance of both the main stairs to the apartments and upper stories. There will be no gas used and all appointments will be of the best.

Limestone facing will be used to the second story, trimmed with terra cotta above. The buildings are divided into three sections with the elevator centrally located so as to decrease long halls leading to apartments. The estimated cost of construction alone is $1,300,000, and work is to be completed ready for occupancy by September 1, 1915.

Excavating is already under way at the northeast corner of Riverside drive and 160th street, and the southeast corner of 161st street for two similar apartments which the Melvin Construction Company will erect ready for occupancy by May 1, 1915. The estimated cost is placed at about $550,000. Harold Lawrence Young, 1204 Broadway, who is the architect for the entire number of buildings mentioned, also lately designed the "Ronda" at the southwest corner of Fort Washington avenue and 161st street; the "Manfried Court," northeast corner of Fort Washington avenue and 161st street; "Chateau D'Armes," southeast corner of Fort Washington avenue and 161st street, and "Chambold Court," southeast corner of Fort Washington avenue and 162d street. All these houses were constructed by the Friedman Construction Company, the "Ronda" being the latest completed. The buildings have all been sold.

The Haven Construction Company, Charles Flaum, president, 215 Audubon avenue, will erect three five-story apartments at Northern avenue and 180th street, from plans by Benjamin W. Levitan, 20 West 31st street. Donald Robertson, a well-known builder, has plans for a six-story house at Audubon avenue, northwest corner of 185th street, from plans by Schwartz & Gross.



The Tralow Realty Corporation, 1931 Broadway, will erect two five-story apartments at the southwest corner of Audubon avenue and 191st street, from plans by Neville & Bagge, 217 West 125th street. The Loyal Building Company, 391 East 149th street, a six-story apartment on the east side of Bradhurst avenue, south of 151st street, from plans by Frankfort & Kirschner, 830 Westchester avenue.

Chicago Cement Show for 1915.

The management of the Chicago Cement Show, which will be held February 10 to 17, 1915, reports that from present indications the 1915 show will be a success from every viewpoint and that wide interest has been manifested by both exhibitors and the trade who make it a practice to attend these annual exhibitions.

At the drawing for locations on August 8th, four-fifths of the available floor space was assigned to more than 100 manufacturers. Most of the concerns who took space in the past shows will be found at the coming exhibition and many important manufacturers who have not participated in the show for several years have decided to exhibit this year.

The Cement Show is clearly a growing institution and has become a permanent fixture of the cement industry. Many associations find it of advantage to hold their conventions each year in Chicago during the time of the big Cement Show. Important associations that have already fixed their dates during the Cement Show in Chicago are the National Builders' Supply Association, and the Illinois Lumber and Builders' Supply Dealers' Association.

New Front Brick Plant.

One of the most complete and modern front brick plants is now under construction, near Kittanning, Pa., for the purpose of manufacturing gray and buff front brick. One of the finest clay properties in that part of the country has been opened up and the company expects to have brick ready for shipment on or about November 1st, 1914. The capital stock has all been subscribed for and contracts for all requisites including machinery, have been placed. One of the largest and most modern brick machines has been purchased, able to turn out 150,000 high-grade brick per day, although driers and kiln capacity for the present will be 60,000 brick per day.

The Henderson-Frazier-Dobbs Co., Inc., 1133 Broadway, New York, will put the product on the Eastern market and a large number of inquiries have already been received from agents throughout the country, all anxious to secure the selling rights of the high-grade material that will be produced by this company. The company has been incorporated under the name of Kittanning Face Brick Company, and in placing its contracts for machinery, etc., quality was considered in all cases and the plant, when completed, will be one of the most up-to-date in the country.

Jersey Central Denies Report.

A statement issued by an official of the Jersey Central Railroad denies the report that several hundred skilled mechanics have been laid off, according to the Wall Street Journal. What has taken place is the reduction all over the system of the working time of the shop forces from five days a week to four. This reduction, however, is temporary and applies only to the month of August.

T. B. Koons, vice-president and freight traffic manager of the Jersey Central, says: "Several shipping companies have notified Reading, Jersey Central and other companies reaching tidewater at New York to be prepared at a moment's notice to resume shipments of export freight to New York. All our freight agents and traffic men have been notified and the business is so organized as to permit export freight traffic to resume with a rush.

"I look for full exports to England. France and Belgium to resume at any time within ten days. Shipping men tell me that German cruisers are far from the base of supplies and the maintenance of strict neutrality has checked their activities in the west Atlantic. They look for the return of all German cruisers hereabouts to the African coast as speedy as possible.

Building During July.

Reports received from seventy-five leading cities in the United States indicate that a considerable revival in building activity occurred at many points during July, the permits issued calling for the expenditure of $71,121,212, an increase of 10.3 per cent., as compared with the $64,478,080 of the same month last year. The comparison would have been much more favorable but for the falling off in New York city, where the permits taken out aggregate only $12,824,409, as against $13,376,327, a loss of 4.1 per cent. The indifferent showing by the leading centre was due almost entirely to a contraction of $3,202,195 in the Borough of Manhattan, although there was also a moderate decrease in Richmond, whereas the Bronx, Brooklyn and Queens all made very satisfactory gains. Seventy-four outside cities reported a total of $58,296,803, as compared with $51,101,753, which is a gain of 14.1 per cent. over the corresponding month in 1913. This is by far the best exhibit made this year, and forty-nine centres reported improvement, which in some instances is quite pronounced. Among the cities where the most notable expansion appears are Albany, Chicago, Cincinnati, Dayton, Detroit, Indianapolis, Minneapolis, Nashville, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Richmond, Rochester, St. Louis, Seattle, Sioux City, Spokane, Springfield, Mass., Washington and Worcester. On the other hand, there was more or less falling off at Cleveland, Fort Worth, Harrisburg, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Newark, San Francisco, Wilkes-Barre and a number of other points.

This Building Boasts Edison Service

At 1372-82 Broadway stands the recently erected Hobart Building. This structure—devoted to manufacturing interests and fine retail stores—only opened May 1st last, yet every available inch is now rented

Central Station Service—besides freeing these owners from every light and power responsibility—will net them a surprising annual saving if figured on the cost of an isolated plant for the same upkeep period

Nothing but Edison Service could so perfectly supply the huge electric power demands of its tenants

G. A. Fuller Co. awarded Contract.

The general contract for the construction of the new twenty-story office building to be erected at 6-8-10 West 40th street has been awarded to the George A. Fuller Co., 111 Broadway, New York City. This building will be owned by the Eight West 40th Street Company, John McInerney, president, 111 Broadway, and will be erected from plans prepared by Goldwin Starrett & Van Vleck, architects, Everett Bldg., 17th street and Fourth avenue.

New Building for Newark's Park.

H. Van Buren Magonigle, architect, 101 Park avenue, New York City, has been retained by the Essex County Park Commission, Alonzo Church, secretary, 810 Broad street, Newark, N. J., to prepare the plans for an administration building to be erected in Branch Brook Park, Newark. It is proposed to expend about $100,000 for the construction of this building. Preliminary sketches have just been started and it will be some time before details can be announced.

New Brooklyn Hospital.

The Williamsburg Hospital, Rev. Newell Woolsey, president, contemplates the erection of a new and thoroughly modern hospital building on the property recently purchased by them at the corner of South Ninth street and Driggs avenue. The present hospital at the corner of Bedford avenue and South Third street has been in operation for many years and has served the community in an efficient manner. It is hoped with the new building to extend the sphere of activities and usefulness over a much wider area. Definite plans for the new building have not been announced and no architect has up to the present time been retained. The offices of the institution are now receiving competitive sketches and it is assumed that the successful architect will be named before October 1st.

NO ARCHITECTS SELECTED.

In this department is published advance information regarding building projects where architects have not as yet been selected.

MANHATTAN.—The Congregation Jauor Libeski Uniter Stutungweidk, care of Julius Hahn, 135 Livingston st, Brooklyn, contemplates the erection of a brick synagogue at 82-84 Lewis st. No architect selected.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The Jewish Hospital Association, care of Dr. Julian Ulman, 400 Franklin st, contemplates the erection of a hospital here to cost about $50,000. No architect selected.

MANHATTAN.—Figures are being received for the 6-sty tenement at 33-37 Mott st for the estate of James Naughton, John Naughton, executor, 153 East 53d st. George F. Pelham, 30 East 42d st, architect. Cost, about $60,000.

BANKS.

BROOKLYN.—Bids are being received for the 2-sty bank, 33x50x75 ft., at New Utrecht av and 12th av for the Broadway Trust Co., 839 Flatbush av, Alex C. Snyder, vice-president. Slee & Bryson, 154 Montague st, architects. Cost, about $20,000.

DWELLINGS.

BELMAR, N. J.—E. C. Benner, Appleby Building, Asbury Park, architect, is taking bids for a 2½-sty frame residence at 10th av and A st for Frank Schmitz, 43 Osborne terrace, Newark, owner. Cost, about $5,000.

GARDEN CITY, L. I.—Shape & Bready, 220 West 42d st, Manhattan, architects, are taking bids for a 2½-sty frame residence on Stewart av for Clayton S. Goss, 516 5th av, Manhattan.

ROSELLE, N. J.—William Hewlett, 1181 Broadway, Manhattan, architect, is taking bids for a 2½-sty brick residence at 6th av and Spruce st for Theodore Goe, this place. Cost, about $15,000.

YONKERS, N. Y.—S. A. Guttenberg, Proctor Building, Mt. Vernon, architect, is taking bids on general contract for a 2½-sty frame and stucco residence, 40x34 ft., at Lowerre Summit, for Dr. M. Caturani, 348 East 116th st, Manhattan. Cost, about $9,000.

FACTORIES AND WAREHOUSES.

PATERSON, N. J.—L. S. Beardsley, 38 West 32d st, Manhattan, architect, is taking bids for the 3-sty reinforced concrete baking plant addition, 50x70 ft., in 21st st, for the American Bread Co., 424 East 21st st, Paterson.

NEWARK, N. J.—A. H. Thomas, 222 Market st, architect, is taking bids for a 2-sty brick factory, 30x100 ft., for Chas. Blakeman Sons Co., Inc., 236 Bank st. Cost, about $10,000.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.—The Continental Heater Co., care of Earle C. Reade, vice-president and general manager, is taking bids on general contract for a 1-sty brick and steel manufacturing plant, 400x60 ft., including a 1-sty factory building, 400x64 ft., and 1-sty warehouse, 100x100 ft., from private plans, to cost about $35,000.

MUNICIPAL WORK.

NEW YORK STATE.—Bids will be received at the office of John N. Carlisle, commissioner of Public Highways, until 1 p. m., August 17, for the improvement of various public highways.

TOWN OF UNION, N. J.—The Committee of the Town of Union, Emile Bautz, town clerk, Adolph Van Neste, chairman, is taking bids to close August 17 for a 2-sty fire house, 25x80 ft., at 3d st and Palisade av, from plans by Joseph D. Lugosch, 408 Kossuth st, Town of Union, architect. Cost, about $15,000.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

MANHATTAN.—F. A. DeMeuron, 31-33 East 27th st, architect, is taking new bids on revised plans for the 6-sty school at 118th st and St. Nicholas av for the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, 118th st, west of St. Nicholas av, Rev. Father J. B. McGrath, pastor.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—The Town of White Plains, Board of Education of Union Free School District No. 1, John Y. Lavery, president, is taking bids to close August 28 at 8 p. m for a 2-sty brick, hollow tile and reinforced concrete school, 40x100 ft., on Battle Hill av, from plans by Beverly S. King, 103 Park av, Manhattan.

TUCKAHOE, N. Y.—The Board of Education of Tuckahoe, William F. Thompson, president, is taking bids for an addition to the 2-sty brick and limestone school in Main st, from plans by William Whitney Rasmussen, 1133 Broadway, Manhattan. Cost, about $20,000.

STORES, OFFICES AND LOFTS.

MANHATTAN.—Plans are being figured for the 4-sty brick addition to the bakery at 7-11 Cannon st for the Manhattan Pie Baking Co., William Folterman, president, 540 Grand st. John B. Snook Sons, 261 Broadway, architects.

THEATRES.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Plans are being figured for a theatre at the corner of Harrison and South Salina sts for the Syracuse Strand Theatre Co., Inc., Mitchell Mark, 528 White Building, Buffalo, Thomas W. Lamb, 644 8th av, Manhattan, architect. Cost, about $100,000.

BROOKLYN.—Plans are being figured, bids to close soon, for the 1-sty brick moving picture theatre, 50x100 ft., in the north side of Sumpter st, 325 ft. west of Patchen av, for Solomon Brill & Co., 43 West 16th st, Manhattan. George Keister, 56 West 45th st, Manhattan, architect. Cost, about $12,000.

LONG ISLAND CITY.—Plans are being figured for the 1-sty brick theatre, 118x133 ft., on the west side of Hunter av, 94 ft. south of Wilbur av, for W. E. Paynter, Bridge Plaza. John Boese, 1 Bridge Plaza, architect. Cost, about $135,000.

CONTEMPLATED CONSTRUCTION.

Manhattan.

APARTMENTS, FLATS AND TENEMENTS.

ITHACA, N. Y.—Day Bros. & Klauder, 925 Chestnut st, Philadelphia, Pa., are revising plans for a 3-sty stone dormitory at Cornell Heights for the Cornell University, J. G. Shurman, president. Cost, about $100,000.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Merrick & Randall, 705 S. A. & K. Building, are preparing plans for a vocational school in Seneca st near Tully st, for the City of Syracuse Board of Education, Albert E. Larkin, president. W. Thomas Wooley, City Hall, city engineer. E. E. Palmer, 610 Snow Building heating and ventilating engineer. Eugene McCarthy, 411 South West st, Syracuse, plumbing engineer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y.—An appropriation of $250,000 has been granted for the Commodore McDonough Memorial for the U. S. Government, care of Hon. L. M. Garrison, Secretary of War. It is expected that the memorial will take the form of a building.

PERSONAL AND TRADE NOTES.

C. C. BOHN ELECTRIC CO. has moved its offices from 780 6th av to larger quarters in 820 6th av.

H. K. ROUMAIN, plumbing contractor, 90 Washington st, N. Y. C., has opened a branch office at 172 Atlantic av, Brooklyn.

J. K. GIESEY, formerly associated with Hering & Gregory, consulting engineers, New York City, resigned to assume charge of sewer work in York, Pa.

PIERCE, BUTLER & PIERCE MFG. CO., Syracuse, N. Y., has appointed George W. Crane as manager of their New York office, 279 4th av. Mr. Crane, who was formerly located at the home office in Syracuse, succeeds E. C. Molby.

THOMAS E. O'BRIEN, formerly president of the Brooklyn Master Plumbers' Association, has incorporated with his brother, E. J. O'Brien, under the name of the Thos E. O'Brien Co. They will conduct a general plumbing and heating business at 6311 5th av, Brooklyn.

THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN ENGINEERS has recently completed a new club house in Berlin at a cost of upwards of $500,000. The society has a membership of more than 25,000 and claims to be the largest organization of its character in the world. This society has branch organizations in England, China, Argentine Republic and other countries.

CHARLES O. TAPPEN, consulting and construction engineer, has opened offices at 2 Rector st, New York City. He will specialize in hydro-electric power, transmission, public utilities engineering, valuation and appraisal work. Mr. Tappen was formerly chief engineer of the Northern Power Co., and the Hannawa Falls Water Power Co., Potsdam, N. Y.

TRADE AND TECHNICAL SOCIETY EVENTS.

THE AMERICAN MUSEUM OF SAFETY will hold its annual dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Friday evening, December 11.

NATIONAL PAVING BRICK MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION will hold its annual convention in Buffalo, N. Y., September 9 to 11. Headquarters at Hotel Statler.

THE MASTER PLUMBERS' ASSOCIATION OF NEWARK will hold its annual outing at Witzel's Grove, College Point, L. I., Thursday, August 27. The Outing Committee is composed of John J. Turbett, chairman; Elmer Lutz, secretary; F. J. Sturn, treasurer; Robert Berla, M. J. Brady and Louis Maier.

THE AMERICAN ROAD BUILDERS' ASSOCIATION is making plans to hold a joint meeting with the American Highway Association at some time during the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The meeting will be held either in San Francisco or Oakland. Committees have been formed who are working out the details.

SECOND INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION OF SAFETY AND SANITATION will be held at the Grand Central Palace, N. Y. C., December 12 to 19, 1914. This exposition is held under the auspices of the American Museum of Safety, and according to present plans will surpass the very successful exhibition held at the same place last year.

AMERICAN BOILER MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION will hold its twenty-sixth annual convention in New York City September 1-4, with headquarters at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. The subject of uniform boiler specifications will be given special attention. The secretary is F. B. Slocum, West and Calyer streets, Brooklyn, N. Y.

THE MANHATTAN BRANCH of the New York City Association of Master Plumbers will hold its annual outing at Boehm's Picnic Grounds, New Dorp, S. I., Thursday, September 10. The arrangements and programme are in charge of the following committee: F. B. Lasette, chairman; B. F. Donohoe, secretary; J. R. Hopkin, treasurer; and T. P. McLoughlin, H. Hemlin, J. J. Hannegan, ex-officio.

NEW ROCHELLE MASTER PLUMBERS' ASSOCIATION will hold its annual outing at Rye Beach, N. Y., Wednesday, August 26. A programme of athletic events has been prepared which will include a five-inning baseball game between a team representing the supply and manufacturers' representatives and a nine composed of members of the association. The game will be followed by a shore dinner served at Edward's Beach Hotel.

SOCIETY FOR ELECTRICAL DEVELOPMENT, INCORPORATED, announces eight prizes for the best stories, articles or reports on any subject pertaining to commercial electricity. The competition is open to employees of members of the Society. There will be one prize of $250, one of $150, one of $50 and five of $10 each. The competition closes on September 1, 1914. Full particulars may be obtained by writing to the Competition Editor, Society for Electrical Development, Incorporated, 29 West 39th st, New York City.

OBITUARY

DANIEL O'DAY, for a number of years connected with the Queens Highway Department, died Tuesday, August 11, at his home in 18th st, Whitestone, L. I. He was sixty-six years old and was prominent in politics of the borough for some years. He is survived by one son and three daughters.

HENRY MacGREGOR, a retired general contractor, died at the home of his son, Willard H. MacGregor, 3d st and Warburton av, Bayside, L. I., Thursday, August 13. He was born in Canada in 1828, and up to twenty years ago, when he retired, was a prominent member of the building fraternity in New York City.

THOMAS JARDINE, formerly a City Councilman, of Rahway, N. J., died at his home, 179 East Grand st, Tuesday, August 11. He was born in Staten Island in February, 1838. Upon the death of his father he became a member of the firm of A. Jardine & Co., manufacturers of wall paper, in Rahway. In 1860 he established a business known as Thomas Jardine & Son, monument works, and remained at the head of the concern until 20 years ago, when it was turned over to his son. Mr. Jardine was a member of the Common Council from the 2d ward for two years and was a director of the Rahway Savings Institution. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity for more than 45 years. He is survived by a son.

HENRY LEWIS GESTREICH, senior assistant division engineer for the Public Service Commission of New York City, died at Atlantic City, N. J., Thursday, August 13. He had been in Atlantic City for the past eight weks suffering from septic poisoning. Mr. Oestreich, who was forty-five years old, married on June 10 last Miss Stella Bell Eccles, of Trenton, N. J. Since the inception of the subway idea of transportation in New York City Mr. Oestreich had been intimately conected with it. Under the old Board of Rapid Transit Commisioners he was the engineer in charge of the construction of the present subway between Great Jones st and 19th st. He had charge of important work in connection with the construction of the Centre st loop, and had entire charge of the construction of the 4th av subway and its elevated branches in Brooklyn. Before taking up subway construction in 1900 Mr. Oestreich had charge of the construction of the elevated railroad in Jersey City and was the engineer who laid out many of the streets of the Bronx. He spoke nine languages and was the author of some notable papers on subway construction. He was an active member of the Brooklyn Engineers' Club, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Municipal Engineers of the City of New York, the Zeta Psi fraternity and the Arion Dramatic Club.

RECENT INCORPORATIONS.

THE VOGEL REALTY & HOLDING CORPORATION is a $20,000 company, chartered with offices in Manhattan to do a realty, construction, brokerage and insurance agency, with Morris Vogel, Milton J. Vogel and Leonard Vogel, all of 812 West End av, as directors. Davis & Kaufman, 51 Chambers st, attorneys.

GILTRAP TRUCKING & CONTRACTING CO. has been incorporated to do a general trucking, construction and contracting business, with offices in Manhattan. Capital stock, $10,000. Clarence G. Giltrap, 15 DePeyster st, North Tarrytown, N. Y.; Clifford K. Pellen, 795 St. Nicholas av, and Howard Pendleton, Jr., 1979 66th st, directors. The attorney is H. Pendleton, Jr., 11 Wall st.

CARUCCI HOLDING CO. has been chartered with $10,000 capital stock to do a realty and construction business, with offices in The Bronx. The directors are Samuele Carucci and Checchina Carucci, both of 641 East 183d st and Carlo D. Cella, 31 Liberty st. A. J. Romagna, 277 Broadway, attorney.

FORBIN REALTY HOLDING COMPANY is a $50,000 company chartered to do a realty and construction business, with offices in Manhattan. The directors are Irving G. Schreyer, 10 North 8th st, Mt. Vernon; Robert H. Robeson, 1356 71st st, Brooklyn, and George William Kutscher, 654 Richmond Terrace, New Brighton, S. I. L. Wendell, Jr., 277 Broadway, attorney.

ISRAEL ROKEACH REALTY CORPORATION, with offices in Brooklyn, has been chartered to do a realty and construction business with $20,000 capital stock. Israel Rokeach, 255 Hewes st; Aaron Rokeach, 62 McKibben st, and Levi Rokeach, 134 Penn st, all of Brooklyn, directors. E. Bloch, 233 Broadway, attorney.

UNIVERSITY BUILDING CO. has been chartered, with $10,000 capital stock, to do a realty and construction business, with offices in the Bronx. William C. Bergen, 130 West 180th st; John J. O'Grady, 277 Broadway, and Vincent A. J. Cagliostro, 277 Broadway, are directors. John J. O'Grady, 277 Broadway, is attorney.

MERCER REALTY COMPANY has filed papers, with $25,000 capital stock, with offices in Manhattan, to do a realty, construction and brokerage business. Myra Blume, 1024 Halsey st, Brooklyn; Arnold Breidenbach and Walter J. Graham, both of 233 Broadway, directors. Ulman & Streitwolf, 233 Broadway, attorneys.

HOSFORD PLUMBING & HEATING COMPANY is a $250 corporation chartered with offices in Manhattan to do a general plumbing and heating business, and to deal in plumbers' supplies, general construction and concrete business. The directors are Leonard D. Hosford, William H. Mathews and Thomas S. Kinton, all of 1123 Broadway. Frederick C. Lawyer, 1 Madison av, attorney.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

PLAN FILINGS AND CONSTRUCTION WORK SHOW NO EFFECT FROM THE WAR—VALUES COMPARABLE WITH LAST WEEK'S.

Prices are Stationary with Inquiry
Slightly More Keen—Brick Steady.

SO far as it has been possible to discover neither building construction nor the building material market has been affected by the European disturbance. If anything there has been a freer buying movement for basic materials on the part of dealers and distributors who supply speculative builders. Structural steel is the only commodity that has been advanced in price, but the upward change has been nominal and is still far from the 1.46 level that prevailed for tidewater shapes at this time last year. Linseed oil is still at the 60-cent level, ruling during the week before the European nations became embroiled and while flaxseed is stiffening at Duluth, it is due to shortage of supply and not in any degree because of war abroad.

As for building construction throughout the country Dodge Reports show absolutely no abandonment of important building operations as a result of the war. The volume of new building operations being projected is normal for August east of the Mississippi and slightly above normal for the middle part of the country. There also has been no change in the situation on the Pacific coast. In New York and vicinity there are enough buildings under projection, according to the same authority, to make for a perfectly normal autumn in building.

Financially the building situation is far less gloomy than are the general stock, bond, textile and general imports markets. Building money for new projects is hard to get, but there were instances reported this week of engagements made for factory extension in the clothing, foodstuffs and cold storage departments. Building financing is not dependent so much at present on the movement for speculative operations as it is for specialty construction in commodity fields where the war abroad is likely to have a quick, direct and positively favorable effect just as soon as shipping on the high seas has been made secure enough to permit some flexibility in insurance rates.

The first shocks of the war are passing. Finance has been reassured by the treasury department that all its emergency resources are still far from being exhausted. The crops are being moved and there is being worked out a way to move securities through the stock exchange and clearing house committees that will sooner or later pave the way for a reopening of the Stock Exchange. Domestic trade is steady in practically all branches, except in those instances where certain food staples are being manipulated apparently for the purpose of storing up larger supplies of food so that they can be shipped to the belligerent armies of Europe at premiums.

New York and vicinity is bound to become the world's storehouse for all sorts of supplies, according to an authority in the realty market this week, yet aside from a few terminals this city finds itself practically poverty stricken in its available warehouses. This means that if the war is protracted there will be a big building movement in warehouses, stock rooms and office accommodations to handle this mountainous supply of stores. Such a movement, if it develops, will quickly decide the destiny of neighborhoods in dock sections and tracts at various points along the harbor front as far as definite classification of its occupancy is concerned, thus making values more staple. The result should be a stimulation of business building expansion, a type of financing that money lenders look upon with most favor in times like these. Jobbing interests say that dealers are coming into the market more freely for supplies, but that while prices are not being advanced credits are not so liberal as they were several weeks ago.

Building plans filed this week show a gain in value over those of last week. Details by boroughs follow:

| | Week ending August 7 | | Week ending August 13 | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | No. | Value. | No. | Value. |
| Manhattan | 12 | $2,601,750 | 11 | $927,000 |
| Bronx | 16 | 468,325 | 9 | 337,225 |
| Brooklyn | 64 | 539,185 | 64 | 1,459,250 |
| Queens | 109 | 317,725 | 77 | 260,688 |
| Richmond | 22 | 43,365 | 13 | 20,830 |

LIME, PLASTER, GYPSUM.
Current Movement of Materials Normal, Inquiry Without Change.

IT was still too early to gauge the effect of the European war upon the lime, plaster and gypsum interests this week, but there was no indication reported where there had been any countermanding of orders or postponement of deliveries. Here and there are some builders, the plaster people say, who are inclined to put off new operations until the autumn gets fairly well under way, but for the most part, builders, who have their operations financed, are going ahead as though nothing unusual occurred.

"That statement of Walter Stabler's appearing in the Record and Guide last week," said a prominent plaster man this week, "did much to make contractors and others realize that there is a pretty sourceful Uncle Samuel who stands behind his people in time of stress and the emergency methods so far put into operation are only a beginning of what can be done to stem the tide of panic.

"I believe now that the worst that we fear will not be felt, that building construction will proceed, because we have already taken up a large amount of the slack in our local supply of available modern buildings and the time is ripe for tearing out some of that large unsalable space in the part of the town between Chambers street and 23d and improving it. We certainly have got to be ready for prosperity when it comes and I believe it will begin to come just as soon as England makes the seas safe for shipping."

SAND, GRAVEL AND STONE.
Subway and Building Work Already Financed Keeps Market Even.

SAND, gravel and crushed stone interests are standing pat both on prices and supply. There has been no change in production and according to leaders in these two departments there are very slim prospects at present, at least, of anything occurring to mar the existing schedules. Even though there should be a temporary shrinkage in building construction, there is a tremendous demand for these concrete ingredients to keep the mills and quarries and mines operating practically up to current capacity for a very long time. There has been no change in prices and demand has not fluctuated either up or down since the first of the month.

COAL.
Improvement in Fall Demand Expected to Keep Colliers Busy.

ADVICES from Philadelphia this week seemed to indicate that the sharp falling off in demand for coal in the eastern market as a result of the tying up of shipping, might require the closing of collieries temporarily in order that the supply may not exceed the demand to the extent that sacrifice prices will be necessary. Owing to the cutting of profits from one cause or another in recent years, the operators feel that they would rather close the collieries, if necessary, in order to keep prices where they are. They say that to supply coal at any figure lower than those now ruling under wholesale contracts would be practically ruinous.

August, however, always is a dull coal month. The fact that September generally brings about great activity in the coal department is looked upon as being a possible way out of the difficulty. If the users of coal in New York can get into the market for supplies a little earlier than usual and thus distribute some of the September business through August, the mine interests say they may not have to close the collieries. Tidewater stocks are said to be light here and there is said to be considerable coal stored in the interior. Some managers of buildings are arranging for means to store coal here in case of contingencies arising later on. Bituminous coal is in fair demand. There has been no change in prices.

GLASS.
Demand for Single Light—Discounts Unchanged.

WINDOW glass in this market is holding steadily. There is a little more liberal stocking on the part of jobbers which is giving the mill men greater activity, but the supply already was large and in only a few cases has the mill capacity been changed. Dealers, however, are not liberal buyers. Apparently they are waiting to see what effect the foreign war will have upon building construction in this country. What orders are coming in are being filled from stock or else the dealer is buying from hand to mouth. Jobbers anticipate higher lists and lower discounts if the mills are obliged to close. At present there is no change in discounts or prices.

PORTLAND CEMENT.
Output Cut 10 Per Cent. in First Half of Year.

STATISTICS covering the first half of 1914 in the Portland cement industry discloses the fact that there was a slump of 10 per cent. in mill output during that period compared with the first half of 1913, but that shipments for the same period fell only 2 per cent. below the first and second quarters of last year. The reduction in output, therefore, was reflected in a decrease of surplus in producers' hands, indicating that as soon as there is any strengthening worthy of the name in demand, prices will not only regain their normal status of 90 cents mills, but may even go beyond that level.

On June 30 the total output for the first six months had reached 35,000,000 barrels as against 39,000,000 barrels at even date last year. The total output in 1913 was 92,097,131 barrels. Stocks on hand at mills on June 30 totaled 10,000,000 barrels as against 11,220,328 at the same time last year. This represents a decrease for the first half of 1914 of about 11 per cent.

The chief interest these figures have for dealers in the metropolitan district is the intimation they give that the cement industry has at last emerged from its fearful state of being overproduced and that the demoralization that has featured this department for the last six years is happily being obliterated.

New York mills during the first half of the year made a relatively better showing than did those in the Lehigh district.

COMMON BRICK.
Registered Unloading Less Than Last Week's Figures—Prices Weaker.

UNLOADING of common brick this week was in excess of that of last week. Prices, however, were inclined to be weaker. Four plants up the river, notably the Aldrich, Dennings Point, Bruso and one at the Kingston district, have closed for the season.

On Sunday the Catherine F., a brick barge, owned by the Fowler interests at Haverstraw was in collision off the Battery and lost 400,000 brick, consigned to John P. Kane Company, in charge of a tow of the Cornell Steam Towing Company.

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

WAR'S EFFECTS ON BUILDING INTERESTS

As Viewed by Manufacturers of Construction Materials and Real Estate Brokers—A Big Business Revival After a Time, the General Expectation

A GREAT market is opening up for American building materials if our producers can avail themselves of it. The Government has this week made it possible to quickly enlarge the merchant marine so that American exports can be sent anywhere in neutral bottoms, but the question of freight rates remains to be settled, and on these will largely depend how much material our manufacturers may be able to send abroad.

Confidence in the ability of the Administration at Washington to keep this country out of the armageddon that has cut off or paralyzed the exporting industries of Europe is firmly established, and the general expectation is for a great acceleration of our foreign trade, and that this will eventuate into a general revival of building construction in New York.

Many manufacturers, including those engaged in cement, steel and building equipment lines, are already arranging for banking facilities; and, on the other hand, the South Americans are looking to us to supply their needs. The director of public works at Santiago, Chili, has opened a bureau of information for American building materials, where Chilean architects and engineers can come and examine American catalogues, price lists and samples.

Interviews with representative manufacturers and dealers here this week disclose that they are waiting only for the apparent opportunity to be made practically available. The general expectation is that a general revival of all the various lines of business related to real estate will eventually result from the war.

Ironmasters Expect Big Business.

James Wells, of the Wells Architectural Iron Company, said:

"The influence of the European war on building material values will naturally advance prices, which may result in a temporary check to Building activities, but the effects of advanced prices are likely to be discounted by a decided improvement in general business later.

"The key to the new conditions is now in the hands of the alert manufacturing and financial leaders of this country, who are not likely to lose the prevailing opportunities of securing a greater portion of Europe's vast export business.

"This country's enormous capacity never was in better condition to enter into contracts to supply the world's requirements, and when investors recognize a movement for new export business, then our building trades will immediately receive an impetus to prepare for the demands of progress."

Foreign Cement Business in Prospect.

Albert Moyer, of the Vulcanite Portland Cement Company, with offices in the Fifth Avenue Building, said:

"The price of Portland cement is dependent upon the relation of the number of barrels manufactured in any one district to the consumption of Portland cement in the market supplied by that district. New York City is supplied by the Lehigh Valley region of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and by New York State mills located on or near the Hudson River. These two districts also supply nearly all the cement which is exported.

At the present time the stocks in the Lehigh Valley are as low as they have been since 1910 and the prospects for doing a tremendous export business are excellent. South America consumes millions of barrels a year and the countries south of us buy nearly all of their cement from either Great Britain, Germany or Belgium. Not over a million barrels of American cement is exported annually to South America.

"Owing to the war, it will now be impossible for these countries to obtain their supply of cement from their usual sources, and they will be forced to turn to the United States. The amount that we can export to South America depends upon a merchant marine and proper banking facilities. It is to be hoped that the New York banks will make arrangements to furnish facilities in the South American countries so that drafts can be drawn on New York. Up to the present time, practically all drafts have been on either London, Berlin or Paris.

"This tremendous prospective export business undoubtedly will have the effect of stimulating prices on Portland cement for the New York market."

All Depends on Shipping Facilities.

William P. Corbett, of the Alsen Portland Cement Company, said:

"There is an enormous market for first-class Portland cement in South America and the West Indies, which amounts to approximately 15,000,000 barrels. If all the mills in the Lehigh Valley ran at top capacity, they probably could not make more than 8,000,000 barrels above the present supply, and by that we mean mills that could be suitably run. Therefore, if they should increase the output 8,000,000 barrels in the Valley, the market in question would take practically twice that. It has been shown that the moment the consumption of cement reaches or exceeds the production to even a trifling extent, the price cannot be held in check, because contractors naturally become nervous the moment shipments are delayed. They cannot have important contracts retarded, as the cost would be enormous, and their anxiety is then as great to buy as their procrastination when there is a chance that prices may be a little lower.

"This country having no ship subsidy, such as England possesses, we have no adequate merchant marine. There are numerous commodities besides cement which could be advantageously sold to some of the rich Southern countries if we had reasonable freight rates. Furthermore, in regard to cement, a great advantage would be the fact that those countries, on account of their warm climate, would use cement right through the winter when work up here is more or less shut down. The deplorable situation abroad has brought a great opportunity to this country if advantage can be taken of it. Our Congressmen, notwithstanding our enormous expanse of coast, have often been very shortsighted in such matters.

Need of a Big Merchant Marine.

"This country needs a splendid merchant fleet besides a war fleet, and with it we could now profit tremendously, owing to the lamentable position of those in Europe. Germany, England and Belgium, the great exporters of cement to South America and the West Indies, are now shut off completely. Germany has the best of this trade and England comes next. Belgium exports large quantities. The American cements are fully equal to the English and much better than the Belgian brands and are, in fact, equal to most of the German cements which run very high in quality. Germany especially has been able to ship enormous quantities of very high grade Portland to South America and to do so at a price which American brands could not meet because of the exorbitant freight rates as compared with those from abroad.

"From this you will draw the conclusion that any advance in Portland cement because of this war would be dependent on the question of facilities for transporting promptly. Even if a reasonable number of vessels could be obtained at this time, it would take, of course, a few weeks to get any great quantity loaded and shipped, but a start would be beneficial, and furthermore, a market once gained is much easier to keep than it is to obtain a new market. Personally, the writer does not look for any immediate advance; or, if there is an advance this fall, for more than a moderate increase in the price, and certainly not enough to injure or interfere with any hoped-for revival in the building trade. A difference of say 10c per barrel would not be felt at all in good times, while a large export business would wonderfully stimulate things in this country and perhaps hasten the recovery from the unquestioned depression from which business men have suffered. All of the large contracts which we are supplying are going along just as usual, with no indication of any cessation which, of course, would not be expected."

A New Era at Hand.

William K. Hammond, a director of the association of Dealers in Building Materials, said:

"For the immediate present, in my opinion, building construction must await the eventualities of the war. Many kinds of material will for a period be sold at prices so near a loss to the producers that those who are now able to purchase and use these goods will be greatly advantaged over those whose operations are long deferred.

"Not that I predict a sudden or sharp advance in prices, yet the results to this country from its own internal commerce, together with the world's business which will presently be transacted here, all make for changes and increases in demand in our Greater City and surroundings, not to speak of the country at large, that will consume such vast quantities of building materials of domestic production, in this new era, that the best periods of the past will seem like mere spots in the path, rather than mile stones on the road side of prosperity."

Hard Brick Will Cost More.

"The effect of the war will naturally be to tighten the money market, and thereby curtail the erection of many buildings that have been contemplated, and further, those that are about to go ahead," said Mr. John P. Kane, of the John P. Kane Company, 103 Park avenue.

"As regards the effect this will have upon the prices of building materials, I do not look for an advance in any commodity, with the possible exception of hard brick. For the past three months hard brick has been shipped to this city at prices, in most instances, less than the cost of manufacture, and this has had a tendency to curtail the production. Many yards on the Hudson River have closed down, and many are about to close down, whereas in former years most yards remained open until the first of October. Therefore, I believe, that with the moderate demand and the fact of the manufacturers not being forced to ship their brick, there will be a general advance in the price of this commodity after the first of October.

No Effect Yet on Real Estate.

As yet the European war has had little effect on real estate, particularly because real estate trading has been very stagnant for some time past. This condition is not abnormal during July and August, but no active trading market can take place with general financial conditions in such a disturbed state.

Douglas L. Elliman, of 421 Madison avenue, said: "Those who are able to hold on to the property they own will not suffer, in my opinion. Rentals in most classes of property, and especially in residence property, will be maintained. The situation in my particular sections—that is, the Fifth avenue and Park avenue sections—is exceptionally healthy. Apartment buildings are exceptionally well filled and the renting of private houses is quite up to the last few years.

"There is very little demand from purchasers of private houses, but this, unfortunately, has been the condition we have faced for some time. This basic strength of real estate through its rental conditions is the best proof of the stability of New York real estate.

"A great many owners of real estate will undoubtedly need money for other purposes, and will, therefore, name attractive prices; and it is my advice to all those who ever contemplate the purchase of New York City real estate to do so during this period of depression. The present conditions can be but temporary and eventually property purchased at prices now obtainable may prove a foundation of a comfortable fortune if wisely selected.

"It will probably be difficult to obtain building loans for some time to come, but those who have already financed their operations should not hesitate to proceed with full confidence."

Real Estate Values Always Come Back.

J. Romaine Brown, of 299 Madison avenue, said: "I have seen a great many changes in real estate in the last fifty-eight years, and it would take a good deal to change my mind. The story that I could tell from my old real estate books of the rise and fall of values, and the growth of New York, would hardly be believed.

"After the great panics of 1875-76 and 1879, the values not only came back but more than doubled.

"The war at this moment, coming so suddenly, unsettles everything and sets people to thinking, but after they get through thinking they will see that real estate in New York City and suburbs is the safest investment. The earth cannot fail or be stolen. The values of real estate will come back like they did in the past. Have faith, that is all that is required."

Appeals to Mortgage Holders.

William A. Cokeley, a prominent Bronx real estate man, said: "If mortgage holders pursue a narrow policy in dealings with mortgagors, and sales are forced in order to get interest charges, or if there is a forcing of the payment of assessments, then the many forced sales will go a long way toward detracting investors.

"The mortgage men should learn a lesson from the banks which are allowing their depositors extensions on their paper, an act which instills confidence and permits people to prepare themselves for what is to come.

"Now is the time to buy real estate. Firstly, because prices are low, and secondly, because the signs portend a curtailment by the Legislature of the costly inspection mania which has obsessed our officials for the past five years, and which has done much to drive capital from the real estate field."

Unprecedented Prosperity Coming.

"Do you anticipate any further trouble from money stringency?"

"For ten days after the Stock Exchange opens money will soar, but from that time on, for the balance of the year, normal conditions will prevail. From the first of the new year unprecedented prosperity will be our lot. How can it be otherwise? With millions of men taken from the granaries and factories in the warring countries and with crops as we have this year, how can it be otherwise? Money will look for a vent, and that vent will be real estate."

REGULATION OF REAL ESTATE BROKERAGE

Next Legislature Will be Asked to Pass a License Law—Tentative Bill Has Been Prepared and Will be Considered in Convention Here

THIS week there has been issued from the office of L. D. Woodworth, of Rochester, chairman of a special committee of the Real Estate Exchange of the State of New York, a 32-page bulletin on regulation of real estate brokerage by means of a suggested bill to create a State Real Estate Commission empowered to regulate the issuance and exercise of licenses. The bulletin contains copies of other bills and data which will make possible a proper judgment by the next convention, which will be held in New York City, in October.

The exact time and place of meeting have not yet been selected.

The following extracts are taken from Mr. Woodworth's report. It is hoped that all brokers in this vicinity will obtain a copy of the bulletin, study the bill at their leisure and indicate their opinions thereon. The present draft is not believed to be final or perfect. It contains no "hobbies." It is offered by the committee as a basis for further thought and suggestion.

Nature of the Proposed Act.

The bill which has been tentatively prepared for introduction in the Legislature amends article 14 and sections 460 and 462 inclusive, of chapter 52 of the Laws of 1909, entitled "An Act in Relation to Real Property," which constitutes chapter 50 of the Consolidated Laws.

The bill creates a commission to consist of five members to be appointed by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate. Each member shall be actively and principally engaged as a real estate broker in the district from which he is appointed. They will be appointed for a term of six years. A salary will be paid, but the amount has not yet been fixed. The salaries and expenses of the commission will not exceed the sum of the license fees to be collected.

No person, firm or corporation shall after July 1, 1915, act as real estate broker in this State without having obtained a license from the Real Estate Commission, and no contract or agreement for the payment of a commission for services as a real estate broker will be enforced by any court in this State unless the person claiming the same shall have been licensed.

Applications for License.

The application for a license will set forth the place of business (including street and number) of the applicant, the business engaged in for two years past, the name of the member of a firm or corporation who will act in its behalf under the license, and such other information as may be required by the commissioners in order to determine the applicant's competency. The application must be accompanied by the affidavits of five reputable property owners testifying to the professional capability and good character of the applicant.

A license will be good for one person only, but a firm or corporation may obtain supplemental licenses for other partners, officers, directors or employes. Each applicant must file a bond for one thousand dollars for the faithful performance of any undertaking on his part as a real estate broker.

The term of a license will be one year. The license will be revoked if the holder be found guilty of fraudulent practices, if he has demonstrated his incompetency or untrustworthiness, the commissioners will have power to subpoena witnesses and take testimony under oath when charges are formally made.

The fee for a general license will be fifteen dollars, and for each supplemental license five dollars. An additional license for one or more branch offices may be obtained for a fee of five dollars. A new license will be issued for a change of address upon payment of fee of fifty cents. The money derived from license fees will be paid into the State treasury.

Any person who shall act as real estate broker without being licensed will be guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to a penalty. The sum of fifty thousand dollars, or any part thereof, may be appropriated to carry out the provisions of the act.

Certificates Are Necessary.

"Many speakers have dwelt upon the subject of the regulation in the various gatherings of real estate brokers in city, State and national associations, and it has been generally agreed that a certificate of authority or license should be required of every practitioner," says the report. "It is agreed that if authorization can be granted or withheld, according to the qualification of the applicant, the interests of the profession and also of the public can be safeguarded by the resulting elimination of the incompetent broker, and by the standardization in business methods.

"Real estate associations have been a powerful influence in developing the ethical standards of the profession. The fundamentals of a strong code of ethics have been adopted by the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges and many cities have taken the first steps in the same direction. Some cities have adopted the national code, but find it necessary to educate some of its brokers to the point where it will be enforced."

RENEWED ACTIVITY AT COLUMBUS CIRCLE

Projected Building for William R. Hearst Should Enliven Section—Public Square Now Restaurant and Theatre Centre.

WITH the filing of plans for another William R. Hearst building on the large triangular plot at the junction of Broadway, Central Park West and Grand Circle, another link in the up-building of Columbus Circle soon will be complete. The same owner controls a large frontage west of the Park Theatre on the opposite side of the circle, and rumor has it that as soon as the existing leases expire there will be another improvement under way, namely, the erection of a plant for the printing machinery for the various Hearst publications. According to the report, the project will result in a building to be occupied by the editorial and mechanical staffs of these papers. Up to the present time there has been very little building activity on Columbus Circle. Owners are evidently biding their time, awaiting future developments.

George Ehret's new building on the east side of Broadway, from 58th to 59th street, is occupied principally by automobile concerns, and is two stories in height. The site of this structure was, until a few years ago, vacant, producing nothing for the owner except an income from the advertising sign privileges. Values in the section increased so rapidly and the demand for store properties became so insistent, that it was considered advisable to improve.

Old Virginia Hotel.

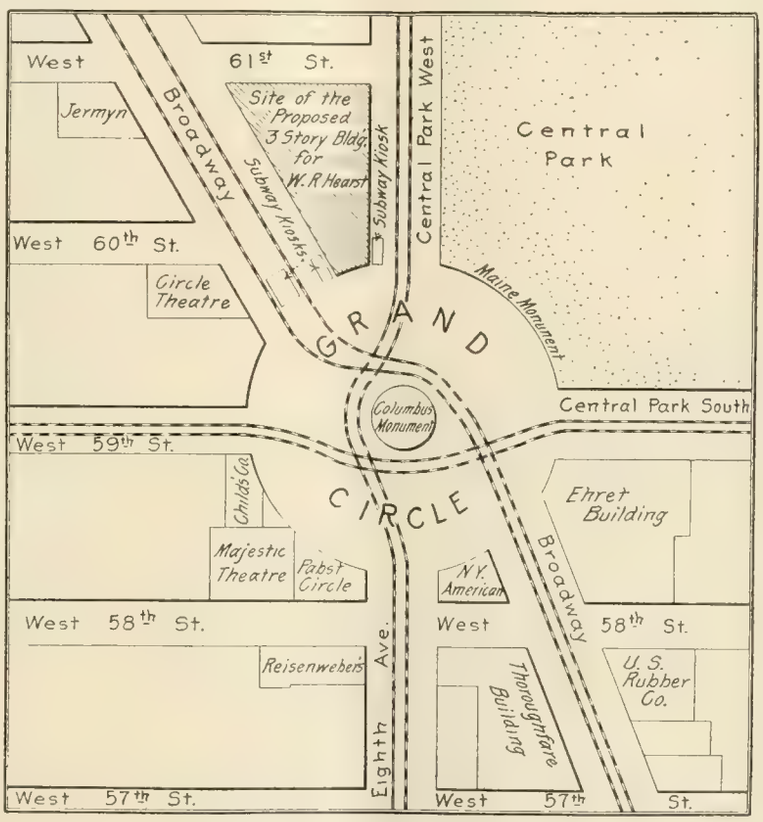
The present Hearst Building, on the south side of the Circle was formerly the Old Virginia Hotel, but several years ago it was converted for business purposes. The plot now occupied by the Pabst Grand Hotel and restaurant was one of the finest modern building operations in the section. When this project was started, many men familiar with the section could foresee nothing but disaster as the result of the venture, which included the erection of what then was one of the finest theatres in the city. These men, however, were false prophets, for at the start the theatre was successful. Since that time, however, its fortunes have been varied. The operation was completed in 1900. The southwest corner of Columbus Circle and 59th street, adjoining the Pabst property, is now occupied by the Childs Company for restaurant purposes. It was for several years occupied as a branch of the Merchants' Exchange Bank.



In addition to the Park Theatre, at the southwest corner of 68th street and Broadway is the Circle Theatre, now devoted to motion pictures. With its theatres and high-class restaurants Columbus Circle is a well patronized amusement center. When the automobile trade invaded that section of the city the interest in the Circle apparently began to wane. Persistent demands for space, however, were so strong that property values underwent remarkable changes, and rentals reached such a point that other kinds of business were practically shut out.

"As far as this neighborhood is concerned," said Eugene Schleip, Eastern Representative of the Pabst Brewing Company, and manager of the Pabst Grand Circle, "with a successful production in the Park Theatre, the Columbus Circle section may be re-established as an amusement center. We cannot depend on the immediate neighborhood for patronage for the theatres and restaurants, and therefore must rely on people coming from other parts of the city.

Splendid Transit Facilities.

"In order to liven up the district, and make it live up to expectations, it is necessary to attract people here. We have every convenience from the traffic standpoint, as the subway has a station on the Circle, and practically all surface lines converge at this point. Our principal agencies for attracting people are the theatres, which have clearly demonstrated that high-class productions become money makers, while mediocre ones are failures. In other words, our patrons are very discriminating. This was proven by the large crowds which flocked to see such productions as the 'Wizard of Oz,' 'Babes in Toyland,' 'The Quaker Girl,' and many others.

"What Columbus Circle needs is an express stop. Another improvement which would result beneficially is the construction of a bridge connecting New Jersey and New York, having as its Manhattan terminal either 57th or 59th street. When this structure is completed a new and large territory will be opened."

COLUMBUS CIRCLE AND ENVIRONS.

New York American Building.

The new structure to occupy the trapazoid plot north of the Circle will be known as the "New York American Building." This structure is being erected for the Veronica Realty Company, William R. Hearst, president, 258 West 58th street, from plans and specifications prepared by James C. Green, architect, 103 Park avenue. R. E. Moss is the structural engineer. The Columbus Circle Construction Co., organized for the sole purpose of erecting this structure, has the general contract.

A Tower Later On.

As planned at present the building will be three stories in height with basement and sub-basement. The foundations, however, are being built to sustain the weight of three additional stories to be surmounted by a tower twenty-five stories high, which is proposed to be built at a later date.

In design the facades of this structure will be strictly Gothic in character. Limestone, terra cotta and brick are the materials to be used. Floor construction will be of an approved system of reinforced concrete and the building will be absolutely fireproof in every respect.

There will be two arcades in the structure, one on the first floor and the other in the basement, which will provide direct entrance to the subway station at this point. The building will have entrances on four sides and will no doubt become a thoroughfare at 60th street from Broadway to Central Park West.

Permanent Light.

Permanent light on two sides will be one of the advantages enjoyed by occupants of this building as the frontages on Central Park West and Columbus Circle are protected permanently.

Part of the northern half of the first floor of this structure will be used as a circulation and business office by the New York American. As planned, this office will have an entrance from West 61st street and another from the arcade running through the building from Central Park West to Broadway. The balance of the first floor will be divided into stores of various sizes which will have show windows both on the street and the arcades within. These stores are arranged in two stories, basement and street level, connected by a spiral stairway.

The basement is primarily arranged as a storage space, but will have artistically lighted show windows on the subway arcade. These stores may be leased separately, however, if tenants so desire, and when storage space in the basement is not essential. The second and third floors will be subdivided into offices and will include all the conveniences and equipment of a first-class office building.

Many False Alarms.

Several times during the last decade Columbus Circle has been on the eve of a big building movement, but each time, for one reason or another, the activity was postponed. Announcement was made several years ago that George Ehret would erect a large building on his property in the east side of Broadway from 58th to 59th street, but he compromised with the present two-story taxpayer.

CITY ISLAND HAS NEW TRANSIT LINE

Community, Long Isolated, Brought in Closer Touch With the Mainland—Ship Building Principal Industry

At noon on Tuesday last, City Island relegated its two ancient horse cars to the scrap heap and became the possessor of more modern transit facilities in the form of eight new storage battery cars. The installation of this new car line, in the opinion of its residents, marks an epoch in the history of the little island which is one of the most unique of the many out-lying New York settlements.

City Island, annexed to the Greater City in 1895, has been isolated from the rest of the Bronx for many years by its lack of transit facilities. A station of the suburban service of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad extending through the eastern part of the Bronx into Westchester was located at Bartow, now known as the City Island Station, some distance from City Island. A monorail operated from this point to the City Island Bridge, but its service has been discontinued. From the bridge to the Sound along the main street of City Island two horse cars plied their leisurely way.

Franchise Taken Over.

About one month ago, largely through the efforts of the new Public Service Commissioner, Robert C. Wood, negotiations were reopened between the Third Avenue Railroad Company and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company which resulted in the taking over of the franchise of the Pelham Park and City Island Railway by the former company. Part of this road from the City Island Bridge to Belden Point had already been completed and the rest of the route from the bridge to the station of the New York, New Haven and Hartford has since been constructed.

Rails of the heaviest type have been laid, 114 pounds to the yard, and are bonded for electrical operation. A waiting-room has been erected at the junction of the Eastern Boulevard and the City Island road.

In discussing the schedule of the new car-line Edward A. Maher, Jr., assistant general manager of the Road said: "In place of the two horse cars, which were heretofore operated on this road, we propose to operate eight storage battery cars, operating said cars on a ten-minute headway between the hours of 5.30 a.m. and 9 a.m., and from 4 p.m. to 7.15 p.m.; between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. the cars will be operated on a fifteen-minute headway, and from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. on a thirty-minute headway. We feel that this service will be adequate, but are prepared, as soon as we are convinced that addition service is necessary, to increase same."

Beginning of New Era.

Public Service Commissioner Robert C. Wood, said this week, "These cars are simply the first assignment and if they do not furnish adequate transportation facilities we have been assured that as many as may be found necessary will be promptly furnished. When it is recalled that the old monorail system had but one car operating from the New Haven station as far as the bridge and that this in turn was supplemented by old horse cars running from beyond the bridge to Belden Point, it can readily be seen what this increase in transportation facilities will mean to City Island. While the operation of this road at present means only the completion of transportation facilities from Belden Point to the Eastern Boulevard, I sincerely hope that soon City Island will have street railway connections with the new subway extensions and other parts of the borough."

City Island, a mile and a half long, and three-quarters of a mile wide, with a population of 1,700 is, as a result of its isolated position, a community in itself. It has a police station, fire house, a post office, a weekly newspaper, a circulating library, an electric lighting system, a Board of Trade, a Taxpayers' Organization and three churches—one Catholic, one Episcopalian and one Methodist. Its location on the Sound has given it two yacht clubs, and boat houses and clubs innumerable.

While it is essentially a home community with about two-thirds of the residents all-year-round occupants, it is also the center of a flourishing boat and ship-building industry. Some of the firms located on the Island take high rank among boat builders in the country. The three American cup defenders —the Vanitie, the Resolute and the Defiance—are hauled out and laid up for the winter at City Island. Among the boat builders are Robert Jacob, Henry B. Nevins, Wood & McClure, Kyle & Purdy, and J. P. Hawkins. Sailmakers include Ratsey & Lapthorn, Bottger Brothers, Jones & Robinson, William H. Griffin and G. W. Robinson & Company. This industrial phase of City Island's development is in line with its location on the Sound which affords it an extensive shore front.

Before the advent of the motor boat with its oily appurtenances, the Island was the haunt of lobster fishermen. The oyster and clam beds were also of the finest and their numbers and quality were said to have made the Island the habitat of the Sewanoe tribe of the Algonquin Indians. In those days, according to the historians, it was known as Minnefords Island after an old Indian sachem who controlled the destinies of the original City Islanders.

Opinion of a Broker.

Capt. W. A. Walters, a local real estate man, said this week: "The people of City Island have been looking forward for many years to the installation of this car line and now that it has been realized a general spirit of optimism regarding its future, prevails. Values in the section are about the same as those in Westchester, lots selling for from $1,000 to $1,500, while choice lots on the shore may bring from $3,000 to $5,000. There is a moderate demand for well-located holdings, although there has been no recent heavy buying or selling. The real estate situation as far as City Island is concerned will probably continue to be quiet until the continuation of the subway to Pelham Bay Park is completed.

"Eventually we hope that the Bronx trolley lines will be extended from that point, across Pelham Bay Park to City Island, and then with a revival of interest due to increased traffic and business, property values are bound to rise. For the present, City Island with its healthful climate, excellent bathing beach, and splendid view of Long Island Sound, is as fine a residential community as one may desire.

Frame Dwelling Predominate.

"The prevailing type of building is the two-story frame dwelling on a fifty-foot plot. There have been a few terra cotta buildings erected, notably a new residence on King avenue, between Elizabeth and Southerland streets. Other recent building operations include a three-story, six-family house at the corner of Cross street and City Island avenue, and several bungalows, erected within the past year. Another house is in course of construction on Minneford avenue, facing the east shore of the island, between Elizabeth and Cross streets."

MODERN PARK AVENUE.

Thoroughfare Transformed During Last Few Years by New Multi-Family Structures.

Upper Park avenue has been thoroughly transformed during the last few years. Where formerly old buildings stood today the sites are improved with modern apartment houses, containing every convenience. Typical among these houses is the twelve-story structure at 850 Park avenue, corner 77th street. The building was erected from designs by Rouse & Goldstone, architects, 38 West 32nd street, who estimated the cost at $500,000. The Underpinning & Foundation Company drove the steel pile foundation. Pease & Elliman are the managing agents of the property.

Prize for Best Thesis.

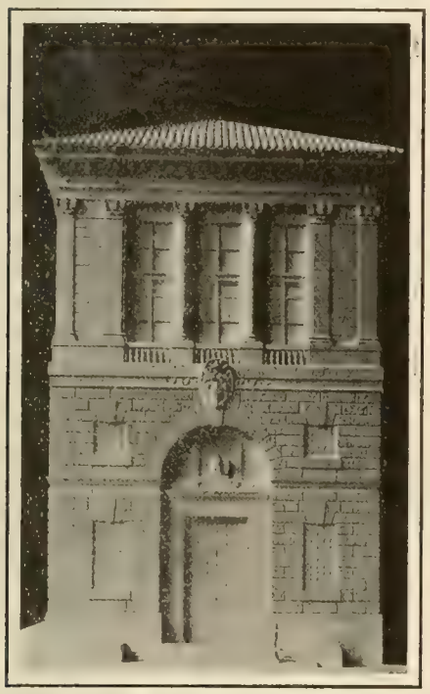
Waddill Catchings, president of the Central Foundry Company, New York City, has offered a prize of $200 for the best thesis on a subject relative to house plumbing or the materials used in such systems. The competition is limited to students in Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The thesis must contain from 5,000 to 10,000 words exclusive of tables and drawings and presented not later than May 1st, 1915. Subjects must be approved in writing by Prof. George C. Whipple before November 1st, 1914. The awards will be made by a committee appointed by Prof. Whipple and Gifford Le Clear, lecturer on the mechanical portions of buildings in the department of architecture. Special consideration will be given to theses based on original investigations, in making the final award.



A surprisingly large number of people from this country were spending money in Europe when the war broke out. The Europeans had every reason to treat them with consideration, which from all accounts was not at first readily accorded. War has its inconveniences.

FINANCIAL CENTER OF BROOKLYN

Many Notable Structures Projected During Last Eighteen Months—Home of Brooklyn Trust Company Last Word in Banking Construction.

DURING the last eighteen months many notable improvements have been made in Brooklyn's financial center. Others are now under construction or projected which will further increase the prestige of this important part of the borough. The section bounded by Court, Livingston, Hicks and Pierrepont streets has shown the greatest activity, although a number of important operations have also been completed, or are projected in the adjacent parts of the Heights.

This section has decidedly changed during the last ten years from a residential district of the highest character into the financial and business center of a thriving borough. Twelve years ago the "Heights" of Brooklyn was almost exclusively devoted to the homes of the city's oldest, wealthiest and most influential families. While a number of these families still maintain homes in the section, the great majority, and more particularly the younger generation, have moved to modern parts of the borough, or to estates in the country. Many old residences have been remodeled for business purposes and in some cases have been torn down to make way for the construction of modern office buildings.

FRONT ELEVATION OF MODEL.

Home of Many Institutions.

At the present time this section is the home of many of the borough's most important financial institutions. Banks, trust companies and title insurance companies have erected permanent buildings or are leasing quarters on long terms in the newer buildings. Many large insurance companies have branch offices in this section, while all of the available office space is devoted to the offices of lawyers, stock and insurance brokers and generally, to business men who desire to be in the center of business life. For lawyers, architects, builders and others whose business requires that they have their offices near to the City Hall and Court House, this section offers many advantages in the form of its modern office buildings, transit facilities, etc.

One of the improvements which is attracting much attention at the present time and which will have a decidedly beneficial influence on the whole section is the building recently started and which will be the permanent home of the Brooklyn Trust Company. This structure will represent an expenditure of nearly $600,000, exclusive of the cost of the land, and in design and plan will be the last word in banking-house construction. This building will rank first among the many fine bank buildings in Brooklyn and will compare favorably with any building in Manhattan, erected exclusively for banking purposes.

York and Sawyer, 50 East 41st street, New York City, are the architects who prepared the plans and specifications for this building, and it is being erected under their direct supervision. The work is being done under general contract by Marc Eidlitz & Son, 30 East 42d street, New York City.

Will Occupy Block Front.

The new Brooklyn Trust Company will occupy the entire block front on Clinton street, extending from Montague to Pierrepont streets. The main entrance to the building and banking rooms will be from Montague street, although additional entrances will be provided from Clinton and Pierrepont streets.

While the new building will be actually only three and one-half stories in height, the total height from curb to cornice will be nearly equal to that of an ordinary seven-story building. This will be due to the fact that the space devoted to the main banking-room on the street floor will be about equal to the height of three full stories as usually constructed. This banking-room will be one of the largest in the country, having a length of about 190 feet and being nearly 100 feet in width.

A Civic Ornament.

Architecturally, this structure will be a decided addition to Brooklyn's group of handsome buildings. The facades have been designed in the style of the modified Italian Renaissance. The exterior of the building will be of granite and limestone, and imported French marble or Caen stone will be the materials employed in facing the interior of the banking-room. The basement will be devoted to the safe deposit business of the company, with safe deposit vaults and bank vaults of the most modern design.

Possibly the development of this section can be best shown by briefly reciting a few of the most recent improvements. The Terminal building at the corner of Court and Joralemon streets recently completed is without doubt the most modern and completely equipped office building in the borough. It is twelve stories in height and was erected at a cost approximately $500,000. This building was designed by W. E. Lehman, architect, of Newark, N. J., and was erected by the John H. Parker Co., 315 Fourth avenue, New York City. This building is the home of the Nassau National Bank, Brooklyn League and the Civic Club. The basement and subbasement have been leased for a term of years to the Exchange Buffet Corporation, who are operating a restaurant there.

The Gas Company's Contribution.

Another building worthy of mention is the recently completed office building at 172-178 Remsen street, for the Brooklyn Union Gas Company. This is a seven-story brick and limestone structure, costing nearly $500,000 on a plot 75 x 100 feet. It was planned by Frank Freeman, architect, 132 Nassau street, New York City, and erected by the George A. Fuller Company.

Residences which have been remodeled for business purposes with new fronts extending out to the building line and in some cases with additional stories, elevator installations, etc., are occupied for the most part by insurance and real estate brokers, their layout being particularly adaptable for offices of this kind.

Outskirts of District.

The outskirts of the financial districts have also shown a decided tendency toward development along modern lines. This development has been most noticeable along residential and social lines, rather than for business purposes. Hotels, which have thrived in this section for a number of years, particularly the St. George and the Bossert have recently erected large additions. These hotels are of the family type, however, and do very little transient business.

Many high-class apartments have been erected and recently there has been a noticeable movement in the erection of bachelor apartments for men. The section includes a number of the borough's most important churches and private schools, which own valuable properties,

Reports to the U. S. Treasury Department from bankers at the principal financial centers bring assurances of a return to normal conditions in money matters. Men who have a stake in real estate can feel secure.

The present is a particularly favorable opportunity for real estate investment by those in a position to take advantage of it. Bargain hunters are likely to be disappointed, but those seeking a permanent investment which will return to them several times multiplied in later years are seeing the time to act. Real estate values always come back.

Let those who have plenty to do with in these times have more consideration than usual for the men whose loans may be falling due and who are unable to meet their obligations. Let the world see that New York real estate interests can be as large minded and as generous in a crisis as the banking interests. The country can thank the New York bankers for saving our gold for the use of commerce and manufacturing, and for preventing a money panic. It is not the time to stand too strictly on one's legal rights.

The plan of building a low structure for the present with the intention of adding to its height in the future is finding somewhat general favor when business buildings are in contemplation. The New York Central is doing this in the case of a building planned for the terminal section, and William Randolph Hearst is following a similar plan in his Columbus Circle operation. Low buildings when provided with suitable foundations can be added to whenever there is assurance of a larger tenancy, and are almost invariably good income producers for sites too valuable to be kept unemployed.

The New Liking for Apartments.

The dearth of news which usually affects the real estate market in August was relieved during the past week by an interesting announcement. The block front from 96th to 97th streets on Fifth avenue was purchased by Mr. John Russell Pope, the well-known architect, as a site for two houses, one of which he is to occupy himself. The news is interesting in several different respects. If there is any one section of Manhattan in which business has been more than usually dull of late years it is in the private residential district on the East Side. Houses on the side streets, near Fifth avenue, have been extremely difficult to sell, even when their owners were not unwilling to accept considerably less than their former asking price. Any development which has been taking place in that region has looked in the direction of apartment houses rather than private dwellings. As the Record and Guide pointed out recently, many apartment houses have been and are being built on Park avenue that are intended for a class of people who until recently have occupied the large houses on or near Fifth avenue.

One reason for the increasing popularity of very expensive apartments has undoubtedly been the improved quality of light and air which their occupants can obtain as compared with the ordinary private house. The modern New York residence is built so deep and so high that the rooms on the lower floors obtain an extremely poor quality of light and air. Only houses situated on corners are really well provided with sun and with the proper condition of good ventilation. Hence it is that even very rich people appreciate the advantages of living in an apartment situated well above the dust and noise of the street and accessible to an abundant supply of light and air.

The same lesson has also been thoroughly learnt by less opulent families—as may be inferred from the fact that the reconstruction of old dwellings situated between Lexington and Madison avenues has almost ceased. The new buildings, erected between these blocks are almost all of them nine-story apartment houses, accommodations in which rent from $1,800 to $3,000 a year, according to the size and location of the apartment.

The only exception to the situation on the East Side as described above is to be found in the upper end of the residential part of Fifth avenue. For some years rich people have been buying corners on Fifth avenue in the nineties with the intention, immediately or eventually, of erecting private houses upon them. Only a few dwellings have actually been erected, but the improvement of these blocks with modern dwellings is only a matter of time. The movement has now extended as far north as 97th street, and may go even farther, in spite of the fact that at this point Fifth avenue has already been occupied by cheap flats.

It is not difficult to understand why upper Fifth avenue should be subject to influences different from those which prevail throughout the remainder of the East Side. In the first place, Fifth avenue has, of course, the enormous initial advantage of fronting on a park and of being protected against objectionable building, on the other side of the street. In the second place, land on upper Fifth avenue, while expensive, is cheaper than it is further south. Finally, almost all the purchasers of upper Fifth avenue property have selected sites which will insure to their residences an abundant supply of light and air. They will be built on spacious plots, with frontages on two streets and will enable their owners to enjoy every convenience and advantage to which the possessor of an expensive private residence is fairly entitled. It is no wonder, consequently, that upper Fifth avenue is offering an exception to the general tendency in favor of apartment houses which prevails throughout the East Side.

No matter what the advantages and popularity of apartments, there will always remain a large number of people who prefer the comparative privacy of a house. This is true even in Paris, and it will still more be true of a city like New York, inhabited by English-speaking people. There will be enough of these people to occupy the private residences now existing on the East Side at sufficiently high prices. Two probable facts must be remembered in this connection. In the first place the supply of modern private residences on the East Side can never be very much increased, both because of the necessarily restricted boundaries of the district and because the land will, for the most part, be more valuable for apartment houses than for private residences. In the second place a return of industrial prosperity will increase considerably the demand for expensive living accommodations. Ever since 1907 the volume of that demand has been diminished by the natural or prevailing economic conditions. The accumulation of large fortunes was checked by legislation and by public sentiment, and certain special lines of business, particularly characteristic of New York, such as stock and bond brokerage, have become much less remunerative than formerly. In all probability these adverse conditions have pretty well spent their force, and a substantial recovery may be expected in the future. New York will again become a city which offers to its citizens peculiarly good opportunities for making money, and the result will be renewed demands for more expensive private residences on the East Side. The area of that district is small compared to the pressure of population upon it, which is certain to mean an eventual recovery in prices from Fifth to Lexington avenues.

Opportunities in the Export Trade.

There is one respect in which New York is certain to offer to its inhabitants decidedly better opportunities of making money—which is in the export trade. Almost for the first time in the history of the country a systematic, concrete and well organized attempt is about to be made to build up the export trade of the United States. An association has been formed for that purpose, and its work will be very much helped by the alteration which is going on in economic conditions and by improved financial machinery. The new national banking organization will establish a market in New York for the bills of foreign purchasers of American commodities. A number of the larger banks are agencies in South America and elsewhere for the purpose of better financing an export trade. American manufacturers are more than ever outgrowing the home market and are seeking foreign buyers for their products. The opening of the Panama Canal will place Atlantic ports on a parity with European ports in bidding for the Oriental trade.

Finally, the effects of the war will undoubtedly be to enable this country to obtain a great deal of export trade with South America, China, Japan, Australia and certain neutral powers which otherwise American merchants could not have expected to get. Just how much this will amount to will depend upon the duration of the war, but if it lasts throughout the winter the manufacturers, the exporters and the ship owners of this country should have an opportunity of building up quietly a permanently valuable trade. Any development of this kind will, of course, be peculiarly beneficial to the prosperity of New York City. Other Atlantic ports will share in the increase of business, but the bulk of it should be shipped from the port of New York, and almost the whole of it will have to be financed here. An extraordinary opportunity of future commercial and industrial expansion is, consequently, opened up for New York. All that has been lost as a consequence of the decline in stock brokerage and the discouragement of industrial centralization will be more than made up by the development of the export trade and the expansion of New York as a center of international financial transactions.

Conflict of Authority.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

While much has been written of the conflict of authority and the over-inspection of buildings by the many departments, this is such an important subject that it should not be allowed to rest without some practical benefit resulting to the city, and it is the hope of those who are interested in building construction that some sane and rational legislation will be forthcoming. The object of having departments to see to the enforcement of the Building Law is to prevent dishonest and dangerous construction.

There are always more honest people than dishonest, and the honest ones feel that they are handicapped because of a small dishonest minority. They feel that the money and time which they give to filing plans and seeing heads of departments in order to obtain permits, and the many approvals in connection with a plain and simple building operation, is time wasted. They know that, to a certain extent, it is a necessary evil, but are in hopes that this extra unproductive work which they do, and which does not add one jot to the value of a building, will some day be reduced to a minimum.

To have large staffs in the Bureau of Buildings, the Tenement House Department, the Industrial Board, the Labor Department, the Fire Department and also partly in the Police Department for the inspection of boilers, all in connection with one subject, namely, building construction, seems to modern economists absurd. Should any large business concern conduct its affairs in the manner that the municipality does in this respect, it would soon, because of such methods, be driven to the wall by ordinary competition. Why should the City of New York be so far behind the age?

Just think of the saving to the taxpayer if all these different jurisdictions with their many chiefs, deputies, office clerks, bookkeepers, doorkeepers, inspectors and messengers were all consolidated into one department, Not only would there be a resulting big economy, but the citizen who has to deal with these different departments would also be spared much time, trouble and annoyance, and those who have dealings with the departments, instead of spending a large proportion of their time doing things over and over again because of the jurisdiction of one department and another, will be able to attend to their real affairs; and the city itself will be indirectly benefited, as these men are all workers and what they do redounds to the ultimate good of the city, either in more buildings or better buildings.

The Bureau of Buildings has done its work with great efficiency during the last 10 or 15 years, and there is no reason why it could not save the city a tremendous amount of money and unnecessary annoyance, if it had charge of the administration of all laws affecting buildings.

Little or no additional expense would be necessary in connection with the Bureau of Buildings if all the laws on the subject of buildings were administered by it, and all the other Bureaus which deal with buildings, with their tremendous expense, would be saved the city.

Not only is it important, from an economic standpoint, to have this one department, but also from the standpoint of placing responsibility. At the present time there is conflict of authority, not so much because the different department chiefs are jealous of their prerogative, but because the law itself has caused this dual jurisdiction.

At the present time the department chiefs have agreed to work along certain lines to reduce the conflict of authority to a minimum, but should there, at any time, be an accident similar to the Triangle fire, questions will be raised as to why any particular department did not do what the law required of it. The law never contemplated that department chiefs should agree among themselves as to who should have jurisdiction over certain matters; the law only contemplates that each man does his duty; and there naturally will be criticism of those who neglected their duty in case of certain accidents, so that it is of utmost importance that this question of jurisdiction be settled.

JULIUS FRANKE,
Architect.

Commissioner Murphy Asks for Particulars of Duplication, If Any.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Frequent references are made by correspondents in your columns to conflicting orders on buildings of city departments. In the list of such departments the name of the Tenement House Department usually appears. It would be very helpful to me if some concrete cases were adduced, in which orders have been issued on tenement houses by other departments than the Tenement House Department.

When the law constituting the Bureau of Fire Prevention was passed tenement houses were specificially exempted from its operation. The Health Department refuses to deal with tenement houses except in cases of contagious or infectious diseases.

There is no conflict between the various Bureaus of Buildings and the Tenement House Department because their work relates to entirely different aspects of the same buildings.

Perhaps the Record and Guide would be able to help the Tenement House Department to ascertain wherein the reported duplication and conflict of orders consist; and if it shall be found, as I believe, that such duplication and conflict does not affect tenement houses to any extent, the Tenement House Department will be eliminated from the list of departments whose orders need to be harmonized with those of other departments.

JOHN J. MURPHY,
Commissioner.

The War Scare.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

There always seems to be somebody at hand to take the joy out of life, but in this case I want to take some of the air out of the "scare" incidental to the slight difference that some of our prominent European neighbors seem to be trying to straighten out. My attempt is mainly with reference to the effect the war will have upon New York real estate and new construction work.

If there ever was a set of business men that get panicky over the slightest deviation of business from the path of uniformity it is the real estate investor who has his money tied up in Mother Earth where thieves cannot break in and steal nor moth corrupt. He deals in a commodity that everybody must have, namely, space in which to live, move about and do business, and yet he thinks these United States are going to the bow-wows via Sneedy street just because the Kaiser, the King and the whole community of the other half of the world are at odds with each other.

Has it occurred to these same New York real estate men that New York, being the nearest port of distribution to the scene of hostilities, probably will stand to benefit largely from the conflict? Just as soon as shipping is made safe by England's great fleet, the warring nations will be obliged to send to the two Americas for their foodstuffs. The Government, according to newspaper despatches, is going to open the Panama canal for ships of all nations and this will mean that immediately New York will be the center of distribution for practically every commodity that South America produces.

Here the meat must be transshipped for use either here or abroad. Here also the fruits, the leather, rubber, ores and other products of that country must come to be reloaded.

Where is all this material going to lay during this transshipment period? The United States has not a large fleet of vessels, and in the interim the material must be stored. It is not practicable to take meats far uptown to the abbatoirs, and so it will be necessary to build structures of this type in the docking sections of the city, along the North River waterfront. The leather and other products also must be taken care of, and so far as I am able to learn, New York is not over wealthy in its possession of modern, sanitary and fireproof warehouses.

Will it not be necessary to have many offices of South American concerns here to represent shippers, manufacturers, mining interests and meat raisers? Will it not mean that Europe will require a great deal of our own products? Certainly the railroads will not welcome the storing of grain in the West when there is great uncertainty as to when there will be grain sailings from this port to starving Europe. Grain will have to be stored in the East, and so will a great many other Western products.

Of course one can point to a hundred and one other departments where men have been thrown out of work temporarily, but are there not also a great number of foreign workmen, such as waiters, trenchmen, section hands and factory employes on the reserve list who have been called to return home? I think we will find that for one skilled man being thrown out of work there will be three unskilled jobs awaiting applicants just as soon as things get adjusted a little better.

Remember this is the month of August, the dullest period in real estate and building in the year. If the effect of the closing of the stock exchanges and the bourses of the world will not hit us any harder than it has, I think we should invoke the language of the poets, look pleasant and say: "We should worry."

Ward's Island Terminal Plan.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

The municipal authorities should consider with attention the article in the last issue of the Record and Guide on a municipal union freight terminal, by J. Bleecker Miller and Reginald P. Bolton.

The subject is of such importance and presents so many complicated questions that it is impossible to arrive at any satisfactory, definite conclusion without full consideration of the many pros and cons.

Even our municipal authorities who have given much care to the study must still admit that their minds are open to argument and will welcome the ideas presented in this article, in spite of their startling novelty in city-planning. We are glad to be informed that the lease of Ward's Island to the State for fifty years, at a nominal rent, has not been signed. The arguments presented to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund at their meeting of March 11, of this year, seemed by no means conclusive, and now that this important and new public use of the island is proposed, it is fortunate that there is still time to hear the arguments which may be advanced to show the necessity of devoting this great stretch of water-front property to the commercial uses of this harbor.

PROGRESS.

Single Tax Convention.

The second annual conference of the New York State Single Tax League is called to meet at the Hotel Lorraine, Delaware avenue, Buffalo, Saturday, September 5.

The officers of the State League are: Horace Sague, Poughkeepsie, president; Benjamin Doblin, treasurer; Joseph Dana Miller, secretary; William Lustgarten, chairman committee on education. Among the vice-presidents are Robert Baker, George Foster Peabody and Byron W. Holt of Brooklyn.

—The abandonment of the car line running to Roosevelt Ferry emphasizes further the changes brought about by the new ways of getting across the East River. Most of the business of the ferry now is the carrying of trucks. While real estate owners in the district will feel a measure of loss, the line is no longer essential to continued growth, now that there are other ways for passenger traffic to go.

HIGH PRESSURE ADVISED

For a Portion of the Croton Water Works, to Supply Tall Buildings.

By converting a portion of the Croton waterworks of New Pork City from a gravity to a pumped supply a saving of $1,200,000 a year to property owners in lower Manhattan can be effected. This is the conclusion reached by James H. Fuertes, consulting engineer, who was retained by the Merchants' Association last winter to make a study of water pressure in its relation to automatic sprinklers for fire prevention. His report, based upon studies extending over six months, says in part:

Building Conditions Changed.

"Conditions have changed in Manhattan since the Croton works were built. Low pressures were sufficient when none of the buildings were over four to six stories high. At present, high taxes and the exigencies of commerce have necessitated higher buildings, and it is now necessary to have higher water pressures than formerly, as the consumers are entitled to have their public utilities keep pace, in development, with the requirements of business and of comfortable living.

"At present in the southern low service area of Manhattan, which lies south of 72d street on the West Side and south of 82d street on the East Side, only 57 per cent. of the total area is supplied with water at sufficient pressure directly from the street mains, while 43 per cent. is supplied at a pressure so low as to require pumping.

"Approximately one-third of the total supply to the southern low service area in Manhattan is pumped to roof tanks by small pumps in the basements of the houses and buildings, excluding office buildings, hotels and high apartment houses.

Private Pumping Cost $3,000,000.

"At present the cost to private consumers of the pumps and tanks required, and actually in use, for pumping the Croton water up high enough to give satisfactory service approximates $3,000,000 in the southern low service area of Manhattan.

"It is entirely feasible to construct a municipal pumping plant that will pump the supply for the southern low service area high enough to give satisfactory service; that is, to put the water high enough to supply automatic sprinklers anywhere in the district at a sufficient pressure at the tops of ten-story buildings, for a total cost, including connections with the street mains, of about $3,000,000; or about the amount now invested in private pumping plants in a little over half the area.

Location of Pumping Plant.

"The best location for a municipal plant for pumping the Croton supply for the southern low service district in Manhattan is at the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street Gate House. At this gate house the Croton aqueducts terminate, the supply, at present, to the Central Park reservoirs and to the mains leading to the different parts of the city being conducted away from this gate house in cast-iron pipe lines, which could be used, with slight changes, for delivering the water pumped at the proposed new station with a minimum of cost. The city also owns a tract of land at this site which is admirably suited to the purpose, and which should be used for no other purpose; any other use of it will be wasteful of public funds, as eventually it would have to be re-acquired for the uses of the pumping station which will eventually be built at this point."

AGAINST OVER-INSPECTION.

The Feeling in Brooklyn Favors Consolidation of Department.

Brooklyn continues to give strong support to the city-wide movement against the over-inspection of buildings? The feeling is very strong there in favor of the consolidation of a number of inspection bureaus.

Frank Bailey, vice-president of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, in an interview said that the multiciplication of inspection of realty in the City of New York is discouraging investment in tenement house property to such an extent that very little of this kind of realty is in demand. "The trouble is not with the inspectors," remarked Mr. Bailey, acording to the Eagle, "but with the laws. Many of the laws on the statute books are ridiculous and serve no purpose but to waste time and money in the effort to put them into operation.

"We had an experience only the other day, which illustrated the absurdity of some of the laws relating to factory regulation.

"A tenant in a two-story building occupied on the ground floor by a grocer, preserved fruit in glass jars and put them on sale in the store. The preserves were made in the rear of the store, and we received notice that the doors of the building must be made to open outward, because the place was now a factory.

"The inspector was simply carrying out the letter of the law, which in this case makes a farce of the intent of the factory regulations. And it is this way all along the line, from the construction of the foundations of a building to the installation of fire-escapes. Some day, I suppose, I shall receive notice that we must paint fire-escapes red, instead of green."

A Builder's Complaint.

"F. J. Ashfield, a builder of 350 Fulton street, who has operated extensively in Brooklyn for thirty years, is quoted as saying that the Building Bureau is fully competent to assume most of the duties of the various departments having to do with buildings, such as the Tenement House Department, with its commissioners, deputies, clerks, inspectors and general force, employing over 800 at a cost to the taxpayer of over $900,000 per year; the Bureau of Fire Prevention, with over 150 men at a cost of over $200,000 per year.

"Then there is the State Labor Department, with its large force of employes. I have no data as to the number of employes in New York City or the cost to carry same; also the Department of Health, the Bureau of Highways, the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. The cost of these various bureaus is a great burden on the owners of real estate. Here are seven distinct departments all of which have more or less to do with the erection of new and the alteration of old buildings. Duplications of inspection under these conditions cannot be avoided.

"What is the remedy? Combine the Tenement House Department, the Fire Prevention Bureau, the Labor Department and all and any part of the various departments having to do with buildings, structures of all kinds, under one head, the Bureau of Buildings, and by so doing avoid conditions which are becoming unbearable, and save the taxpayers over $1,000,000 a year.

"All owners, real estate brokers, builders and anyone having to do with real estate in this borough know the conditions of real estate today. It cannot continue to bear its burden if politicians and theorists are to go on creating conflicting laws, over inspecting, increasing expenses, destroying values and practically confiscating improved property."

EXCLUSIVE LISTINGS.

Benefits to the Owner From Having But One Agent.

Who do more for city, State and nation for so little pay and run so many chances of getting that which they earn than real estate men? Why this forced philanthropy? Why this working for boy's pay? But thereby hangs a tale.

Years ago when our sturdy forefathers wore bell crowned hats, dickeys, paper collars and wooden socks, the prevailing wages for labor was ten cents an hour. The carpenter boasted of twelve shillings a day and the real estate man received two per cent commission.

Since that time, through the efforts of the leaders of the various unions, skilled laborers have doubled and trebled their income, but the real estate man—prince of salesmen, financiers, diplomats—is receiving practically the same commission of more than a generation ago. All for the lack of united action for the mutual protection of owner and broker.

It is universally conceded by owners that a more satisfactory sale can be made by a high-grade broker than by an owner, even though the owner be a broker. Then it is just a question of a broker or a multiplicity of brokers.

Where owners ignorantly courting trouble, insist upon a multiplicity of brokers, half income men and others, who take a shot at a sale every chance they get, it makes illegitimate competition so keen that it breeds mutual suspicion, questionable methods and jealousies that are not a credit, and lay the foundation for several law suits for commissions. As such promiscuous listings keep the price of real estate in such chaotic condition and have done more to make the real estate profession not a profession than all other things combined, let us now consider briefly the advantages of exclusive listings.

Advantages Named.

In every city there are brokers who have adequate facilities for selling their specialty of real estate at the best price obtainable—unassisted—and with the least publicity as to the owner's private affairs. Exclusive listings does away with a multiplicity of "For Sale" signs on lot, dwelling and apartment house and eliminates the query of what can be wrong with the property that requires so many agents to sell it.

Exclusive listings does away with the prejudices that are formed against such brokers, whose placards are recognized as a sign of incompetency to tackle the job alone.

Exclusive listings places the responsibility upon the broker, which he naturally feels, and uses greater effort and spends money freely to make a sale at a fair price.

Exclusive listings do not eliminate competition, but they eliminate wasted energies.

The greatest reason why an absolutely exclusive contract is best is that it indisputably does three things: Protects the owner; protects the agent and protects the buyer, and anything that will increase the owner's profits and the agent's commission and at the same time give the buyer the best obtainable for his money, leaves no room for argument against it.

As chairman of the Listings and Commissions Committee of the New York State Association of Real Estate Exchanges, I have been in correspondence with hundreds of brokers throughout the State, who almost to a man will welcome the universal adoption of the exclusive sale contract, but they are afraid to attempt it alone. Let us make a business of our business and not bother with a business that is not on a business basis.—W. J. Russell, President New York State Farm Brokers' Association.

Demand in the Suburbs.

L. Ward Prince, secretary of the Scarsdale Estates, the Gedney Farm Company and other Westchester County real estate interests, in an interview says: "The European war is having little effect upon our realty market in Westchester County. Since the trouble began the market has been more active than it was in the same period before.

"This may be simply a coincidence, but it is true, nevertheless, and convinces us that the war is not ging to stop our market. If there is any explanation for this situation, it is due to the fact that the character of our selling is non-speculative. Unless things take a decidedly bad turn during the next few weeks, which is not likely, our August sales will be quite a little above those of the corresponding month last year."

Deeper Waterways Convention.

The official call for the seventh annual convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association has been sent out from headquarters at Philadelphia. The convention this year will be held in the City of New York and points on the Hudson River, September 22 to 26, inclusive. The first sessions of the convention will be held in New York, the last three days' meetings being aboard the steamer Berkshire, which is especially reserved for the association for this time. The steamer will proceed up the river by daylight, making stops at West Point, Newburgh and other points along the Hudson, and finally to Albany and as far as the head of navigation at Troy.

AN ATTRACTIVE SECTION.

The South Side of Nassau County Has Been Brought Within Our Residential Area.

While the south side of Nassau County, Long Island, has gradually changed in the last decade from an agricultural territory into one of suburban homes. Nevertheless, it has not lost its agricultural character completely. That is to say, the cultivation of the soil is now in the hands of thousands of home owners nearly all of whom have garden patches, which, to their minds are relatively of as much importance as the old farms that now comprise home sites were to the farmers who surrendered them to the land operators at substantial profits when homeseekers began their quest eastward on Long Island.

It is the south shore of Nassau and Suffolk counties that made the Island famous as an agricultural region, which made its potatoes, cabbages and cauliflowers famous the world over and which even made the Long Island duck so delectable to the palate of the lover of fowl. The home owners who came into southern Nassau County to reside began, each on his own little account, to take advantage of the fertility of the soil, with the result that this season is witnessing thousands of home owners at East Rockaway, Oceanside, Rockville Centre and numerous adjacent communities harvesting crops of potatoes, beets and other vegetable essentials sufficient to last them through next winter.

That the south side of Long Island, more than any other part of that territory, contains the soil elements of rich productivity is demonstrated by the fact that the Long Island Railroad Company is conducting experimental farms at Wading River, on the north shore, and at Medford, in the central section, because it has long been contended that those particular sections were not so fertile. It has never been necessary to demonstrate the utility of land along the south shore for farming purposes; and, so patent is the fertility of the soil there that it is not an uncommon sight to see land almost at the water's edge at such a complete seaside community as East Rockaway yielding crops. And, the same is true of all the surrounding country. The bridge tender for the Long Island Railroad at the bridge over Powell's Creek, at Oceanside, for example, raises a crop of vegetables even on the meadow bordering the creek. All of the land at Oceanside that is now developed into home colonies was originally farmland.

Nowhere in the vast suburban areas close to New York City is there a more perfect blend of land and water attractions than there is along the south shore of Nassau County. The various creeks, about one mile apart, that flow into Hewlett and Hempstead Bays, afford safe harbors for pleasure craft as well as still-water bathing facilities. Some of the creeks have been dredged and deepened; and, at East Rockaway a deep and straight bulkheaded waterway nearly a mile in length has been built through East Rockaway Park, thereby making the entire neighborhood more attractive for home purposes. Such an improvement as this is, which was carried out by private enterprise, would have been impossible a decade ago. Improvement in transit facilities along the Long Beach and Montauk divisions of the railroad has brought all of the territory fronting on Hewlett and Hempstead bays directly within the suburban residential area of Manhattan and Brooklyn.

TUNNEL RELIEF SEWERS.

Plans to Be Considered at Local Board Meetings on August 28.

At the meeting of the Local Boards of the Murray Hill and Kips Bay districts in the Council Chamber of the City Hall on Tuesday no final action was taken on the recommendation of the Consulting Engineer of Sewers, that a tunnel relief sewer and appurtenances be constructed in East 41st street from Madison avenue to the East River and in Madison avenue from 41st street to 43d street. The matter was laid over until Friday, August 28, at 10 p. m., in order that more time might be given to the property owners for its consideration. If this improvement is authorized it will involve an assessment upon the property owners within the following drainage area: Beginning at the East River and 30th street, running west to Second avenue, south to 28th street, west to Fourth avenue, north to 31st street, west to Fifth avenue, north to 43d street, west to Sixth avenue, north to 40th street, east to Fifth avenue, north to 50th street, east to Park avenue, south to 46th street, east to the East River. The assessed valuation of the property within the area of assessment is about $338,000,000.

The estimated cost of the improvement is $400,000. In the opinion of the borough officials the construction of this sewer has been made necessary on account of the unusually heavy rain-fall within the past year which has taxed present drains above their capacity. The Public Service Commission in its work on the Lexington avenue subway will save $100,000 if this project is undertaken and has offered to contribute that sum towards the cost of the relief sewers.

It was urged, therefore, at the Local Board meeting that action be taken as quickly as possible in order to avoid a possible withdrawal of this offer, which would decrease the cost of the improvement to $300,000.

Another matter on the calendar of the Local Boards of the Murray Hill and Hudson districts was also laid over until Friday, August 28, at 10 a. m. It concerned the construction of a tunnel relief sewer and appurtenances in West 46th street, from Seventh avenue to the Hudson River. If this improvement is authorized by the Local Boards it will involve an assessment upon the property owners within the following drainage area: Beginning at the Hudson River and 40th street, east to Tenth avenue, south to 34th street, east to Ninth avenue, north to 39th street, east to Fifth avenue, north to 54th street, west to Broadway, north to 61st street, west to Ninth avenue, south to 51st street, west to Tenth avenue, south to 47th street, west to the Hudson River.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

One of the most important sales, in the Upper East Side residential section of the city, of the year, enlivened the real estate market this week. It concerned a Fifth avenue block front which is to be utilized for high class residential construction. Other interesting sales concerned a high class apartment house recently completed in West 55th street, a plot in Greenwich Village to be improved, and a dwelling in the formerly restricted Columbia College Trustee's property in West 50th street which is to be taken over by trade.

An important suburban transaction involving a large tract at Long Beach, L. I., was also consummated this week, when a syndicate of wealthy New Yorkers acquired an option to purchase 500 acres. On the 200-acre tract which they already own, a $1,000,000 hotel is contemplated from preliminary plans which have already been drawn.

The Fifth avenue transaction attracted attention to the rapidly growing fashionable residential colony in the East 90s, which has been showing considerable activity within the last year.

Ernesto G. Fabbri purchased recently 100 feet in the north side of 96th street, subsequently reselling 50 feet to Goodhue Livingston. Two large houses are being planned on these sites for the occupancy of Mr. Fabbri and Mr. Livingston. Mrs. Amory S. Carhart's residence on the 50 foot plot to the west of the Fabbri property is now nearing completion. The south side of 95th street was sold to a syndicate of owners in the immediate neighborhood in order to preserve its private residential character. This property, according to the broker who negotiated the deal, is being offered for resale. Willard D. Straight, who purchased the northeast corner of 94th street and Fifth avenue as a site for a handsome residence for his own occupancy, also bought the southeast corner of 94th street and Fifth avenue for protective purposes.

The property just north on Fifth avenue was purchased by the American Ambassador to Germany, James W. Gerard; his brother, Sumner Gerard, also bought the large plot 100x150 on the southeast corner of 96th street and Fifth avenue. In the north side of 96th street, Ogden Codman has erected a forty-foot house, and adjoining F. de R. Wissman plans to erect a house for his own occupancy. To the east of Mr. Wissman are the plots purchased by Edward Shearson of Shearson, Hammill & Company, and Richard Trimble, vice-president of the United States Steel Corporation.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 12 as against 9 last week and 16 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 6, as compared with 4 last week and 4 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 6 as compared with 5 last week and 12 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 117, as against 120 last week, 6 having stated considerations totaling $201,466. Mortgages recorded this week number 59, involving $2,324,897, as against 61 last week, aggregating $1,339,807.

From the Bronx 5 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 8 last week and 6 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $573,190, compared with $745,263 last week, making a total since January 1 of $28,470,003. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $232,450, and the total from January 1, 1913, to August 23, 1913, was $38,053,307.

Fifth Avenue Block Front Sold.

John Russell Pope, the architect, purchased this week the entire vacant block front on the east side of Fifth avenue, from 96th to 97th street. The Phipps Estates sold the northwest corner of 96th street, a plot of six lots fronting 100 feet on Fifth avenue and 150 feet in 96th street, which Henry Phipps purchased about ten years ago. The rest of the block, a plot 100x100, at the south corner of 97th street, was purchased from the estate of William G. Parks, the Farmers' Loan & Trust Company, trustee. Also involved in the transaction are two five-story flat houses at 2 and 4 East 97th street, adjoining the above plot, which were purchased by Mr. Pope from Marcus M. Marks, Borough president.

The properties combined form a plottage containing approximately 29,000 square feet, with a frontage on the avenue of 202.4 feet, 150 feet in 96th street and 137.6 feet in 97th street. Two fine residences with gardens will be erected, one of which will be occupied by Mr. Pope. The property is the most northerly plot on Fifth avenue which has been bought for private residence. Negotiations, the brokers report, have been under way for the purchase of this property for about two months and contracts were ready to be signed about two weeks ago, but were held up on account of the declaration of the European war. The purchaser, however, decided to go ahead with the matter and carried out his intention, contracts being signed last Tuesday. Title passed on August 20. The deal was negotiated by Pease & Elliman.

$300,000 Deal in West 55th Street.

George Backer Construction Company, George Backer and Arnstein & Levy, sold through Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., the nine-story apartment house at 124-126 West 55th street. The broker reports that it was an all-cash transaction, involving no element of trade. The building was recently completed by the sellers, who have been active in this street, having erected the twelve-story Hotel Laurelton, at 147-149 West 55th street, which was sold to the Sweatland Realty Company; 140-142 West 55th street, sold to David Banks, and 39-41 West 55th street, sold to the Purdue Realty Company. The selling company still owns in West 55th street the 75 feet immediately adjoining the church on the northwest corner of Fifth avenue and 55th street, upon which it intends shortly to erect a high-grade apartment structure.

Marble Hill Apartments Re-sold.

The A. N. Gitterman Corporation has sold for the Yen Realty Company, M. M. Nye, president, the Marble Hill Apartments, a six-story elevator apartment house at the northeast corner of Marble Hill avenue and 225th street, size 117x86xirregular. This house, containing forty-one apartments and four stores, has been held at $160,000. The purchaser, William H. McDonald, gives his country estate at Sommerville, New Jersey, comprising a two-story concrete bungalow with twelve acres of ground in part payment. Harlan P. Young represents Mr. McDonald, as broker.

Big Suburban Deal.

The Lido Corporation, Henry Rogers Winthrop, president, has acquired an option to purchase from the Long Beach Estate, a 500-acre tract at Long Beach, L. I. It adjoins the 200 acres which the corporation bought last April, for the purpose of establishing an exclusive cottage colony. A $1,000,000 hotel is planned which will be one of the finest along the Atlantic Seaboard. The details of this operation will be found in the Building News department.

More Trade in 50th Street.

Mme. Rainbow, a milliner, has purchased the Columbia College leasehold dwelling, 14 West 50th street, from the estate of W. Prall Thompson, New York Life Insurance & Trust Company, trustee. She will take possession early next month. This is the second business establishment in this street, since the announcement of the Columbia College trustees that they would modify the existing restrictions against trade, by permitting light business.

Kewanee Boilers Add Many Dollars To Building Values

KEWANEE SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILERS are effecting coal savings as big as $1424.00 yearly in some of the best buildings in New York City. That saving equals a 5% income on about $30,000.00 additional value. In other words a Kewanee Smokeless pays as good an income (through the fuel money it actually saves) as a $30,000.00 additional investment in your building.

make more heat for less money than any other hand fired heating boiler in existence.

In New York City we can show many installations of Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers that are burning bituminous coal and saving from 20% to 60% of the fuel cost.

We want to prove this fact to you. Will you let us?

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Lack of forced sales as evidenced by the smaller number of properties offered at public sale as a result of foreclosure proceedings is regarded as an encouraging element in local real estate market conditions. There were this week less offerings in the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Sales Rooms than for the week ending August 14. Scheduled transactions for the coming week also showed a decrease in the number of advertised legal sales.

Among the buyers this week was Michael Simon who bought the four-story store and office building at 687 Eighth avenue for $18,200, which was about $3,000 above existing encumbrances. On the other hand, the property at 456 Broadway, a four-story business structure, subject to liens of over $77,000, went to the plaintiff on a bid of $55,000. Israel Lewis, as plaintiff, became the owner of a six-story apartment house at 640 West 129th street for $105,000, which was about $17,000 below existing encumbrances.

"Foresight Is Better Than Hindsight"

THIS is as true of building as of every other human activity. Build RIGHT when you build! Then there will be no regrets, no disappointments, no re-building, no unnecessary losses!

Build your building as your future tenants would like to have it built! Don't think to economize by leaving out of your construction calculations things that Twentieth Century business wants and must have.

Remember that every modern New York city building, if it is to succeed in attracting occupants worth while, must be equipped with GAS PIPES. Thousands of manufacturing and other concerns could not do business in this city at all without the clean, convenient and economical supply of gas that is delivered to them through miles of our pipes.

Any tenant at any time is likely to demand GAS facilities for his needs. You will lose many prospective tenants unless you can guarantee them an infallible GAS SUPPLY.

Install GAS PIPES at the time of building! If you don't, you may have to tear out walls and floors and spend a lot of good money putting them in afterwards!

Let one of our engineers talk with you. Just write to our GAS APPLIANCE DEPARTMENT, General Office, No. 130 East Fifteenth St., or 'Phone STUYVESANT 4901.

BUILDING MANAGEMENT

THE CARE OF TANKS FOR LOFT BUILDINGS

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

ALMOST everyone knows, in a general way, that water storage tanks of some variety are a necessity and are included as an essential part of the equipment of all buildings over a certain height and of certain types, in this city. Not until one rises to an altitude greater than that of the surrounding buildings in the business sections of the city, however, and looks down upon the roofs of the buildings within view, is it realized how numerous are these tanks and what a great diversity there is in construction and size.

Roof tanks are of two distinct types, those for the storage of water used for general house supply, fire lines, and in factories, for the supply of water used for manufacturing purposes, and those, fewer in number, and less conspicuous to the observer, but which hold the water supply for the automatic sprinkler systems. The latter types are quite different in form, and are seldom exposed to view as are the first-mentioned.

Code Provisions.

Without giving definite particulars the building code of the City of New York allows the tank question to rest almost entirely in the judgment of the architect and owner, particularly in regard to its necessity, and permits much latitude as to the kind of tank to be used. The code states as follows: "When water pressure is not sufficient to supply freely and continuously all fixtures, a house supply tank must be provided of sufficient size to afford an ample supply of water to all fixtures at all times. Such tanks must be supplied from the pressure or by power pumps, as may be necessary; when from pressure, ball cocks must be provided. House tanks must be metal covered, so as to exclude dust and so located as to prevent contamination by gas and odors from plumbing fixtures. House tanks must be of wood or iron or of wood lined with tin and polished copper. House tanks must be supported on iron beams."

The house tank is usually built of wood, although recently many of steel have been erected where greater capacity is desired, and it has not been convenient or practicable to build two or more wood tanks. Steel tanks have no distinct advantages over those of wood other than the fact of their greater storage capacity, and are often a cause of constant trouble to the building manager on account of the likelihood of their scaling on the inside, and unless carefully watched and frequently painted, are apt to rust on the outside. A small rust spot neglected is sure to cause a troublesome leak in time.

The observer notices two things in particular in connection with house tanks. The first is that they are nearly always cylindrical in form and sometimes tapering toward the top. The reason for this is simple. They are built in this form to equalize the pressure at all points. Square tanks are used sometimes when only small capacity is required, but the greater pressure on the corners or angles of entry often causes leaks.

Fire Regulations.

The second noticeable feature of house tanks is that they are elevated at varying heights above the roofs of the buildings they serve. This is a requirement of the Fire Department, which states that the tank shall be so elevated as to provide a twenty-foot head of water on the highest fire line outlet. This means that there must be at least twenty feet between the highest outlet in the fire line and the bottom of the tank.

Another absolute requirement of the Fire Department is that there shall be a reserve at all times of 3,500 gallons of water in the house tank as a supply to the fire lines and the house supply outlet must be placed above this 3,500-gallon level, unless a separate one is provided to supply fire lines.

Wood tanks are quite satisfactory for general purposes and should ordinarily last for many years. In the majority of cases leakage comes from the fact that the tank has been built and erected in its place on the roof of a new building before the water is turned on in the supply pipe, with the result that it is not filled for some days. When this happens, particularly during the warmer months of the year, the staves shrink and oftimes warp as they contract and no amount of water or caulking will make them absolutely water tight. Tanks of wood should never be built and erected until the piping in the building is ready to receive the water supply and until the tank can be filled soon after it is in place. Where this is done there should be very little trouble caused by leakage, thus saving the consequent loss of pump power as well as the saving of water charges.

Use of Valves.

Buildings can ordinarily be supplied with water from street pressure up to a height of from the fourth to seventh floors, according to the location of the building. It is considered good engineering practice to put a valve on each water riser at the possible level of street pressure. It is well to valve two or three floors to allow for a fluctuation in street pressure. These valves are usually placed on the fourth, fifth and sixth floors. When any one of these lines of valves is closed by cross connecting the supply line from the street, the lower part of the building can be supplied with water from street pressure. This procedure effects a saving of nearly fifty per cent. of the pumping expense in the average twelve-story building.

House tanks should always be equipped with a tell-tale from tank to engine room in connection with the automatic pump switch. This allows the engineer to know at all times the exact level of the water in his tank as well as informing him of possible trouble with the pumping plant. The pump may not be operating perfectly, the float switch shutting off the pump may be out of order and the water overflowing onto the roof, or a fuse may have blown out. This device is an insurance against a waste of pumping power as well as a waste of water.

Sprinkler System Tanks.

Tanks for automatic sprinkler system supply are constructed of riveted steel or iron plates and are much stronger than the ordinary house tank. They must be built to withstand a constant working pressure of seventy-five pounds to the square inch, as this is the pressure that the Fire Prevention Bureau requires to be maintained at all times. When manufactured they are usually tested to a hydrostatic pressure of from 100 to 150 pounds to the square inch, according to the capacity of the tanks, the requirements of the system and the number of sprinkler heads they are designed to serve. These tanks are cylindrical in form and are placed horizontally, usually in the upper floor of the building they serve or in a pent house on the roof.

Sprinkler tanks must be kept from freezing. This is important, and is usually accomplished by the installation of a steam coil in the tank house on the roof and an additional coil within the tank. Precautions against freezing in a house tank are not important, in view of the fact that they are usually much deeper than a sprinkler tank, and should they freeze there would always be enough free water for all ordinary purposes.

Deposits in the Water.

The very frequent source of annoyance, expense and loss of efficiency, in connection with roof tanks is caused by deposits in the water settling to the bottom causing stoppages. It has been found desirable in many instances to filter the water as it enters the building and before it is pumped up to the house tank. This applies particularly to apartment houses, small loft buildings, and other structures equipped with only one house tank. Where two or more tanks are used they are invariably cross connected so that one may be used while the other is being cleaned or repaired and refilled.

Building managers or superintendents will save money in the long run by having their tanks, both wood and steel, frequently painted. On the wood the paint acts as a preservative and prevents steel tanks from rusting. The painting expense is less than the cost of water wasted through leakage less the annoyance caused by it.

Advantage in Specialization.

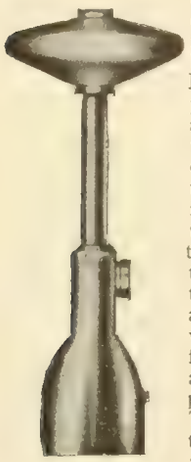
A real estate broker should not accept a listing of property which is outside the field wherein he is able to render service to the owner.

The more this rule is practised by brokers, the more high-class successful experts will be developed. The more concentrated attention a broker gives to one field of activity, the better the service he will furnish his clients and the more will the efficiency of his specialized service stand out from the delayed and scattered deals of the Jack-of-all-lines, says the National Real Estate Journal.



Furthermore, co-operation of most profitable nature will appear from brokers who specialize in other sections or lines, who appreciate the professional and monetary value of specialization and will always refer business to those who have demonstrated their ability to serve, rather than to those who fritter away their energy upon a little of this and a little of that, but nothing in particular.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

Heating Generator.

MUCH attention is being given now-a-days to the subject of obtaining greater efficiency in heating. Many devices and systems are being introduced, some of the more meritorious of them having been described briefly from time to time in this department of the Record & Guide. Now comes one of an entirely different character made by the Honeywell Heating Specialty Company of Wabash, Indiana. This device attaches to the boiler's expansion pipe and through it the expanding water must pass to the tank. In doing so the water forces a quantity of mercury up in two tubes, twenty-one and a half inches high, which seal the system from the atmosphere and safely generate a pressure of ten pounds. This generator causes the water to circulate remarkably fast, which results in speedy change of water over the heated boiler plates resulting in greater absorption of heat units and a greater conservation of the heat of the water itself. It is claimed that these heat generators have been used in many cases to cure defective heating installations.

A Positive Acting Door Check.

WHEN a door check is needed at all it must be dependable. A system employed in the Norton Door Check Company's product seems to give grounds for the manufacturer's claim that it is remarkably long-lived, even under the most strenuous use. The fact that the rack and pin principle of control is employed in addition to air pressure would seem to give assurance that the device is not only easy in operation, but possesses unusual powers of endurance. The cut shows the position of the rack and pin, and indicates the passage of air through the control chambers. In this check the swing of the door is taken care of mechanically, while the check is provided by air alone.

A New Gas Light.

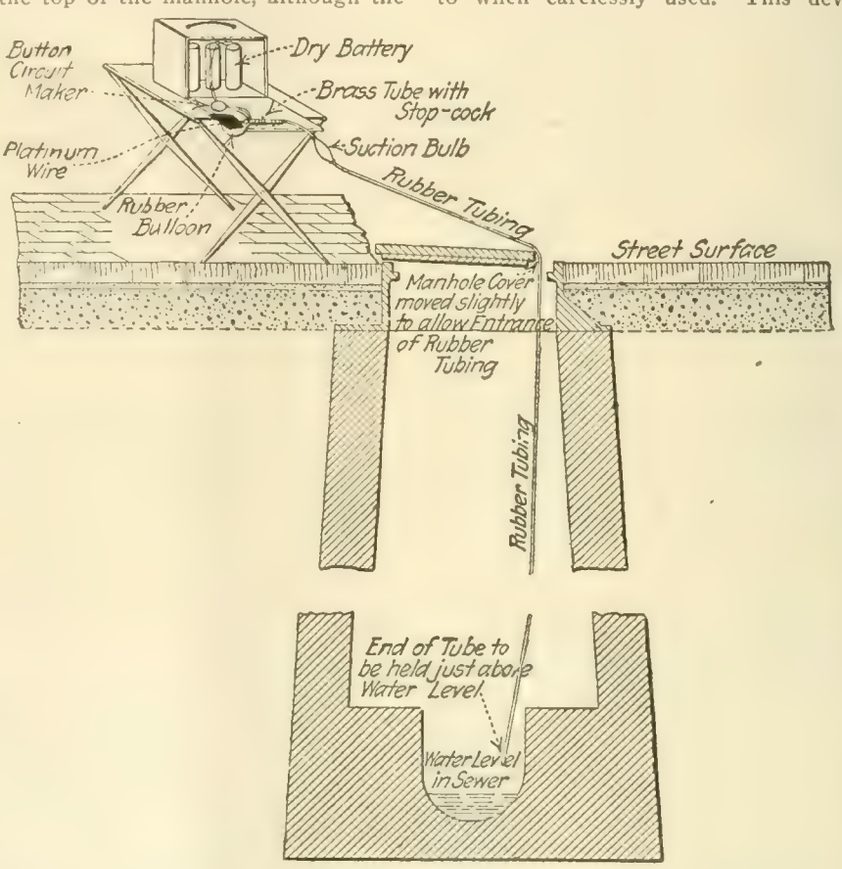
INFORMATION has leaked out to the gas light trade, according to the American Gas Light Journal, to the effect that the Welsbach Co. has developed a new type of lamp by which operating costs are practically cut in two. It is claimed that this light parallels the development of the nitrogen-filled tungsten lamp in the electric field. In addition the necessity for the use of cylinders is avoided and the new type of burner requires attention and adjustment only at infrequent intervals.

It is noiseless and non-carbonizing, inexpensive and simple of construction; may be applied in fixture design with almost the same flexibility as the electric incandescent lamp, and fixture discoloration is eliminated. The new lamp operates on novel principles in that the kinetic energy of the gas is fully utilized to secure uniformity of mixture, which is accomplished by providing scientifically designed stream-lines for the gases. This development is the culmination of three years' research in connection with the behavior of gases in the Bunsen burner, and it is said to be the first exhaustive work ever done in this direction.



The importance of the principle discovered is illustrated by an experiment upon the existing burner, which by mere chance happened to approach quite closely to the design found to be scientifically correct. The alteration of one or two apparently insignificant features increased the efficiency over 70 per cent. and rendered the cylinder superfluous. The necessity for extreme care in design lies in the fact that gases highly expanded and heated are greatly affected by conditions of almost infinitesimal nature.

Lamps constructed upon these principles have been in operation under service conditions 24 hours a day for a period of over one year. During this time they have been subjected to extreme changes in gas pressure and quality, and it has been found impossible to carbonize the mantle or to make the lamp flash back, and though the lamps have never been turned off, even for cleaning, there is no observable depreciation in candle power, and the mantles are all intact.

Officials of the Welsbach Company regard this as the most revolutionary development in gas lighting since the time of Welsbach. This kinetic type of burner will be placed on the market in the medium sizes within a short time and will later be developed in units ranging from 100 to 1,200 candle power.

Discovering Explosive Sewer Gas.

GASOLINE and other explosive vapors in sewer gas may be easily detected by the employment of a simple apparatus described in the Engineering News by Professor A. L. Dean, of Yale University. Professor Dean has proven that an explosive mixture may be made of one part of gasoline to 15,000 parts of air volume; or one gallon of gasoline to 2,000 cubic feet of air. This shows how small an amount of gasoline in a sewer may cause serious damage if ignited. The apparatus shown in the illustration may be employed to detect gasoline vapor, which is heavier than air. Lighter illuminating gas may be detected by odor at the top of the manhole, although the apparatus will show if there is enough to form an explosive mixture. The apparatus may be made in this way so that the manager of an apartment house or other building may employ it to make a test whenever he desires if he thinks his property is in danger from a nearby garage emptying gasoline into sewers.

A long rubber tube is let down into a manhole or sidewalk vent after sounding for depth to find the length of tube necessary to reach nearly the surface of the stream. The bulb is worked until both the rubber tube and bulb are filled with sewer air. Then a small collapsed rubber toy balloon is slipped over the firing end of the short piece of brass tubing to which the long rubber section is attached. Projecting from the brass tube into the balloon are the ends of two isolated wires from the dry battery cells, the wire ends being connected by a fine platinum wire. When the balloon is well filled with sewer air by pumping with the bulb, the stop cock in the brass tube is shut, to prevent back-firing and the electric circuit is closed by pressing a button. The heated platinum wire explodes the balloon if the sewer air is of an explosive mixture.

Scrub Bucket On Rollers.

AMONG the many novelties being introduced in the world of building maintenance perhaps none is more worthy of note than that of the Lawler compartment mopping tanks shown in the illustration and being introduced by S. C. Lawler & Co., of Chicago. This bucket is made of enameled iron so as to be sightly, but its special novelty is that it is on wheels and has perforated steel tubular rolls that make them almost everlasting and proof against the damage that rubber rolls are subjected to when carelessly used. This device passes silently over floors and permits the sousing water and clean rinsing water to be constantly within the operator's reach so that there is made possible a great saving of the scrubber's time in running back and forth from the point he is scrubbing to the buckets and wringers.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

West 36th Street the Scene of Another Large Building Operation—A Thoroughfare With a Varied List of Occupants

PROBABLY no better way to realize the far-reaching effect of the recent uptown movement can be obtained than by walking through 36th street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, for in this block almost every kind of business can be found, both wholesale and retail. Nor is this block an isolated example, as in several other of the blocks in the section like conditions can be found.

Not so long ago the block was entirely devoted to residences, and then, when business commenced to move uptown, there was a gradual transition to boarding houses, which were subsequently supplanted by retail concerns, such as dressmakers and milliners, who occupied the parlor floors which were altered by a store front, the upper portion of the buildings being devoted either to work rooms or let for living purposes.

Improvements Necessary.

Realty values, however, were so high that this class of occupancy quickly became unprofitable, and owners were forced to sell or improve their holdings. Builders invaded the section and assembled plots for improvement, until to-day there are in the block five twelve-story loft buildings, one eleven-story, one nine-story, one eight-story, and two six-story buildings, in addition to the old buildings still remaining.

The latest operation now in course of construction in West 36th street is the new twelve-story store and loft building at 63 and 65, owned by the No. 63 West Thirty-sixth Street Company. The plans for the structure were prepared by Rouse & Goldstone, architects, of 40 West 32d street, and were recently approved by the Building Department, Board of Fire Underwriters and the Labor Bureau.

Centrally Located.

The property is located in the heart of the wholesale and retail district, midway between Herald Square and Fifth avenue, and is within a few minutes' walk of the Sixth avenue elevated railroad and surface lines. The building will be equipped with two passenger elevators having a speed of 350 feet a minute and one freight elevator having a speed of 250 feet a minute. The latter elevator is provided with a separate shipping entrance.

The building will be completely equipped with a modern and approved sprinkler system, the best type of heating plant and two fireproof stairs, one of which is a smokeproof fire tower. The basement covers the full lot and has a portion of the sidewalk vaulted to furnish additional light and space. Each of the upper lofts has six toilets. The light is unusual, the building having windows on four sides on each of the upper eight floors. A. L. Mordecai & Son, 30 East 42d street, are the agents for the property.

Variety of Tenants.

To give an idea of the variety of tenants in this block, the following partial list has been compiled: At 53-57 West 36th street the store and basement is occupied by the Abercombie-Fitch Company, sporting goods, while the upper floors are occupied by four suit and coat firms, two dress and waist concerns and one novelty house. At 35-39 the stores are tenanted by D. A. Skinnell Company, silversmiths, and E. O'Donovan & Company, importers. The rest of the building shelters concerns dealing in furs, wall paper, human hair goods, embroideries, ostrich feathers, brushes, ladies' underwear, ladies' tailor, employment agency, dresses, waists, costumes, and dolls and accessories.

Other buildings in the block, in addition to some of the foregoing, are tenant firms dealing in jewelry, electroliers and shades, ladies' hats, musical instruments, music publishers, rugs, beads, corsets, furniture, infants' wear, watches, credit reports, buttons and plumbing fixtures.

There are thirteen restaurants in this block, which in itself indicates the large number of people employed with the various concerns. With the exception of the older established houses, the restaurants depend largely upon the immediate neighborhood for their patronage, and the lunch hour is their busiest time. Eight of these restaurants are located in the north side of the street.

Rouse & Goldstone, Architects.
63-65 WEST 36TH STREET.

THE WESTERN UNION BUILDING

The walls of the Western Union Building, at Broadway and Dey street, will soon be level with the ground. This was the first of the large office buildings to be erected. George B. Post was its architect, Smith & Rogers its builders. It was built in 1873-5, ten and a half stories high, of solid masonry construction, and for years was one of the architectural lions of the city.

A twenty-eight story building of steel-frame construction is being erected to take its place. The Woodbury Granite Company has the contract for furnishing the entire white granite facade, through Marc Eidlitz & Son, general contractors, and William Welles Bosworth, architect. The estimate of cost given when the plans were filed, in August, 1912, was $4,000,000. The ground dimensions are 75.3x275.2 and 33x 75.5 at 193 to 199 Broadway and 2 to 18 Dey street and 170 Dey street. One section of the building has been completed.

An interesting development in connection with this building is the publication this week of the decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in the law suit for the possession of the store premises at 8 to 12 Dey street, which the telegraph company had leased to second parties. George O. Glendenning took a ten-year lease of the store in April of 1908 under the name of the Interborough Lunch Company. The lease contained a covenant by the lessee against assignment, letting or sub-letting any part of the premises without the company's written consent to any such transaction. A violation of this agreement would automatically make the lease void.

Some time after the lessee sold a half interest in the business to a Mr. O'Brien, and under a special agreement executed to the latter an irrevocable power of attorney to conduct the business and a special power of attorney to sell, assign or sublet any right which the lessee had in the lease on the premises.

The court holds that the agreement and powers of attorney amounted to an assignment of the lease and since they were not agreed to by the lessor, violated the covenant on assignments. It therefore ordered a ujdgment in favor of the Western Union.

The whole effect of the controversy is to emphasize the sternness with which the law upholds the terms of a lease upon real estate.

Subway Contracts Awarded.

Edward E. McCall, chairman, and Travis H. Whitney, secretary of the Public Service Commisssion, have executed on behalf of the City of New York the contract for the construction of Section 1-A of Route Nos. 4 and 38, the Seventh avenue subway in Manhattan. The contract was awarded to the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company, the lowest bidder, for $474,244. Section 1 of this subway covers the connection of the new Seventh avenue subway with the existing subway at the Battery.

In July the commission was enjoined by the Cheseborough Building Company, owners of the Cheseborough Building in State street, which the company claimed would be injured by the construction of this section of the subway. A few days ago the application for an injunction was dismissed by the Supreme Court and the commission was free to proceed with the signing of the contract.

The chairman and secretary also executed the contract for station finish for certain stations in the Fourth avenue subway, Brooklyn, on the extension now being constructed between 43d and 86th streets. This contract was recently awarded to the Station Construction Company, for $251,133.72. There are six stations on the extension, namely, local stations at 45th street, 53d street, Bay Ridge avenue and 79th street, and express stations at 59th street and 86th street.

New Long Beach Hotel.

The Lido Corporation, Henry R. Winthrop, president, has plans under way for the construction of one of the finest hotels along the Atlantic seaboard. The company some time ago bought a tract comprising about two hundred acres at Long Beach, L. I., which will be developed at a cost of nearly $2,000,000. Cross & Cross, architects, 10 East 47th street, have been retained to prepare plans and specifications for this project. The scheme as proposed will consist of a hotel, casino, cottage colony and bathing pavilion. The entire tract to be landscaped. An eighteen-hole golf course will be an added feature of this scheme. The hotel proper will contain about five hundred rooms. It is planned to start active work of construction during the coming autumn and have the buildings ready for occupancy next summer.

New Building for Terminal Zone.

A new thirteen-story structure has been planned by Warren & Wetmore, architects, 16 East 47th street, for the New York Central to occupy the plot bounded by 45th and 46th streets, Lexington avenue and Depew place. The building will be of brick and limestone and in design will conform to the other structures in the zone. At the present time only four stories will be erected, the other stories to be added at some future time. The structure will contain an express office on the ground floor, with railroad mail service on the first floor, a post office and mail service on the second floor and lofts and offices on the top floor.

Addition to Hoboken Hospital.

James Whalen, 1024 Garden street, Hoboken, N. J., has received the general contract for the construction of an addition to St. Mary's Hospital, in Hoboken. The addition will be of brick, three stories in height, and will adjoin the present structure at the corner of Willow avenue and Fourth street. The operation will call for an expenditure of $200,000. The plans and specifications for this addition were prepared by James Brite, architect, 18 East 41st street, New York City.

Architect to Build Residence.

John Russell Pope, architect, 527 Fifth avenue, has purchased the property on the east side of Fifth avenue, 96th to 97th streets, and intends to erect two modern residences, one of which he will occupy. Preliminary sketches for these houses have been started, but full details of construction have not yet been decided upon. Complete details of the transaction will be found in another column.

Loft Building for West New York.

The Filmore Realty Company, Henry Leer, secretary and treasurer, 632 Filmore place, West New York, New Jersey, has had plans prepared by Arthur E. Dore, Jr., 650 Bergenline avenue, for a brick loft building to be erected at 17th street and Filmore place. Estimates will be taken at once by the architect.

New Apartment House at Flushing.

The Halleran Estate, 63 Broadway, Flushing, contemplates the erection of an apartment house here this fall. No plans have yet been prepared, and no further details have been decided.

NO ARCHITECTS SELECTED.

In this department is published advance information regarding building projects where architects have not as yet been selected.

FLUSHING, L. I.—The Halleran Estate, 63 Broadway, Flushing, contemplates the erection of an apartment house here. No architect selected.

DOVER, N. J.—The town of Dover has decided to pledge $2,000 toward the support of a public library to be donated by Andrew Carnegie Corporation, 576 5th av, Manhattan. No architect selected.

NORWICH, N. Y.—Carl H. Hultzer, 223 North Broad st, contemplates the erection of a 2½-sty frame bungalow here. No architect selected.

NORWICH, N. Y.—John M. Forsythe, 178 South Broad st, contemplates the erection of a residence in South Broad st. No architect selected.

LESTERSHIRE, N. Y.—The Lestershire Hospital, Dr. Chas. Wilson in charge, contemplates the erection of an addition to the hospital and nurses' home here. No architect selected.

PLANS FIGURING.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Bids will be received about Aug. 25 from a selected list of contractors for the residence for Douglas T. Johnston, 128 West 72d st, Manhattan, to be erected near Gedney Farms. Frank P. Whiting, 103 Park av, Manhattan, is the architect.

BROOKLYN.—Frank Berlenbach, 36 Suydam st, general contractor for the laundry and garage building for the Cascade Steam Loundry Co., 843 Myrtle av, desires bids on cement work, painting, sheet metal work, steam heating and electrical equipment. The structure is to cost about $50,000.

APARTMENTS, FLATS AND TENEMENTS.

Printers' Economy

Some of the most extensive publishing, printing and engraving operations in Manhattan are carried on under the roof of the Rhinelander Building at William, Duane and Rose Streets. Formerly every concern housed there had its own light and power problems Edison Service was sought recently and is now giving satisfaction throughout this entire structure. Owners everywhere are learning how hopelessly extravagant is isolated plant operation

Why not let us submit our claims to light and power perfection? Edison estimates cost nothing yet they open up a new avenue to greater building economy. Ask for your estimate today

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

WAITING FOR THE EVENTUALITIES OF THE WAR WITH CONFIDENCE THAT AMERICAN INDUSTRY WILL GAIN.

Prices for Steel and Wire Products are Mounting, but Other Materials are Easy.

WITH each passing day the building trades get new assurances of the stability of economic conditions in America and take new courage in view of the almost world-wide wars. The proclamation by the President to his "fellow citizens," on Tuesday, had a noticeably steadying effect. As the week draws to a close a decided purchasing movement seems to be setting in for certain materials. While this may be due in a considerable degree to a fear that quotations will be no lower, it naturally follows also from the new encouragement that is being taken. Without any tariff to effectively restrain them, the manufacturers of fundamental materials (such as steel and its products) that have hitherto been subject to foreign competition feel justified under all the circumstances in demanding a more satisfactory compensation for their output.

It is impossible to discuss even local industrial and financial affairs without having the European situation in mind. It is now the background of everything. Assuming that the United States will by no misfortune be drawn into the strife, the building industry which centers at New York City must sum up the economic probabilities in order to determine upon a course of action. To a large degree the decision will turn upon the receptivity of the real estate market and upon the percentage of occupancy of existing buildings, which will in turn be regulated by the degree of general prosperity and the availability of working capital.

It is taken for granted generally that building costs will not be directly affected greatly by the eventualities of the war, but this may not be altogether the case. As regards labor and most materials of the common order we are assured of a continuance of equable conditions, but there are many manufactured products for which a great demand from other lands may be added to our own before the war is over, which will warrant their advancement in value. If we could ship our cement, for example, South America could take all our present surplus of that material immediately. We also produce innumerable articles used in building construction and equipment which, in the absence of the usual supplies from Europe, manufacturers in the United States may now be called upon to export. Reports to Washington from American consuls in South America which the writer has read this present week reveal that there is very likely to be such a demand from that quarter. The rest of the world is looking to the United States as never before. Germany will suffer a tremendous loss in her export trade which the other great exporting countries of Europe will be unable to make up.

The local markets for building materials show a decidedly improved feeling over last week, but with no great increase of business. There is considerable more life in the steel market, where frequent advances in prices are taking place. The higher quotations for structural steel previously reported were followed this week by an advance in all kinds of wire goods. No change in quotations is noted for cement, lumber, lime or brick.

CEMENT TO SOUTH AMERICA.

The Building Up of a Great Trade Dependent Only on Shipping Facilities.

THE brightest prospect before the American cement industry in many years has been opened up by the European war. The South and Central American trade, hitherto largely controlled by German, Belgium and British manufacturers, is apparently ours for the taking. The part that will come to us, however, will be measured by the amount of material that can be transported by American or neutral shipping and will also depend upon the freight rates to be charged.

For some years our manufacturers have been studying the conditions which have to be met in South America, especially in Argentine, Brazil and Chili. They had foreseen the time when the European powers would kill off each other's commerce. Thus far they have been able to do comparatively little exporting. The principal hindrance has been the restricted shipping facilities and high transportation rates.

American cement manufacturers are now looking to Washington to release our merchant marine from the bonds that have prevented its expansion. If ships are made available, the American cement industry will enter upon the greatest period of activity in its history. The existing needs of South America could take every barrel of surplus cement that American manufacturers have in stock. American cement manufacturers are among the many interests which are now arranging for banking facilities in South American capitals. A number of Eastern cement mills are advantageously situated for engaging in the export trade, being directly on tide water.

Market conditions in this district are reported to show improvement over two months ago. Further improvement is expected in the fall. The initial shock to business has been safely passed, and the amount of current business is fair, though subway, bridge and street work is calling for more cement than are building operations. Manufacturers' quotations on American Portland in cargo lots to dealers are unchanged at $1.58 per barrel within lighterage limits. Rosendale, 90 cents.

LUMBER FREIGHT RATES.

Via Panama Canal—Anchorage Arrangements—Local Market Conditions.

LOCAL lumber dealers in Brooklyn and Queens are very busy. Some have had to hire extra teams. In Manhattan, Bronx and the Jerseys the yard trade continuues slow. Wholesale dealers say there is very little profit in current business.

The opening of the Panama Canal to commerce brings up the question of transportation and freight rates on Pacific coast lumber. An Eastern lumberman who is particularly interested in the West coast trade, is quoted in the Lumber Trade Journal as saying:

"It seems probable that for the first few months, or perhaps a year or two, the West coast lumber will be merchandized along the East coast by vessel-owning companies who will probably figure on a rate of nine or ten dollars, to which will be added a normal profit on the lumber. This business, however, will doubtless be too profitable to last very long, and I think we can safely figure that within a very few years the vessel tonnage available will be increased to a point where competition will bring the rate down to not exceed $6 per thousand feet, which, I should think, would give the large vessels a very liberal return on their investment.

"I have read many articles written by vessel owners and others with reference to the inability of American boats to compete with foreign bottoms in this trade, and there is one rather interesting feature which they all seem to overlook, which is, that prior to two or three years ago, freight rates on lumber from the West coast to New York were frequently, and, I think, almost always lower in America bottoms from British Columbia, and the difference was often two and three dollars, and sometimes four dollars per thousand, in favor of the American bottom.

"As to unloading lumber after the vessel arrives in the East, I am inclined to think that some anchorage will be found available either in the limits of New York Harbor, or perhaps better, just outside the limits where the ocean vessels while lying at anchor can be surrounded by fleets of lighters into which they can unload various parts of their cargo, and these lighters will doubtless deliver to points tributary to New York, where piling room and dock room are less expensive than they are immediately in the city, and from which the city's supply can be readily obtained."

IRON AND STEEL.

Pig Iron Production Decreased 13.4 Per Cent in First Half of 1914.

The Bureau of Statistics of the American Iron and Steel Institute has received from the manufacturers statistics of the production of all kinds of pig iron in the United States in the first six months of 1914.

The production of all kinds of pig iron in the United States in the first half of 1914 amounted to 12,536,094 gross tons, against 14,477,550 tons in the last half of 1913, a decrease of 1,941,456 tons, or over 13.4 per cent. In the first half of 1913 the output was 16,488,602 tons. Comparing the output in the first half of 1914 with the output in the first half of 1913 shows a decrease of 3,952,508 tons, or over 23.9 per cent.

The pig iron market is quiet and continues in a waiting attitude. Few tonnages of any size have been inquired for in the last few days and most sellers have done little in regard to new contracting. Scattered lots from 50 to 100 tons comprise most of the sales.

It is a little early to tell what effect the war will have on prices of American pig iron, but earnest students of the iron industry are predicting that it will be a stimulus to our trade. Of course, it means that our exports to European countries will be stopped for a time, but, on the other hand, it is opening up a wide field for our steel products in South America. It is claimed that large rush orders from our sister republics in the Southern hemisphere will more than counterbalance cancellations from Europe. In addition, imports will be stopped, and there will be no anxiety over the tariff.

The steel trade which suffered a sudden and sharp contraction upon the breaking out of war, gives evidence of recovery as the week closes. The suspension of imports of steel products from Europe was the signal for advances in prices here in a number of departments.

Steel wire prices were moved up this week $1 a ton to the basis of 1.60c, Pittsburgh. Wire nails were moved up $1 a ton to 1.60c, and other products were similarly marked up.

Business in plain and fabricated structural material is more animated than last week. The conviction is taking hold of building and real estate interests that they have nothing to fear but higher prices. Consequently a number of interesting contracts are being reported by fabricators.

The George A. Just Company has taken the contract for another Ford service building at Long Island City, calling for 1,000 tons of fabricated shapes. The contract for a 4-story mercantile building at 61st street and Central Park West has been placed by the Veronica Realty Company with W. B. Shaffer & Company; 950 tons of fabricated shapes will be used. Two additional 12-story apartment buildings for Bing & Bing will be constructed at the northeast corner of West End avenue and 96th street, this city, calling for 750 tons of structural steel which will be furnished by the Passaic Steel Company.

The contract for a pier shed on the East River, for the New Haven Railroad, requiring 400 tons of steel shapes, has gone to the American Bridge Company, while the Passaic Steel Company will furnish 400 tons of shapes for an apartment house in West 70th street, New York City. Inquiries are out for tenders on a number of other local buildings.

COMMON BRICK.

Less Registered Brick Unloaded This Week—Prices Weak.

THERE was a decline in the number of common brick unloaded this week. Prices are weak at $5.25 to $5.75, with the latter figure hard to obtain. The demand is very sluggish, dealers only buying just what they need for immediate consumption. This has been the state of affairs in the industry for a long period. Expectations of a good outgo of material to Brooklyn, to continue through the season, are being disappointed, as there has been a marked falling off in the Brooklyn trade since the middle of July. Predictions are made that most of the works up the river will be closed down by the 29th of this month, owing to their being stocked to capacity. The demolition of the Western Union Building and the Grand Union Hotel has thrown great quantities of brick on the market; all of which is going right back into construction.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, Aug. 20, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

REAL ESTATE RECORD AND BUILDERS GUIDE.

PORT ORGANIZATION A PRESSING NEED

Its Importance Far in Advance of Anything We Have to Do For the Future of New York—Would Help Business More Than New Subways Will.

THE outbreak of war on three continents, involving the principal exporting nations, is regarded in real estate councils as another notice to the City of New York to get ready for a larger oversea trade. The port should be reorganized in order that the railroad and steamship terminals may be properly connected together and administered under uniform public control.

Writing to the Record and Guide, a prominent member of the Real Estate Board says the importance of this subject is far in advance of anything that we have to do for the future of New York. He says further:

"As a broad proposition, the three hundred million dollars spent on subways would be giving a far better return to the city if the money had been appropriated for dock improvements.

"The history of the city indicates through its statistics for fifty years that New York grows exactly in the same proportion as her commerce grows.

"Every deepening of her waterways is a direct addition to her commercial power and activity. And every absorption of her waterfront by private parties, every filling-in of water area (like the new Shore Road at Bay Ridge) is a blow to her supremacy. Private interests would long ago have destroyed much of the value of the port of New York had it not been for the Federal Government."

What Needs to Be Done.

The foregoing indicates the feeling with which port improvements, planned or contemplated, are now regarded by the substantial interests of Manhattan Borough. The subways were a necessary social reform. They will greatly benefit the outer zones of the city. But it is beginning to be realized that the city has become so very large that the suburbs may be very busy with building operations without the older sections of the city getting much benefit from it. An enlarged commerce induced by adequate facilities would, on the other hand, give new strength to the heart action of the whole city.

An eminent authority on port organization who has favored the Record and Guide with his counsel but wishes to remain in the background, says the city should promptly adopt a comprehensive plan for the organization of the port as other cities and ports have done. At present, New York is drifting without any public policy, which is most detrimental to its interests. Piecemeal consideration of parts of plans will result in complicated and expensive reorganization problems later on. Both at South Brooklyn and on the west side of Manhattan, the unfortunate delay in adopting a policy, which has continued for so many years, should be terminated. Going into particulars, the authority referred to advises:

Marginal Railroads.

"1. Marginal railroads behind the dock fronts should be public roads always under full municipal control, even if private railroad operation shall be permitted. The city cannot maintain control over these lines if it permits the railroads to build them, or if it permits long leases to the roads.

HON. R. A. C. SMITH,
Commissioner Docks and Ferries.

"2. Railroad transportation over these marginal roads back of the dock should be as public and unobstructed as water transportation in front of the docks.

Treat All Railroads Alike.

"3. The public marginal road on the west side of Manhattan should be constructed with the intention of serving the needs of all the railroads, including those now terminating in New Jersey as well as the New York Central. Some people think this road should be a subway; others, that it should be an elevated road. Commercial opinion of the city and of the Dock Department favors an elevated structure. If, however, a subway is convenient and practicable, then a subway freight line should be constructed.

"It is purely a question of railroad engineering and one which cannot be decided in an offhand, cocksure way during a political campaign. The main point is that such a marginal road should be promptly planned and built. In no other way can the disgraceful and expensive congestion along the Hudson River docks be terminated, or the surface truck nuisance of the New York Central abated, or room provided for ships instead of railroad car floats at the waterfront.

"4. Since the great public terminals at South Brooklyn and West Manhattan will be profitable enterprises, there is no excuse for permitting them to be privately exploited. Sufficient profit can be extracted from their operation to pay interest and amortization charges; and New York, like all other seaports, should at the outset plan for public terminals such as already exist at San Francisco, New Orleans and Montreal.

Adds to Food Costs.

"5. The inefficiency of present terminals at New York adds enormously to the cost of food, and one of the imperative city needs is wholesale railroad terminal markets with public cold storage attachments where the food supplies of the city will be received and distributed to the retailers. The present terminal system is wasteful and facilitates conspiracies in restraint of trade among the jobbers and retailers to the disadvantage of the farmers on the one hand and city consumers on the other."

The New Long Piers.

In carrying out the task set before the City of New York to supply facilities for the maritime commerce of the world requiring facilities at Manhattan Island, the Department of Docks and Ferries is building two remarkable piers between 44th and 48th streets, North River.

The plan in course of execution will provide one entire pier in the line of West 46th street and a half pier in the line of 44th street, which can readily be converted into one entire pier by going back into the land south of 44th street. These structures will be 1,050 feet in length and 150 feet in width, with slips between them of 360 feet in width. The slips will be dredged and excavated to a depth of 44 feet below mean low water, allowing ample accommodation for the longest and deepest steamships now entering the port or likely to arrive here for a number of years to come. The pier and a half will furnish three berths which will be sufficient for some time to take care of all the largest passenger steamships.

Commissioner R. A. C. Smith has said that the terminal when completed will provide the finest and most accessible wharfage accommodations to be found in any harbor in the world. It will mean that passengers will be landed from the largest liners at a point of unrivaled accessibility to the center of the city with its largest hotels and railroad depots only a few minutes from the terminal.

Unusual Engineering.

The construction of these piers has involved unique engineering problems. The site selected is located over a shelving rock ledge 20 feet below mean low water at the inshore end and from 44 to 50 feet below mean low water at a point approximately 220 feet from the present shore line. In order to remove this sub-aqueous rock it is necessary to uncover it by holding back the waters of the Hudson River by means of a temporary dam and by blasting it out in the dry. This method is not only considerably cheaper than its removal by blasting under water, but makes it possible to complete the work in a much more satisfactory manner.

As a preliminary to the construction of the temporary dam a contract was let for the dredging away of all soft material covering the rock. The first contract for this dredging has been satisfactorily completed. A recent modification of the plan to include the construction of a half pier on the line of 44th street has necessitated the extension of the dredging to include the entire area between 46th and 44th streets. This supplementary dredging is now proceeding satisfactorily.

Meanwhile a contract has been let for the construction of the temporary dam and the rock excavation. This work was estimated by the engineers to cost $497,500. The contract was awarded to Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins, the low bidder. Work has been proceeding rapidly under this contract. It calls for the construction of a coffer-dam built with interlocking steel piles. These piles are 70 feet and over in length and are driven to bedrock in two parallel rows, forming a succession of pockets approximately 16 feet in width and 24 feet in length. These pockets are filled with material dredged from the bottom of the river. When the dam is finished it will be approximately 800 feet in length and will hold back a head of water estimated at 68 feet. The pressure of this enormous mass of water is so great that it will be necessary to sustain the steel piles by a bank of riprap on the inshore side approximately 70 feet in width at the base and reaching to an elevation of about 6 feet above mean low water. On the outshore side the dam will be supported by a similar embankment of clay. When the dam is completed the water between it and the shore, amounting to approximately 55,000,000 gallons, will be pumped out. It is expected that this operation will take three or four days to accomplish. It will leave a dry area 800 feet in length by approximately 300 feet in width. Then this area, which is estimated at 76,500 cubic yards of solid rock, will have to be blasted out to make the necessary slip room.

Largest Work of Its Kind.

This coffer-dam is by far the largest work of its nature ever attempted by the engineering profession. The only works where a similar type of structure has been used are by the United States government at Black Rock in the Niagara River and at Havana Harbor in raising the wreck of the battleship "Maine." These operations, however, were insignificant in comparison with the present project. At the present time the work of driving the steel piles is almost completed. The work is being delayed somewhat by the dredging necessary to build the 44th Street slip.

NEW SYSTEM OF BUILDING INSPECTION

State Commission Will Recommend to Legislature the Erection of a New Department to Include all Present Inspection Bureaus

THE inevitable consolidation of departments and bureaus having to do with the inspection of buildings in this city will be brought about through the instrumentality of the State Factory Investigating Commission. An intimation of what is forthcoming was given by Counselor Abram I. Elkus, of the commission, some weeks ago through the Record and Guide, and this week a formal announcement was made by the commission in a published pamphlet.

This action anticipates conclusions which the Charter Revision Committee of the Board of Estimate was expected to reach in due time by a slower process. The State commission is in a position to give immediate attention to preparing the necessary legislation. Its recent investigations with a view to recodifying the State Labor law brought forcibly to the attention of the commissioners the injustice that is being imposed upon owners and tenants through the over-inspection of buildings.

The intended legislation will not only revise the State Labor Law but the City Charter as well. As the Legislature is responsible for the creation of the inspection bureaus now deemed superfluous, it is considered quite in order that it should undertake, through its Investigating Commission, to cure the resulting evils.

Only Tentative Plans As Yet.

The plan is tentative merely, and has not been put into anything like final form. It is issued solely for criticism and suggestions from those interested. These should be presented in writing to the commission on or before October 15, 1914. The pronouncement of the commission reads as follows:

BILLS will be reported to the next Legislature that will, when enacted, combine into one general Department of Buildings a number of the separate state and city departments and bureaus now having jurisdiction over the construction and maintenance of buildings in this city. There will be but one inspection department instead of many. Landlords and tenants will be saved infinite annoyance, and the city a large annual sum now needlessly expended. It will then be possible for an owner or tenant to get a clean bill of safety and be relieved of further expense for structural alterations.

"TENTATIVE PLAN submitted by the New York State Factory Investigating Commission with reference to the inspection of buildings in New York City by different city and State departments:

"Create a new department for the City of New York, to be known as the Department of Buildings, the head of which shall be the Commissioner of Buildings, who shall be appointed by the Mayor. The jurisdiction of the department shall extend over the entire city.

"The Department of Buildings shall have sole and exclusive jurisdiction over the construction and alteration of all buildings and structural changes therein (including factories and mercantile establishments).

"There shall also be concentrated in this department, so far as practicable, jurisdiction over matters relating to the proper maintenance of these buildings.

"This will involve the consolidation of the following departments and bureaus, and the transfer of their entire tion to the new Department of Buildings:

"1. The Bureau of Buildings of each borough.

"2. The Tenement House Department.

"3. Bureau of Fire Prevention of the Fire Department.

"4. Bureau of Boiler Inspection of the Police Department.

"There shall also be transferred to this new Department of Buildings the jurisdiction now exercised by different city and State departments as follows:

"5. State Department of Labor—in so far as it relates to the construction and alteration of factory buildings and mercantile establishments and any structural changes therein.

"6. Health Department of New York City—in so far as it relates to structural changes in bakeries and food product manufactories.

"7. Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity—in so far as it relates to the inspection of electrical wiring and equipment in buildings.

"This proposed plan concentrates in one department control over all matters relating to the construction of new buildings and alterations of existing buildings and does away with needless multiplicity of inspections so far as the maintenance of those buildings is concerned.

"It covers all buildings and industrial establishments, including factories, mercantile establishments, tenement houses, etc. Plans for construction and alteration of buildings need be filed with this

MARGINAL ROAD WILL REVIVE DISTRICT

Local Freight Stations, Private Sidings and Tracks into Warehouses Will Do Wonders for Realty on Lower West Side.

THE filing of plans by the trustees of the Sailors' Snug Harbor this week for a four-story loft building at 743 and 745 Broadway, opposite Astor place, following the recent court decision which permits them to improve their extensive holdings by virtue of a more liberal interpretation of the original Randall will, serves to attract attention once more to the old wholesale district.

That entire section of the city has suffered heaviest by the uptown trade movement which began in 1904. A great many reasons have been given to explain the abandonment of this desirable section for locations farther north. Blame has been laid upon property owners, and upon the lack of modern buildings. Another reason that has been given is the tendency which business centers have of shifting nearer a radial zone, but no effort will be made at this time to go into this phase of the situation, which has been the subject of a great deal of comment within recent years.

Policy of Snug Harbor Trustees.

S. F. Carstein, who has charge of the real estate of the trustees of Sailors' Snug Harbor, in discussing this new improvement said:

"We believe that by improving our property in that section we can offer all the facilities that merchants and manufacturers are able to obtain farther uptown and at the same time give them as good, if not better, light. All our buildings are being improved with a hundred per cent. sprinkler plants, which will mean the lowest possible insurance rates. The entire district enjoys unusually fine transit facilities, and more improvements of this nature are assured—notably the Seventh avenue subway, which will extend from a connection of the existing subway at the Battery to another connection of the present subway at Times Square, and also the Broadway subway. These lines are under contract for the entire distance, and work is going on at various points along the proposed routes.

"Our building policy will probably be not the erection of eighteen or twenty-story buildings with their resultant congestion, but rather the five to eight-story modern building type, similar to the one we contemplate on Broadway near Astor place. Our properties improved along these lines will probably be rapidly absorbed by the better class of manufacturers and merchants.

"While we are not actually going ahead with new buildings, we are prepared to receive offers from firms who desire buildings for their own occupancy, and have several plots available for improvement at this time. For the present the above mentioned building operation indicates the probable future policy of the trustees."

Modern Terminals Needed.

In line with the advantages enumerated by Mr. Carstein it might also be said that the section offers at present numerous other benefits. A number of railroads and steamship lines have terminals or docks along the waterfront and the haulage and cartage of outgoing merchandise does not cover so large an area. The great need of the section, however, is the replacing of the present old structures by thoroughly modern new buildings.

Discussing this phase of the situation Aaron Rabinowitz, president of Spear & Company, said: "The construction of such buildings is needed for a complete rehabilitation of the district and should be the means of restoring property values and the reviving of interest in the section among mercantile concerns.

"We have had no difficulty in renting properties that are well kept, properly lighted, and have all of the up-to-date improvements which the present-day tenant deems a necessity. While there are still vacancies to be found, these are generally justified by the condition of the premises, which reveal a failure to provide these modern conveniences. The district has everything in its favor and will hold its own if the old structures are modernized to meet the demand."

Section Still Active.

In spite of vacancies in a number of the buildings throughout the section, the streets still show considerable business activity. Heavily laden trucks may be seen passing back and forth constantly, and the sidewalks are piled high with cases of merchandise. Nearly every branch of mercantile and manufacturing activity may be observed, including novelty concerns, paper warehouses, leather goods firms, clothing manufacturers and other factories and establishments, too numerous to mention. No particular class of business predominates. The great variety of tenants resembles in many ways the present condition of West 36th street which was described in the Record and Guide of August 22.

Shipping Facilities.

The adequate handling of the freight of manufacturers who ship to all parts of the country will also play an important part in the rehabilitation of the old wholesale district. When merchants and manufacturers in the district will be able to send their truck loads of merchandise to adjacent freight receiving platforms without delay the effect will be like "bringing new blood into a withered limb," as Hon. Cyrus C. Miller has expressed it.

The problem of better trade handling facilities not only for this particular section, but also for the entire West Side of the city below 23d street, has been the subject of an exhaustive investigation by the Committee on Terminal Improvements of the Board of Estimate. Following long negotiations with the New York Central, which involved the greater portion of the West Side, an agreement was reached. With reference to the portion south of 30th street the committee sought a solution that would not alone end surface operation by the New York Central upon the city's streets, but would at the same time result in the reorganization of the terminal facilities of all the Jersey roads by bringing them into the use of a marginal terminal freight railway. The committee in its report, is of the opinion that an advantageous and desirable solution of this problem was obtained by the consent of the company to construct at its own expense a two-track subway southward from 30th street under the bed of Tenth avenue and finally entering the yards at St. Johns Park.

Private Track Facilities.

The plans include proper connections to freight stations which the railroad company may acquire and also such industries, warehouses, etc., doing an amount of business which will justify a siding or private tracks with facilities to the use of the New York Central and all other roads upon equal terms.

If these facilities shall be afforded to merchants and manufacturers in the old wholesale district there will be a wonderful revival of interest in real estate there. As things are the district already has special advantages.

PRIVATE HOUSE SITUATION ON WEST SIDE

Investment Buying Slack, Though Builders Are Assembling Plots for Improvement—Business Firms Are Invading Certain Thoroughfares

WEST SIDE real estate brokers discussed this week the private house situation in its various phases, including the renting and selling markets and the tendency to convert these residential properties into business buildings. A consideration of this branch of the real estate market is timely because the apartment house renting season is just commencing, and the cry is heard from many quarters that the private dwelling is being abandoned for the apartment suite.

Sales and Renting Conditions.

While it is generally agreed that the sales market in this section is quiet, it is regarded as a reflection of general real estate conditions throughout the city. Regarding renting conditions, however, there is a decided difference of opinion, some agents viewing it with optimism and others with pessimism. The demand by private families for dwellings in some blocks is reported to be good; in others owners are leasing to boarding-house people in order to derive all possible income. One broker declares that the business, to his knowledge, concerns principally such tenants and involves such moderate rentals that in several instances property values have declined from 25 to 35 per cent.

Other real estate men report a substantial demand for dwellings having up-to-date improvements, and assert that the tenants are mainly private families.

Three-Year Leases Usual.

The average term of lease is three years, although there are occasionally five-year transactions. In the great majority of cases, however, owners are apparently unwilling to tie up their property for more than three years, while the same length of term is usually satisfactory to the tenant. In the case of boarding houses, however, nearly all the leases contain a cancellation clause compelling vacation of the premises in from thirty to sixty days. A private family seldom leases under such terms.

All brokers, however, regardless of their views on the market, agree that the west side of the city, with its exceptional transit facilities, its proximity to Central Park and the Hudson River, offers unusual advantages to the home seeker who desires a residence in quiet and beautiful surroundings.

Renting Market Better.

Slawson & Hobbs said "The renting season which concerns houses leased from October 1, is better than it has been for the last five years, and curiously, a great many of the clients who have leased residences through our office are coming from apartments. The outlook for an unusually successful year appeared very promising until the outbreak of European hostilities; what the future holds in store is, of course, a problem. The demand is for dwellings without any discrimination as to the number of stories, but rather for houses in good condition, regardless of the height. If the owners of such property would put them in good condition, so that they could favorably compare with a modern apartment, the number of vacancies would be materially lessened."

William R. Ware also reported a good demand for private houses. He said: "Already the number of rentals closed for this year involving residential property is in excess of last year's record for the corresponding period of time. This situation may be attributed to one or all of several reasons. In this section private houses are less expensive than apartments. A good four-story building, with all modern improvements, can be rented for prices ranging from $2,200 to $2,400 a year, while an apartment containing the same number of rooms in the immediate neighborhood will cost from $3,000 to $4,000. The houses with all improvements installed are in most demand, people taking them for that reason."

Apartment House Construction.

While apartment house construction has been noticeable of late, there are still a number of blocks which maintain their character as private dwelling sections. A plot to be utilized for apartment house purposes should be not less than 65 feet in width, which means at least three private houses combined. Most of the multi-family structures which are superseding private residences are built on such sites, although there have been exceptions, notably the Selkirk in West 82d street and the three new apartment hotels now being erected in West 72d and West 73d streets by Edward W. Browning.

Earle & Calhoun said: "Investors are beginning to realize that the West Side has become a big apartment house center and are buying private house sites for improvement with such structures. They are also purchasing here and there keys to plottage. One unfortunate part of it is that little value is allowed for the building, but the enhancement of the ground within recent years more than makes up for this phase of the situation.

"The scarcity of sales to buyers for occupancy cannot be attributed to a lack of interest in such holdings, but rather to the apparent general unwillingness of investors to purchase at this time. While there have not been very many sales recently, the same state of affairs exists in other and similar sections of the city."

Altering Buildings.

E. K. Van Winkle, manager of Pease & Elliman's West Side office, discussed the private house situation from the point of view of altering for business purposes. He said: "The only street which shows such development to any marked degree is 72d street, and it is noticeable particularly between Columbus avenue and Broadway. It may extend eventually to West End avenue, since the private house holdings of the Lincoln Trust Co., adjoining its property at Broadway and 72d street, may be altered for business purposes.

"While this phase of the private house situation, namely its conversion into a business building with stores on the ground floor and bachelor apartments upstairs, is temporarily halted, the general improvement of business conditions will probably effect a restoration of activity along these lines. The demand for bachelor apartments on the upper floors of these remodelled residences has been unusually good. There is a demand for suites of from two to six rooms at moderate rentals, constant calls coming in for four and six room apartments at a maximum rental of $60, which cannot, of course, be met in this section at the present time."

Changes in 72d Street.

There are various reasons advanced for the changes in West 72d street. It is believed that the business will become more strongly established by the transfer of the street from the jurisdiction of the Park Department to that of the Department of Highways, which would permit business traffic at all hours of the day, whereas formerly it was allowed only before twelve o'clock.

The erection of nine and twelve story apartment houses in the other side streets will result, it is believed, in additional traffic, and high class retail establishments will be attracted to 72d street on account of its width and the character of the businesses already located there. The other streets which are adapted for business purposes, namely, 79th and 86th streets, are still under the control of the Department of Parks, and trade probably will find it difficult to make headway in either of these streets. While one dressmaker has become established in West 86th street, the location is near Columbus avenue. It is doubtful whether business will be able to penetrate permanently into the street.

Seventy-ninth street is perpetually restricted, and one owner can singlehanded restrain the installation of business in that street. As far as the other streets of the West Side are concerned trade may become established in those dwellings which will be purchased to protect the light and air of newly erected apartment houses.

Examples of Architecture.

While the architecture of New York City is of a nondescript character in the main our city has the distinction of including nine of the twenty foremost examples of architecture in the United States. The American Federation of Arts sometime ago undertook to ascertain what were really the most satisfactory examples of architecture in the public buildings of this country.

With this end in view the Federation invited an expression of opinion from a selected list of prominent architects, artists, sculptors, and others having a reputation for knowledge of architecture and an appreciation of it. A final result of the canvass was as follows: Boston Public Library, National Capital, Washington, D. C.; New York Public Library, Pennsylvania Railroad Station, New York; Trinity Church, Boston, Mass.; Library, Columbia University, New York; Congressional Library, Washington, D. C.; J. P. Morgan's Art Museum, New York; Minnesota State House, Madison Square Garden, New York; St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York; Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York; West Point Military Academy, West Point, N. Y.; White House, Washington, D. C.; New York City Hall, New York; University of Virginia, Toledo Art Museum, Union Station, Washington, D. C.; W. K. Vanderbilt's Residence, New York, and the Pan-American Building, Washington, D. C.

Following the initial twenty is placed the Metropolitan Tower, the University Club and Trinity Church in New York City and the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Zoning the City.

The Committee on City Plan of the Board of Estimate, has evolved an extensive program with a view to zoning the city. This requires the collection of a mass of data as to transportation facilities past and present and estimates for the future, and on land values past, present and future. The committee will also need detailed information as to the amount of floor space and land area devoted to office use, to trade and commercial purposes and to residential purposes. The committee has been authorized to employ a statistician, an engineering instructor and a draughtsman at $1,500 each, a second draughtsman at $1,200, and a clerk at $420. The investigations are now in progress.

THE UTILIZATION OF ROOFS

Much Valuable Space Will be Reclaimed if Borough President Marks's Campaign Is Successful—What Architects Say About It

BOROUGH PRESIDENT MARKS, who has been carrying on a determined propaganda for the utilization of roofs for purposes of recreation and pleasure, is receiving the warmest commendation from leading architects in the city. With almost perfect unanimity he is being supported by representative architects and organizations devoted to interests of the architectural field. The New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects has appointed a committee to co-operate with the Borough President along the same lines. It comprises J. H. Freedlander, chairman; Bertram G. Goodhue, Kenneth M. Murchison, William Emerson and John R. Rockart. It is hoped that the active interest of architects who come intimately in contact with owners of property will tend to decrease the great economic waste caused by reason of the non-utilization of roof space.

Roofs as Playgrounds.

Agitation has been going on for some time which has for its purpose the education of tenants and owners as to the desirability of roof space for playground and resting places, particularly during the summer season of the year. The numerous advantages of this scheme have been described at great length. Theoretically, it is undoubtedly an excellent idea, since it tends to the improvement of the health and morals of the people. For the attainment of this end, Borough President Marks has received in addition to hearty promises of co-operation and support many practical suggestions from architects which outline plans whereby its urgency and desirability may be more forcibly brought home to owners who are not in sympathy with or are indifferent to the movement.

One Architect's Vision.

Frank H. Quinby, architect, 99 Nassau street, describes in detail its practicability from the point of view of fire protection. He says, "There are many advantages, particularly where it is possible to communicate from one building to another by means of the roof in the event of a fire occurring while a large number of persons are on the roof. It would afford a better means of egress from the premises than through the smoke-filled halls or elevators, thus minimizing the panic hazard in congested buildings. The people would thus escape from a burning building through an adjoining structure and not hamper the operations of firemen.

"If we ever come to a practical working out of the zone system of arranging our city, it would be a simple matter to combine a whole block in one community roof with fire drills, to teach all of the people in the block to escape from the fire either up or down, as the case might be, and those going to the roof could reach the street, if need be, upon the opposite side of the block."

Using Roof on Dwelling.

Robert W. Gardner, architect, 84 William street, submits interesting data concerning the construction of a playground which he is superintending on the roof of a private residence. He says: "The usual objection to the use of roofs is the danger of leakage from possible damage. It seems that the difference in price between the grade of tin roof and the permanent wear and leak-proof roof is about 50 per cent. On the face of it this difference looks large, but actually in a dwelling house measuring 20x50 feet it only amounts to $40. That is to say, $80 for tin and $120 for a six-ply tar and felt roof with flat slate tile embedded in asphalt for wearing surface,

"The freedom from periodical repairs and painting quickly counterbalance the difference in first cost. The above roof is of the ordinary spruce beam construction. And the slates which are only 3-16 of an inch in thickness add very little to the weight. There are concrete tiles which can be made by any roofer and these may be used on the tar and felt roof as a wearing surface which will decrease the cost. The brick parapet has been carried higher than usual."

Dangers Can Be Avoided.

Eli Benedict, architect, 1947 Broadway, writes: "Among the great obstacles to this development is the unsuitability of the flat roof covering to the added wear and tear necessarily involved. Another is the lack of safety in the matter of lack of coping, proximity to air-shafts, etc. These things, however, can be taken care of by suitable planning of the roof and it is very evident that a roof planned for the contemplated uses would necessarily be better constructed than a roof planned for weather resisting qualities."

E. S. Child, architect, 29 Broadway, suggested that if the Building Department would allow the erection of light-framed screens on the roofs it would be an advantage, and these would so be designed that they would not interfere with the fire protection.

Atop an Apartment Hotel.

Max G. Heidelberg, architect, 12 West 31st street, has planned, especially for the benefit of women, a co-operative apartment house. The entire roof of the building will be utilized for the children during the day. In pleasant weather they may be out doors all day; in inclement weather a portion of the roof will be enclosed by means of a system of disappearing windows, such as are used in many tuberculosis sanitaria. The floor is to be of a sanitary material which will stand all weather conditions. The roof will be sub-divided into various sections, each one devoted to a specific purpose such as a nursery, a kindergarten and small gardening plots.

LABOR LAWS ABROAD.

Inspectors' Occupation Is Classed as a Profession in Some Countries.

Recognition of the fact that the administration and enforcement of labor laws involve much more than a mere system of detecting violations of law is becoming more and more apparent in efforts for the protection of the working classes. The establishment of definite rules and standards for the safety and health of workers, higher specialization of the functions of inspectors, and the creation in a number of States of industrial commissions with large powers, are indications of the progress made. In view of the attention the subject is receiving in our own country, the experience of foreign countries in the administration of labor laws and factory inspection is of peculiar interest, and a report on this subject, covering Great Britain, Germany, France, Austria, Switzerland and Belgium, has just been published by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor.

In the countries named labor laws date back to the beginning of the 19th century, but the first measures for their enforcement were not passed until 1833, when factory inspection was established in England, while similar action was not taken elsewhere until 1874, when France created a labor inspection department, followed by Switzerland in 1877, Germany in 1878, Austria in 1883, and Belgium in 1888.

While experience has shown that labor laws without provisions for enforcement are practically futile as protective measures, emphasis must also be placed upon the importance of efficiency in the administrative machinery, its scope and functions, its methods of work, the character of its personnel, and the provision of definite standards as to safety and sanitation. In only one of these phases of administrative work was marked superiority found in the countries visited as compared with the United States. This was in the training and character of the inspectoral force.

Professional Inspectors.

In Europe the position of factory inspector can be secured only after long technical training and severe tests. The occupation is classed as a profession ranking with law, medicine and engineering. Tenure of office is secure and pensions are given for long service and old age. Men who seek these positions are of exceptional character and attainments, and their work is correspondingly efficient.

In France and Belgium the whole work of labor-law enforcement is centered in the labor inspection departments, but in England the local authorities have jurisdiction over the enforcement of all sanitary provisions in workshops. In Germany the factory laws are administered by the industrial inspectors, inspectors of insurance associations, and police authorities, and in Austria by the industrial inspectors and the local industrial authorities. In Switzerland there is division of jurisdiction between the Federal factory inspectors and the cantonal inspectors, while the enforcement of the laws is entirely in the hands of the local police and the cantonal authorities.

Medical factory inspection is still an undeveloped field, England and Belgium being the only countries having separate medical divisions, and even there the number of physicians is small.

Women Inspectors.

Women inspectors number 20 in England, where they occupy the unique position of being practically independent in their work and functions. France has 18 women inspectors, Austria 5, Belgium 1, Prussia and Switzerland none, and the German States but few. Outside of England the work of women inspectors is limited to small shops where women and children are employed.

There is great demand among the laboring classes for workingmen inspectors. This has met with considerable opposition from some of the governments as well as from regular inspectors. England has 55 workingmen inspectors, but their functions are limited, their salaries low, and their status entirely different from that of regular inspectors. Prussia, France and Switzerland have no such inspectors as yet and there are only a few in Austria, Belgium, and some of the German States.

Two extremes of organization are found, the highly centralized and the decentralized. England furnishes an example of the former, with a chief inspector, division inspectors, district inspectors, and the lower grades of inspectors. In England is also found much specialization of functions among medical inspectors, dangerous-trades inspectors, electrical inspectors, etc. In the inspection departments of Prussia and Switzerland, which are examples of the decentralized type, there are no chief inspectors, each district inspector having the whole field of industrial inspection under his jurisdiction. Austria has a central industrial inspector, but his supervision does not extend as far as that of the chief inspector in England. In France there is practically no head to the inspection department, the division inspectors being charged with much of the inspectorial work.

Little progress in scientific standardization of safety and sanitation has been made in Europe and labor laws in many instances fail to give exact standards for the guidance of inspectors and for the use of manufacturers and employees. Inspection to detect violations of law is still the method used by most inspectors, and most European inspection departments are far behind the more progressive departments in this country.

Many of the men who do things in New York real estate affairs are arriving home, after being stormstaid in European countries. There will be action from now on.

The hotels were never before so crowded as at this time, principally with buyers. Many of them would have gone to Paris but for the war, and now New York will have to supply them. Which is just one of the signs of better times.

European countries are saying that the United States owes them several hundred million dollars of a balance for securities which they recently sent back. It will not take us long to make up that balance with the food and materials they will have to take from this side.

If the Workmen's Compensation Commission has no present power to remedy the wrong that some say is being committed against married men, in their being discriminated against by employers, then the commission should be quickly invested with power by the Legislature, or else the entire law itself should be repealed.

A sprinkler-head, capable of turning itself off automatically when the fire has been put out, would save $75,000,000 annually paid for losses by insurance companies. It is reported in insurance circles that the problem has at last been effectually solved by an invention of a thermostatic head which will not only open when the temperature of a room rises to a predetermined point, but close when the temperature falls, after the flames have been extinguished. With the sprinkler heads now in use great damage may possibly be done to a building and its contents by the continued flow of water until discovered and shut off by human agency.

New York City and the World-Wide War.

The war news of the past week has made it more and more probable that the contest will be longer than was hoped in the beginning. It is difficult to anticipate any probable series of events which will result in its early termination. The Germans have developed such emphatic strength that even if they are checked in their present offensive campaign, they will evidently be capable of putting up an indefinitely prolonged resistance to any counter-offensive on the part of allies. On the other hand, the Germans have before them an equally difficult if not impossible task. They may well succeed in breaking through the present line of the allies and compelling them to retire to a line nearer Paris. They may also succeed by a great sacrifice of life in forcing the still stronger line of defences, which the French have constructed in the neighborhood of Rheims, and in besieging Paris. But even then their difficulties would be only beginning.

Paris is capable of holding out for many months, and will require an enormous army for its complete investment—an army probably of 400,000 men. In the meantime they will have to keep open a long line of communications through a hostile country; they will have to deal with the formidable remnants of the French army, which will preserve its organization intact and which from its strong position behind the Loire will be able to keep a large part of the German army occupied; they will have to reckon also with the reinforcements which Great Britain will be sending to France in increasing numbers; and finally they will be obliged eventually to concentrate a much larger proportion of their forces on the eastern frontier to check the Russian invasion. Such being the general situation, the task which Germany has undertaken may strain to the breaking point the huge military resources and the superb military organization of that country. Neither party to the contest seems to be capable of converting military success into a victory so overwhelming and decisive as to force its opponents to sue for peace.

Assuming, then, that the war will not be finished this fall, and may well last over the winter and through the following spring and summer, it is evident that American business will have to be readjusted to something more than a temporary emergency. The conditions brought about by the war will endure for a long time and may well have important effects upon the distribution of the world's trade after the war has ceased. American manufacturers instead of concentrating their attention on the home market will have to devote their energies to satisfying an imperative foreign demand. It is by satisfying the needs of the belligerent powers and by supplying the demands of the former customers of the belligerents in South America and the Orient that the largest profits will be made. The United States will have a great opportunity to build up its export trade, and, of course, the city in the country which ought to benefit most from the building up of the export trade is New York City.

New York will suffer in certain respects from the results of the war. The complete stopping of operations on the Stock Exchange has already brought deprivation to many thousand people. But when a balance comes to be made of profit and loss, it is probable that New York will have gained more from the results of the war than it will have lost. New York City has always been the great gateway of communication between the United States and foreign countries, and as the relation between the United States and foreign countries becomes for any reason more important, that city is bound to obtain a substantial proportion of the resulting benefit. The fact that it is the largest manufacturing city in the Union, and that it is dominant in American finance has obscured the fact that the foundation of New York's prosperity was laid, not by bankers or manufacturers, but by merchants. If this country is again to have a merchant marine, and if a larger proportion of its energies is to be devoted to supplying the demands of foreign countries, much of the new American tonnage and of the increased volume of foreign sales will be financed, sold and shipped from New York City.

It is not to be expected that either New York or the United States will be able to keep after the restoration of peace the whole of its temporary gains, but it should be able to keep a certain proportion of them. All the belligerents will be very much exhausted by the results of war and will not be able to devote their usual energies to the recovery or development of their trade. Germany will be particularly hampered in regaining its lost ground, because its merchant marine will have been largely destroyed or have passed out of the possession of German citizens. On the other hand, American merchants will have built up an organization for handling export trade and will have learned the needs and customs of foreign purchasers. They will be able to fight hard for the share of the business which they have succeeded in capturing. But whatever the eventual results, the next six months will offer one of the most extraordinary opportunities to American business men for constructional commercial enterprise, which the history of this or any other country has ever offered.

Give It Support.

It is a most encouraging fact that the New York State Factory Investigating Commission has recommended the creation of a central city department which would have charge of inspecting all the buildings of New York City. The commission proposes that the new department be headed by a Commissioner of Buildings to be appointed by the Mayor. Thus the Factory Investigating Commission sustains the demands made by the real estate interests of New York for consolidation and economy of supervision; and the real estate and building and manufacturing interests should combine for the purpose of seeing that the recommendation is adopted. It will be bitterly opposed both by the officials, whose jobs are placed in jeopardy by the proposed reorganization and by other local and special interests. It will hardly pass the Legislature unless it is strongly supported and the organization of this support should be commenced immediately. Much of the resistance will come from the local politicians, and it is of the utmost importance that public interest on behalf of the reform should be built up in the outlying boroughs.

A Suggestion for the Building Bureaus.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

It is a pleasure to note that your valuable paper has been directing its attention toward having the complex City Department situation simplified.

To have the issuing of building permits and the obtaining of necessary information from the various departments expedited promptly should be the wish of every taxpayer and business man in this city. New York can hope to keep her place in the forefront only by being responsive to the needs of business men and manufacturers. Many of them are thinking of moving into New Jersey and elsewhere to avoid the ceaseless red tape of permits, inspections, violation notices and multitudinous annoyances so prevalent in the city's administration of affairs.

Why is it that so many of the city employes lack responsiveness to the public needs? I believe the present Building Department administration is better in many respects than it has ever been before in the history of New York City, and yet is there not a danger of it becoming top heavy?

For instance, sometimes a dozen or more men are compelled to wait for an hour or more for an interview on a question which could be answered by one of the heads of the department in about one minute. It would greatly simplify the system if ready access were granted to the intelligent heads of departments who are familiar with the regulations and requirements.

Let us hope that the various building departments will soon be under one Superintendent of Buildings and that the "suffering public" can quickly approach some intelligent person at the head of each bureau, such as Construction, Plumbing, Tenement, Fire and Factory, and obtain the desired information, and then go about his business. As things are now, a large renting space is required to accommodate the waiting public.

To improve these conditions should be the earnest endeavor of intelligent journals like the Record and Guide, as in the long run such papers will do more than any other influence for the individual, as well as taxpayers, investors and business men generally.

Conflict Between Departments.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Noting Mr. Murphy's letter in your issue of Aug. 22, in which he requests a specific case of "conflict" between the various Bureaus of Buildings and the The Tenement House Department, I beg to advise you of a case in which Mr. Murphy is now the aggressor.

The so-called bungalow apartments at Coney Island, an account of which with illustration appeared in your issue of April 18 was designed as two rows of two-story frame dwellings, and were approved as such by the Bureau of Buildings of the Borough of Brooklyn. The buildings were practically finished and a large proportion of them leased for the summer, when the Tenement House Department undertook to overrule the decision of the Bureau of Buildings and classified them as tenements, after which it issued a violation against the occupancy of same, and it is now defending an injunction suit to restrain its order to vacate.

That such a situation as this could develop is an unreasonable hardship on an owner of property, and it could not exist without that conflict of authority which Mr. Murphy denies.

Port Development on the East Side.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

I have read with great pleasure and much interest the article of Mr. Miller on the "Municipal Union Freight Terminal," in the "Record and Guide." The subject is one which deeply interests and concerns all owners of Manhattan property as well, of course, as all those interested in the city's welfare and probity. With the greatest port in the world, New York has had, perhaps, the least port development among the large cities of any seaboard and in this matter "go East" as Mr. Miller suggests, is certainly a wiser policy than "keep on the West Side" which has been the rule for many years.

ERNEST HARVIER.
1193 Broadway, Aug. 22.

Present Opportunities.

A letter from J. Edgar Leaycraft at Waterville, Me., says:

"War is a disturber of all credits and investments. Real estate, well located, has suffered less under present conditions than other kinds of securities. While there has not been a demand to purchase, real estate has, however, retained its intrinsic value as an investment proposition, owing to its income producing ability.

"There may be at times, under peculiar conditions, a depreciation in value, but New York real estate is sure to recover and always many opportunities today for individuals to purchase to good advantage and secure a large return on the capital invested."

Tax Experts to Meet.

The annual meeting of the National Tax Association, of which Professor Edwin R. A. Seligman, of Columbia University, is president, will be held from September 8 to 11 at Denver.

BUILDING CODE REVISION.

Suggestions Concerning General Fireproofing Requirements and Hollow Blocks.

Some of the recommendations which Supt. Miller receives in the course of his work of revising the Building Code are of more than ordinary interest. The general requirements for fireproof buildings, as contained in section 103 of the existing code, are a never-ending subject of controversy. A fireproofing concern has submitted the following suggestions:

"That wood treated by a process to make the same fireproof may be used in buildings over 150 feet high for floors, underfloors, sleepers, grounds bucks, nailing blocks, doors and windows, and their frames, and the trim, casings and interior finish, when filled solid at the back with fireproof material, provided that the fireproof wood shall be subject to approval by the Bureau of Buildings, after having been tested, inspected and marked as may be required by the bureau. Also that:

"Partitions of wood or wood and glass may be used in subdividing rooms or lofts in fireproof buildings less than 150 ft. in height, provided that no floor area in excess of 750 sq. ft. shall be so subdivided.

"Permanent partitions as specified in paragraph No. 106 shall be used for all toilet and other public rooms, for separating the space occupied by one tenant from that of another and for subdividing the floor space into units not to exceed 750 sq. ft.

"In buildings 150 ft. or over in height wood, if used for the purposes specified in this paragraph, shall be treated as specified in paragraph No. 5 of this section."

Hollow Blocks.

A dealer in building materials has called Mr. Miller's attention to the wording of paragraph 3, section 106, of the proposed code, and the possibility of various interpretations of the same. The particular sentence referred to says: "The thickness of shells and webs (of) partition blocks shall be not less than five-eighths inch." He calls attention to the fact that in the manufacture of hollow composition blocks the cores used in the machine for making blocks are necessarily tapered, so that the shell at one end of the block would be thicker than at the other. The question of whether this five-eighths inch refers to the average thickness of the shell or whether it would mean the minimum thickness."

Mr. Miller's correspondent is of the opinion that five-eighths inch thickness of shell is more than is necessary in the case of round cores. For square holes he doesn't consider five-eighths inch too severe.

He believes there is no necessity for specific thickness of shells; that commercial considerations will limit this. The blocks must be made strong enough so that they can be handled.

In paragraph 3, section 106, the provision that "concrete used in partitions shall be as required in section 108" may be construed to mean that no other mixture of concrete can be used in partitions, even though it may meet all the requirements of the tests prescribed in section 107.

The correspondent points out that in section 56, paragraph 2, provision is made for a minimum thickness of shells and webs of terra cotta or concrete blocks in non-bearing partitions. This is a duplication of the provision already made in section 106, paragraph 3.

North Side Board Urges Peace Conference.

For the purpose of initiating a movement among the civic, religious and commercial organizations throughout the country, in order to determine upon a possible plan for shortening or terminating the European war, the North Side Board of Trade held a special meeting on Wednesday evening in its rooms at Third avenue and 138th street. Resolutions were adopted urging all associations to unite in petitioning the President and Congress of the United States to call a peace conference with delegates from all the neutral nations.

While the members of the Board realized that their efforts as an individual organization in this direction could have little effect, yet they felt that as a commercial institution it was their duty to take some action, which might mean the beginning of a nation-wide movement to end a struggle brought on principally, in their opinion, by the pressure of commercial interests.

President W. W. Niles presided and brief addresses in support of the resolutions were made by Messrs. James L. Wells, Edward B. Boynton, Albert E. Davis, Francis H. Weeks, Charles Ullman and M. F. Westergren.

FINANCIAL DISTRICT.

Property Values in Broad Street and Exchange Place in Their Residential Days.

In the beginning of the seventeenth century the southwest corner of Broad way and Wall street was owned by William Smith, a leading merchant of the city. This son, William Peartree Smith, sold the property in 1759 to Nathaniel McKinley for £200 and the heirs of the latter transferred it to the city in 1796 for £800, or $2,000, according to the value of the pound in those days. The plot was 15 feet 4 inches wide, and 27 feet 6 inches long.

Nos. 4 and 6 were sold by the heirs of George Walgrove to Christopher Heiser in 1825 for $12,100, the frontage being 42 feet 5 inches. The adjoining No. 8 was sold by Anthony La Tour, hairdresser, in 1800, to John Shatzel for $2,950. In 1791, Thomas Barrow, limner, sold the two houses 10 and 12 to Dr. James Tillary, Robert Lenox, James Renwick, Rev. John Mason, D. D., and ten others. No. 10 extended to New street. The purchasers were all of Scotch ancestry and the organizers of the St. Andrew's Society. These sold the double property in 1794 to George Douglass, Jr., for £2,700, or $6,750.

A small house at No. 14 was sold by David Sandford, cordwainer, to David Coutant, turner, in 1773, for £350. Ownership of No. 16 passed from John Morrin Scott to John King in 1760, and the latter sold it in 1793 to James Stewart for £700.

Of the 13 houses on the block from Wall street to Exchange place on Broad street, in 1796, Luke John Kierstede had sold No. 18 in 1793 to Le Montes Noe for £1,175.—Wall Street Journal.

Year's Fire Insurance Premiums.

The fire insurance premiums collected in the City of New York during the first half of 1914 aggregated $12,560,591.01, as compared with $13,751,690.29 for the first six months of 1913, a decrease of $1,191,099.28. These figures are the combined returns of the individual companies reporting to the New York Board of Fire Underwriters on their business in Manhattan and the Bronx and to the Fire Insurance Salvage Corps on their Brooklyn business. The following table gives a comparison of the premium returns by classes of companies:

MANHATTAN AND THE BRONX.

Chance to Get a Dwelling Cheap.

The four-story and basement dwelling at 328 Convent avenue can be purchased at a bargain. It is owned by an up-State savings bank that is willing to dispose of the property at a sacrifice. They say "it is up to you" if you want it. The property is assessed at $30,000. Further particulars will be found in an advertisement in another part of this paper.

A BUSINESS CHANGE.

Goodale, Perry & Dwight's Purchase of Gibbs & Kirby's Uptown Office.

Goodale, Perry & Dwight have purchased the uptown branch of the real estate business of Gibbs & Kirby, at Broadway and 103d street, where the latter firm has been established for twenty years. The office will be maintained as the uptown branch of the business at 1133 Broadway. Among the properties which will pass into the management of Goodale, Perry & Dwight, will be the "Clearfield" at 103d street and Riverside Drive, the "Allerton" at Broadway and 113th street and the apartment houses occupying the block front on the west side of Broadway, between 103d and 104th streets, which include the "Friesland."

Goodale, Perry & Dwight have been identified chiefly with centrally located properties, although they have managed holdings in nearly all sections of the city. Their sales department has been particularly prominent and active within the last ten years. The increase of their apartment house management business necessitates the establishment of an uptown branch and this fact, coupled with the desire of Gibbs & Kirby to confine their activities to mortgage loans and sales led to the present transaction.

The firm was founded in 1866 by S. B. Goodale, who still takes an interest in its affairs. The first office was located in the Fifth Avenue Hotel at Fifth avenue and 23d street. In 1895, John B. Perry became associated with the concern, and Henry R. Dwight merged his business with S. B. Goodale & Perry in 1912.

Protest Against Fire-Escape Order.

The Ridgewood Heights Improvement Association held an important meeting in their headquarters at Onderdonk avenue and Bleecker street, Ridgewood, L. I., Tuesday evening, August 25. The meeting was called as a protest against the recent order of the Tenement House Department that fire-escapes be placed on all houses more than one-story in height, housing three or more families. Herman Gohlinghorst, president of the association, presided and addressed the meeting.

Tenement House Commissioner John J. Murphy attended the meeting, and after listening to the debate and the complaints of the various property owners stated that all he could do was to enforce the law as he had found it. He admitted that the arguments of the property owners to have rescinded the new order making these fire-escapes mandatory, seemed reasonable and agreed with the president of the association that the present time was a poor one in which to saddle additional burdens on the property owning public.

The Ridgewood Heights Improvement Association, which has a membership of about 700, is planning to put the matter up to the Allied Civic Association of Queens Borough with the idea of taking up this matter in court if necessary.

Memorial Playground Under Way.

The Board of Estimate on Thursday adopted the report of the Chief Engineer relative to vesting title to the Betsy Head Memorial Playground, comprising the area within the block bounded by Blake avenue, Bristol street, Dumont avenue and Hopkinson avenue, and three blocks bounded by Dumont avenue, Hopkinson avenue, Livonia avenue, and Douglass street, Borough of Brooklyn. Title will be vested in the city on September 1 and bids for the construction of the necessary work were opened yesterday. The proceeding was authorized on July 31, 1913, and the oaths of the commissioners were filed on April 21, 1914. The plans and specifications for the improvement were approved by the board on July 2, 1914, at which time the work was estimated to cost $175,748.

ASSESSMENT NOTICES.

Owners Will Be Informed by the City When Taxes Are Falling Due.

The Department of Finance has undertaken recently the new work of notifying all property owners of special assessments and certain other obligations to the city.

Comptroller Prendergast says the purpose behind this plan is twofold. It has been found that many owners of property do not know when their real estate has been assessed for improvements. The result is that they are charged with interest at 7 per cent. for a considerable length of time when it would have been to their advantage—and when they would have been able—to pay immediately. One of the reasons why this notification will be sent is to save owners this unnecessary excess charge.

The other reason, according to the Comptroller, is that unpaid assessments tend to prohibit further municipal improvements. The borrowing power of the city is very limited, because of the large subway and dock improvements now under way. Outlays for assessment work are charges against the city's borrowing power in just the same way as subway construction. New sewers and new streets cannot be laid, despite imperative need, except as the property owners reduce such of the city's debt as was incurred for local improvements.

Long Island Real Estate Market.

The Long Island suburban real estate market during the last week displayed a capacity to take care of itself. While there was a slight abridgement of the activity that prevailed throughout an unusually active summer, the reduction in the number of sales made was not sufficient to affect the strong undertone that characterizes property in this residential area that is so close to New York.

"Nassau County is focusing the real estate activity just now so far as Long Island is concerned," said D. Maujer McLaughlin, president of the Windsor Land and Improvement Company, "because stretching, as it does from the city line at Queens eastward for a distance of twenty miles, it is practically the only suburban county on Long Island. I am not unmindful of Queens County, which, while it contains some handsome suburban home colonies, is, nevertheless, as an entity becoming an integral part of the solidly built part of the greater city.

"This is shown by the large new public school buildings that have been built, by others in course of construction there, and by the thousands of attached houses built and being built in sections of the borough that only a few years ago were intended for suburban homes.

"It demonstrates the ceaseless growing of the City of New York whose area is ample for the purpose and whose geographical situation makes growth imperative. The constant extension of the residential outposts eastward on Long Island is the complete explanation of the increase of fee values there; and, these are accentuated by new trolley roads and the increased traffice on older lines.

"Nassau County is unique as a county suburban to New York inasmuch as it is connected directly by trolley and elevated railroad with Park Row, Manhattan; and the circumstances also has a strong bearing on its land values."

NEW SYSTEM OF BUILDING INSPECTION.

department only. The separate building bureaus for each borough are to be consolidated into this one department to cover the entire city.

"No attempt has been made in this brief outline to describe with any detail, how the proposed Department of Buildings is to be organized. These details may be readily furnished as soon as the general plan has been decided upon.

"Note: This plan does not involve the creation of an additional city department. It simply provides for consolidating several existing departments and bureaus in one new department."

The members of the commission are Lieutenant-Governor Robert F. Wagner, Alfred E. Smith, Charles M. Hamilton, Edward D. Jackson, Cyrus W. Phillips, Samuel Gompers, Simon Brentano, Mary E. Dreier, Lawrence M. D. McGuire (a recent appointment).

Received With Approval.

Inasmuch as the consolidation of departments and bureaus into one responds directly to suggestions that have come to the Investigating Commission from many directions the tentative measure is meeting with general approval. Various details yet to be decided may be the subject of divided opinion. The desirability of the new Building Department taking over all the present duties of the Tenement House Department, including its welfare work and sanitary inspections, will doubtless be questioned in some quarters.

Supt. Rudolph P. Miller, of the Bureau of Buildings, while approving of the measure as far as it goes, more particularly favors a larger department, one in which all the police powers of the municipality would be combined, and which would be designated the "Department of Safety." It would include the police and fire departments as well as all the departments having jurisdiction over buildings.

A Big Thing for Real Estate Owners.

The tentative plan of the State Factory Investigating Commission to consolidate certain functions with regard to building inspection in one City Department is likely to secure enthusiastic support from real estate owners. The Real Estate Board of New York, which for months past has been giving close attention to this matter, and has been in communication with the State Factory Investigating Commission and various city departments on this and kindred subjects, is planning to lend its hearty co-operation to this proposed scheme.

Speaking of the plan in general and the Real Estate Board's attitude with regard to it, Laurence M. D. McGuire, president of the board, said:

"This is a very big thing for real estate owners of New York City. In fact, I do not know of any single thing that would bring greater relief and greater satisfaction to owners of buildings from the tallest skyscraper to the lowest factory building, than this contemplated plan of the State Factory Investigating Commission.

"For obvious reasons I do not care to go into details as to the plans of the commission. Indeed, the work of reducing the scheme to a practical working basis is yet to be done.

"But speaking for the Real Estate Board, which represents the great bulk of building ownership in New York City, I can say that if the State Factory Investigating Commission can work out a practical plan for consolidating supervision of buildings under one head, and can carry this plan successfully through the legislature, it will have deserved the thanks of every building owner in this city.

"It has been for years obvious to real estate owners that the burden of duplication of inspection orders, was an unscientific and wasteful phase of our municipal administrative methods. The addition of the Labor Department's activity in the same direction has greatly complicated the situation.

"If now a practical scheme can be perfected, not only will an unscientific method be reformed, but a great deal of unnecessary expense will be saved, both to the taxpayers, in a reduced charge for inspection, and to owners of buildings through a more systematic plan of inspection.

"It goes without saying that every real estate owner should give close attention to the proposed plan, and all who can should make helpful suggestions to the Commission.

"I may add, as reflecting the Real Estate Board's interest in this subject, that the Board of Governors, as long ago as early in May of this year passed resolutions urging the necessity of reform in this matter, and forwarded copies to several City and State officials. In other ways it has steadily urged this reform. That this work is beginning to bear fruit is, of course, most gratifying."

Brooklyn Activity.

The record of conveyances and mortgages filed in Brooklyn for the current year is running at a very even pace with last year's filings. Building operations are 30 per cent. ahead of last year's work up to the corresponding date, and last year was close to a normal period in Brooklyn.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

REAL estate firms are anticipating an increase in the business of their renting departments as a result of the exodus of American residents from Europe. A number of families who have lived abroad all-the-year-round, or for a greater part of the year, have been compelled to return suddenly to this country. While this class of clients has not been particularly conspicuous in the business as yet, a canvass of a number of the offices shows that inquiries are being made for both private houses and apartment suites.

The steamers from Europe now arriving are bringing tourists only, who do not affect to any degree the local renting situation. The prolongation of the war, however, will mean the return of wealthy American families for the occupancy of the better class of residential properties.

In the opinion of a leading real estate man these people will settle down in New York City and Washington, preferably this city on account of its numerous social and other advantages. The significance of the influx of such a class of rentpayers is expected to strengthen local real estate conditions. For the present, while no activity along these lines is noticeable, some of the trans-Atlantic liners now on the high seas may be carrying over tenants for some of our new buildings who ordinarily would have been occupying expensive houses or suites in continental cities.

The River and Harbor bill now pending in Congress is in danger of failing passage on account of the possible lack of a quorum. Weariness from the almost continuous session during the last two years and many other reasons make legislators anxious to leave Washington as soon as the trust bills and emergency legislation are disposed of. Supporters of the bill are urging the pressure of public opinion to insure the maintenance of a quorum necessary for the passage of this important bill. The appropriations call for $2,915,875 to be expended in New York State Improvements, including $250,000 for the channels in the upper bay of New York harbor, $300,000 for Gowanus Bay and $125,000 for the Hudson River channel.

If the bill is passed $100,000 will be spent on the Bronx River, $20,000 on Eastchester Creek, $36,500 on Westchester Creek, $500,000 on the East River and Hell Gate, $100,000 on the Harlem River and $30,000 on Newtown Creek. These improvements, if undertaken, will probably react for the benefit of property owners with holdings in the neighborhood of the benefited areas. In the opinion of a great many the waterfront improvements take equal rank with the subway construction, in the present development of New York City.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 16 as against 12 last week and 15 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 2 as compared with 6 last week and 3 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 14 as compared with 6 last week and 12 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 98, as against 117 last week, 12 having stated considerations totaling $459,550. Mortgages recorded this week number 67, involving $1,924,235, as against 59 last week, aggregating $2,324,897.

From the Bronx 8 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 5 last week and 6 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $684,387, compared with $573,190 last week, making a total since January 1 of $29,154,390. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $81,452, and the total from January 1, 1913, to August 30, 1913, was $38,134,759.

Trustee Sells Apartments.

James N. Rosenberg, as trustee in bankruptcy of the New York Real Estate Security Co., sold, subject to the sanction of the United States District Court, to Mrs. Emily Loewy, Concord Hall, 3,132 and 3,134 Broadway, two five-story apartment houses on plot 65x75, and 509 East 138th street, a five-story flat on plot 37.6x100.1. As part of the deal Mrs. Loewy transfers to Mr. Rosenberg, as trustee, a mortgage of $21,000, held by her on 468 Riverside drive, a nine-story fireproof building, at the southeast corner of 119th street, 100x100. Rice & Hill were the brokers, Weschler & Kohn representing Mr. Rosenberg, as trustee, and Arnstein & Levy acting for Mrs. Loewy.

House Sold from Plans.

LEASES.

Interesting Fifth Avenue Deal.

Peck & Peck, hosiery dealers, have leased through John N. Golding, the six-story building, 586 Fifth avenue, which is to be remodeled for their use. Peck & Peck have been on Fifth avenue for many years. Their first store was on the site of the Flatiron building. From there they moved to the Victoria Hotel. The removal of the old hotel forced the firm to move last February. In the meantime the business had been extended so that two other shops were opened, one at 481 Fifth avenue, and the other at 588 Fifth avenue, and when the plans were first made to build the Rogers Peet building on the 41st street site, still another shop was opened, at 448 Fifth avenue.

$55,000 a year for Hotel Grand.

Manger Brothers, who five years ago bought the lease of the Hurlburt Grand Hotel Co., on the Grand Hotel at the southeast corner of Broadway and 31st street, have renewed their lease for an additional fifteen years from August 1 at a rental of $55,000 per year, an increase of $5,000 per year over the former rental. The property is owned by Josephine Brooks et al.

$550,000 Lease of the "Leonari."

The Leonari, a thirteen-story apartment and hotel at the southeast corner of 63d street and Madison avenue, on plot 100.5x83.6, has been taken by the present tenant under a new lease for a term of ten years at a rental of about $55,000. The property is owned by the Park Realty Co.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

ELIAS A. COHEN, real estate operator and builder, has moved his offices to 182 Broadway.

HENRY BRADY has been appointed receiver of the 6-sty loft building, 403-407 East 23d st, pending fore losure proceedings.

N. BRIGHAM HALL and William D. Bloodgood (Inc.) have been appointed agents for 805-807 Lexington av.

JENNIE M. KLECKNER is the buyer of the 4-sty dwelling, 158 West 76th st, sold recently by John R. Higbie through the F. R. Wood, W. H. Dolson Co.

DOUGLAS L. ELLIMAN & CO. have been appointed agents for the "Schermerhorn," occupying the block front on the west side of Madison av, between 81st and 82d sts.

NEW YORK LIFE INSURANCE CO. has filed suit to foreclose two mortgages for $500,000 and $50,000 on the block between 139th and 140th sts and Lenox and 7th avs, owned by the estate of Commodore Thomas L. Watt.

G. A. ROBERG has opened offices at 4421 5th av, Brooklyn, where he will transact a general real estate and insurance business. He is sole agent for the Norwegian Underwriters' Fire Insurance Co.

JOSEPH P. DAY, as chairman of the transportation committee of American travelers detained at London, rendered valuable aid to fellow-countrymen in distress and honorably represented his profession.

PHILIP JESELSON has been appointed agent for the 12-sty loft building, 241-245 West 37th st; and for the 6-sty apartment house, on the west side of Wadsworth av, covering the block front from 184th to 185th sts.

GIBBS & KIRBY, having disposed of their agency business at 2705 Broadway to Goodale, Perry & Dwight, will continue in the bond and mortgage business and selling of real estate at their downtown office, 55 Liberty st, which was opened about three years ago.

WM. A. WHITE & SONS have placed the following loans: For Wm. Steiner, Sons & Co., $204,000 on the 9-sty building, 257x65, 257 West 17th st; for A. Montant, $175,000 on the 6-sty elevator apartment house, 552 Riverside dr; and for H. Weed in conjunction with firm of L. J. Carpenter $30,000 on the 4-sty business buildings, 191 Pearl st through to 1 Cedar st.

CHARLES F. NOYES CO. negotiated the lease of the new quarters to be occupied by the New York Sun in the 22-sty building at Nassau and Spruce sts. The aggregate rental was about $650,000. Extensive improvements will be made from plans of Walter S. Timmis, and the general contractor is J. Odell Whitenack. The building will be renamed "The Sun Building."

FOUR PARCELS of property of the late Senator Patrick H. McCarren, three in the 14th Ward and one at Coney Island, subject to a $30,000 mortgage, will be disposed of at auction at the New York Real Estate Exchange on Sept. 15, to pay the debts of the decedent. The sale is ordered by Samuel S. Whitehouse, surviving executor.

PLATE GLASS UNDERWRITERS' ASSOCIATION held a short session on Wednesday at the offices of the United States Casualty Company. The committee appointed to consider the commission situation made its report and was continued with a view of securing additional information from the individual companies. It will report to the association at a meeting to be held next Wednesday.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

Plaintiffs comprised nearly all of the buyers this week in the Manhattan and Bronx Exchange Salesrooms. In the more important transactions, Lester Florsheim became the owner of the apartment houses, 59-63 West 140th street, on a bid of $72,000.

The two four-story buildings formerly occupied by the Mahler store at the southwest corner of Sixth avenue and 31st street, fronting 82.6 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on the street, were struck down to the plaintiff in the action, Robert McGill, on a bid of $500 over and above prior mortgages amounting to $293,572, together with accrued interest. The sale involved the fee on the immediate corner parcel and a lease on the adjoining building. The judgment against the property was $23,223.41 and taxes of $5,081.90. The premises were also sold subject to a judgment of foreclosure and sale of a prior mortgage of about $56,000 on 517 and 519 Sixth avenue, brought by Joseph H. Strange and Emma Aaron and others. In the latter action the property was knocked down to B. J. Hoffacker for $241,666.

A HOME in one of the Windsor Land and Improvement Co.'s properties in Nassau County, Long Island, is not only an economical comfort but a profitable investment for the man of conserving disposition.
Offering property as we do in choice locations, substantially improved, sensibly restricted and sold on a large scale reacts to the benefit of the man seeking betterment in home conditions.
Nine inviting properties—Valley Stream, Rockville Centre, Hempstead, Floral Park, Oceanside, East Rockaway, Lynbrook, Rosedale and St. Albans.

Moving Day

Moving day discloses the fact that most of the moving vans are depositing their loads in front of buildings equipped for electric service.

Modern families demand electric light in their homes. They know its many advantages and conveniences and go where they may enjoy them.

The home electrically equipped rents more readily and sells at a higher price.

LU-CO-FLAT

To Apartment House Agents, Painters and Contractors

LU-CO-FLAT is a modern preparation for Interior Decorating. It produces a surface without gloss that is soft to the eyes and pleasing to artistic tastes.

LU-CO-FLAT is hygienic and is not affected by vapor, moisture or dampness. When soiled it can be washed. It is easily applied and the cost is moderate.

LU-CO-FLAT is made in all colors and many shades. As a background for stencil detail it is incomparable.

LU-CO-FLAT holds its color—the most permanent flat coat offered. Many change bedroom walls from the unsanitary paper to paint because LU-CO-FLAT is so generally pleasing, affording sanitation along with richness of color and beauty.

Try it on your next job and you will use no other.

Write for color card, showing combination of harmonious colors.

NECESSITY OF ENGINEERING ADVICE

By REGINALD P. BOLTON*

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager for The American Real Estate Co.

THE present condition of real estate is described by a financial authority as being "far from satisfactory" either as to the principal account, or "the income accruing from rents."

The situation is one of widespread importance and far-reaching effects. The maintenance of the financial credit of all large communities is dependent upon the value of real estate, and that value is necessarily established by the net returns or earnings of improved property.

The largest single element in the cost of operation of modern buildings in New York City is that of taxation, the proportions of which, to the rentals of buildings, range from twelve to seventeen per cent. of the gross income, in various classes of buildings, comprising business or office structures, lofts and warehouses, and elevator apartments.

There are naturally many elements which have brought about the present situation of unremunerative operation of improved real estate, such as the additional burdens involved in restrictive regulations, the stringency in the money market affecting the rates of interest on loans, the excessive land values brought about by the rising tide of taxation, the depression of business reflected in loss of rentals, increased vacancies, and reductions in rates of rental.

Unnecessary Wastage.

But, the largest element which experience and observation indicate as maintaining the present unsatisfactory condition, is that of unnecessary expenditure and wastage, both of construction and operation, which have become established during the period of prosperity and are, in many cases, maintained under the present conditions. The burden of excessive investment is one that cannot be eliminated and must be borne by improved property at the present time, but the past mistakes in this direction, should have the effect of indicating greater caution and better information upon future projects.

Unfortunately, it is less easy to eradicate the habits and methods which have been established in the operation of buildings which involve unnecessary and useless expenditure, due to the confirmed habits of recklessness and waste which have grown up among tenants and managers during years of unthinking prosperity.

Two Problems.

To these two problems of real estate, the services of the engineering expert in the planning and operation of buildings, should be much more widely applied. So far as the design of buildings is concerned, the fundamental financial elements controlling expenditure and height were first brought out by the writer from an engineering standpoint, and also the equally important feature of deterioration of buildings, both from an economical and physical standpoint. The principle, the neglect of which has led to the many financial failures of excessively tall buildings, is the simple constructive fact of additional cost per unit of space accompanying additional height. Building for building of equal design and materials, height spells increased cost per cubic foot. It has been very hard for architects and owners of property to absorb this fundamental fact.

The depreciation or deterioration of buildings is another element which has been almost wholly ignored in all past operations of the improvement of real estate. No precautions have been taken on the part of the majority of property owners to set aside a part of the earnings in time of prosperity or of the early period of high rentals, to provide for the decreasing value of the building and its eventual decrepitude. The principle is likely to become more widely appreciated since its recognition in the ascertainment of income for taxable purposes. Up to the present, however, no general and definite system of ascertainment of depreciation has been adopted.

The Engineer Is Necessary.

In this direction, also, the expert knowledge of the engineer is necessary, even before the planning of a new building. In the equipment of buildings, a general system of generous extravagance has been pursued, often burdening the improvement with a load of invested capital out of all proportions to any economical results. The cheerful manner in which architects have undertaken the excessive and costly construction of sub-surface space for the installation of machinery, has added as much to the capital cost of the improvement, as it has, on the other hand, detracted from the rental space provided.

In an effort to construct buildings possessing somewhat more conveniences for tenants than prior competitors possess, much real estate has been loaded up with machinery involving technical knowledge for its successful operation, and placing the owner of the real estate in a position of conducting two businesses at the same time. Owners and architects do not have the same appreciation as the engineer of the difficulties attending the operation of machinery, its limited life and rapid deterioration; especially from the economical standpoint.

Gratuitous Service.

It has been peculiarly unfortunate for the owners of real estate that such machinery has largely been occupied in providing conveniences to tenants, for which no adequate return in rental has been obtained. The gratuitous services of steam and electricity have simply brought about a habit of wastage on the part of many of the occupants of buildings which they carry into others, and have fastened upon real estate in general, the necessity of providing such conveniences and luxuries, without direct payment in return.

The irregularities brought about by free services of all sorts, especially in the residential class of buildings, are often disastrous to the maintenance of the value of the property. In a general way, the capital value of such properties is assumed to be ten times the gross rentals, but is really based upon a suitable percentage which the net returns will afford upon an appraised value. In such buildings, the cost of elevator service, heating and hot-water service, public and private lighting, will amount to more than twenty per cent of the total income.

Remedy Suggested.

If the practice were generally established, of making each individual tenant pay for services of these classes, as rendered, and in the proportion absorbed, it is safe to say that probably fifty per cent of the cost would be saved.

In existing buildings, a wide field for engineering services can be found in a radical re-study and re-arrangement of conditions and expenses; the results of which, if applied with sufficient determination, would doubtless relieve real estate more quickly, and to a greater extent, than a change in the financial situation or any possible reduction in taxation.

*From an address delivered at the First Annual Convention of the American Society of Engineers, Architects and Contractors, held at Brighton Beach, July 3, 1914.

NEW INCOME TAX RULE.

What Constitutes Losses in Trade Deductible from Gross Income.

Supplemental income tax regulations have been issued by the Treasury Department further defining the losses incurred in trade that may be deducted from gross income, in cases where the person is engaged in more than one line of endeavor. The ruling was made in answer to a number of questions, all of which the Department ruled could be embraced in the following general question:

"What constitutes 'losses incurred in trade' within the meaning of the income tax law?"

The new ruling said:

"In reply you are advised that upon further consideration of the question of losses the clause in paragraph B of the act of October 3, 1913, reading, 'losses actually sustained during the year, incurred in trade * * *' is interpreted to mean that losses actually sustained during the tax year as a result of any lawful investment made for the purpose of gain or profit, which gain or profit would be income subject to the income tax, are held to be 'losses incurred in trade' and may be claimed as an allowable deduction, even though the person sustaining the loss may not be regularly engaged in the business in which the investment was made. To be an allowable deduction, however, the loss must be actually sustained and determined during the tax year for which the deduction is sought to be made, and must be the result as ascertained upon an actual, a completed, a closed transaction."

Bus Line for Brentwood.

Communication between the pines at Brentwood, L. I., and Great South Bay at Bay Shore was established with an automobile 'bus line last Saturday by Brentwood Realty Co., which is developing Brentwood-in-the-Pines. Regular trips are made daily by the 'bus, which accommodates twenty-five persons.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration.

New Type of Brick.

FOR generations builders in laying up a wall carefully criss-crossed ordinary building brick in order to leave necessary air spaces to make the structure proof against dampness. Finally, in the present year, along comes an inventor with an obvious system of wall furring, using one brick unit for the furring space, the face and the back of the wall. That is how the Thermos brick came into being and it is also the reason why the Thermos Brick Company, of San Francisco, is just now having its hands full in keeping pace with business that is developing. It is called Web Brick and a wall constructed of them has the following properties, according to B. J. S. Cahill, member of the American Institute of Architects, in the Architect and Engineer of California, through whose courtesy the Record & Guide publishes pictures of this modern material for wall construction.

The wall is dampproof on the interior and exterior, is perfectly bonded, has a perfect form of protection for reinforced concrete as one of the pictures shows, it dispenses with the need of exterior facing, interior furring, forms and bracing, need of wiring, metal clips, ties, anchors and other rustable and flimsy devices so often used to tie an exterior veneer of brick to a concrete wall; it provides at any point throughout its length ready-made vertical cavities, flues or chases for ducts, pipes or conduits; it can be braced by steel rods horizontally to form a trussed wall over a void, or diagonally to resist the rocking motion of wind or operation of heavy machinery in the building, earthquake, etc.; it can be rough on one or both sides for plastering or cementing with raked joints for key, or the exposed face of each brick, whether inside or out, can be finished in every conceivable style, color or texture, from the roughest of clinkers to the smoothest of glazes; or from the palest of enamel to the softest pastel tones. A web brick wall, according to the manufacturers, reveals the honest principles of real brick work with the varieties of bonds and jointing developed in the burnt clay work of all the famous buildings of the day.

The pictures show the brick in various applications. One shows how reinforcement may be used with them, another shows their position on a wall and the other gives another example of its use with an I-beam and Z-bar.

Keeping Out the Dampness.

IF difficulty is experienced with dampness in basements it is due to one of the following causes: absence of a dampproof course in the walls, dampness in the ground outside which forces the wall structure to absorb moisture until itself is saturated, dampness arising from the ground which causes wall sweating under sudden changes of temperature, rain soaking through the walls after seeping into the furring because of defective leaders, driving rains against the walls not properly waterproofed or laid up, leaky pipes in buildings or condensation on pipes in humid weather.

Beyond this last cause, which can be corrected only by insulating the pipes, to attempt to repair damp walls after the structure is completed is at best an expensive job. The time to stop leaky walls is when the wall is being built. There are a number of inexpensive waterproofing compounds on the market which, if applied in the first place to walls that are likely to be damp, will add practically nothing to the cost of the building.

Portable Sand and Gravel Washer.

CONTRACTORS often find that the sand and gravel delivered to them at jobs has been practically spoiled for use by children playing in it, or wood and other particles of building material defiling it. In such an emergency the contractor who has a portable sand and gravel washer at hand will not only save the time consumed in waiting for other loads to come in, but will save the waste that results from trying to screen the sand under the old hand methods. The Raymond W. Dull Company, of Chicago, is introducing to the trade the sand and gravel washer shown in the line sketch shown in the illustration presented above. They make the assertion that it has an excellent efficiency record, is long-lived and for the power consumed it will wash a surprising quantity of gravel and sand.

Primitive Gate Valve.

ONE of the curios in the possession of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity in this city, is an old water gate used at the time when the water supply of Manhattan was distributed by means of hollow log conduits. This valve is presented in the accompanying cut by courtesy of the Engineering News. It was dug up in Park row in 1900 when the subway was being constructed and there is no evidence that the exterior was ever painted or protected from decay in any way. The scale itself served as a protection as well as the exceptionally high grade of iron used. In operation, the workman merely banged the top of the gate with his hammer and closed it and then pried it up when it was necessary to permit the water to flow again. These water mains were laid in Civil war times.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

The Horizontal Fire Exit System Being Introduced By Charities Department Buildings for the Protection of the Helpless

THE Commissioner of Charities, John A. Kingsbury, has taken a notable step by directing H. F. J. Porter and A. L. A. Himmelwright, consulting engineers, to proceed with the work which was interrupted some seven months ago, of developing a special system of fire prevention and life protection in the hospitals and other institutional buildings of his department.

The horizontal exit system which Messrs. Porter and Himmelwright will introduce in the principal buildings of the Charities Department includes a series of openings through solid walls into adjoining wards. The work of the engineers has been facilitated by the fact that the additions which have been made to original buildings from time to time during a long course of years have left so many solid walls that can be developed into barriers that it will be necessary in only a few cases to build new fire walls. The passageway through the walls from one building (or division) into the next will be protected by a firedoor in each case.

How the Helpless Would Be Saved.

Should a fire occur on any floor on one side of the wall a fire alarm signal would notify all the people on all the floors on that side of the wall, and they would immediately pass through the doorways into the safe sections of the building, close the fireproof doors after them and have a barrier against the fire. They would then be as safe as they would be in a separate building in which there was no fire, and they would reach the ground at their convenience by elevators and stairways in normal condition.

The attendants will be drilled so that bed-ridden patients will be rolled while lying in their beds by the attendants (with the aid of those patients who can act) through the firedoors into the next ward. The beds are to be fitted with special rollers for accelerating this movement.

This work involves fire-alarm signal systems covering some two hundred buildings. The signals will all be of special design, leaving out steam whistles and large gongs which are suitable in some cases for factories, but entirely out of place for hospitals, where the inmates are invalids who might be seriously affected by noise and excitement. The total appropriation amounts to $182,000.

Fire Commissioner Impressed.

The Fire Commissioner, Robert Adamson, who has made a personal examination of the fire hazard in the buildings of the Department of Charities on Blackwell's Island and elsewhere and was impressed with its seriousness indorsed the method of treatment of these buildings which these engineers advocated; and now that it has been authorized, he has issued instructions to the respective heads of the Fire Prevention Bureau, Chief Hammitt, the fire fighting force, Chief Kenlon, and the Bureau of Fire Alarm and Telegraphs, Chief Bates, to co-operate with the engineers in working out the details and in the installation of the improvements and equipment proposed by them.

Up to the present time hospitals and similar institutions have never been provided with any means of escape from fire for such of their inmates as were bed-ridden or otherwise helpless, such as babies, imbeciles and the aged. In other words, hospital patients generally who are incapacitated from moving about are absolutely at the mercy of a fire should one take place. The nearest approach to a provision of safety for these people which had ever been suggested was a type of steel chute similar to the cylindrical "down-and-outs" one sees at recreation resorts into which it was proposed to throw those who were so incapacitated that they could not go down fire-escapes themselves and when they had slid down to the ground the hospital attendants were expected to carry them away and make some other provision for them.

The Faults of Chutes.

These chutes besides rusting to such an extent as to prove unserviceable for their purpose, were found to endanger the patients physically. In fact, it has been proved that there was danger of the patients getting jammed in them and suffocating to death. For that reason they have never come into general use.

Some three years ago after the Triangle fire Mr. Porter brought to the attention of the public a system of "horizontal escape" which he had introduced into high and crowded factory buildings. It obviates the necessity of taking people downstairs at all in case of fire. He has found not only that vertical escape down through the fire in order to get away from it is irrational, but that elevators, stairways and fire-escapes under emergency conditions were almost always sources of congestion and panic and often loss of life.

The "horizontal escape" was obtained by introducing a dividing wall across the building extending from cellar to roof with a doorway in it on each floor. In fact, some of the earlier buildings of

THE LAWRENCEVILLE FRATERNITY SCHOOL BUILDING

Alfred H Taylor, Architect.

THE Fraternity building for the Calliopean and Philomathean Societies of the Lawrenceville School was finished the latter part of last year, and is now occupied by these societies. It is built of stone from the Hamill quarries, a local stone similar to that used in the main buildings at Princeton University, and is of random ashlar with wide white joints. The building was designed by Mr. Alfred H. Taylor, architect, of New York.

The design of the school is of the early type of Dutch Colonial building, many types of which can be found in Trenton and the surrounding country. the Lawrenceville School are interesting examples of this style, which speaks well for the honest construction of the early builders, who were not only artisans, but artists as well, as is shown by the picturesque and pleasing character of almost all of the early buildings of this type.

A year ago the Department of Charities asked for an appropriation of over $200,000 at the recommendation of the Fire Department to install fire-escapes and cylindrical chutes upon their principal buildings, some thirty-two in number. Mr. McAneny, then President of the Borough of Manhattan, had the request held in abeyance while he asked Mr. Porter if his division wall and horizontal exit system of life protection (which has proved to be serviceable for factories) could not be adapted to hospitals.

Endorsed at Meeting of Engineers.

Mr. Porter at this time read a paper on the subject before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at which, after discussion, it was the consensus of opinion that this principle was practically the only one which offered any means of escape from fire for the physically helpless inmates of institutions such as hospitals who could be wheeled on their beds through the doorway to safety with scarcely any disturbance whatever. An attractive feature of this system was also that the cost of installation would be less than that of the other appliances.

Since the first of the year the Department of Charities and the Fire Department have, through their experts, thoroughly investigated the system. Following the investigation they urged its adoption. They feel that as there is now available a measure which will provide safety to the helpless in hospitals the city can not allow its wards to remain in jeopardy.

The Department of Corrections having buildings of a character similar to those of the Department of Charities and in some instances located contiguous to them has asked the Board of Estimate for permission to have this work extended into its buildings. Bellevue Hospital has already had its buildings surveyed and has asked for an appropriation to have them overhauled similarly. The Departments of Public Health and Charities of other cities have been waiting for the decision of the New York City authorities and will now undoubtedly proceed to have their buildings made safe likewise so that there is little doubt that the example thus established will be followed generally in all institutions of this kind wherever located.

SALEM BARS SHINGLES.

City Authorities Adopt a New Building Code—Residences to Be Detached.

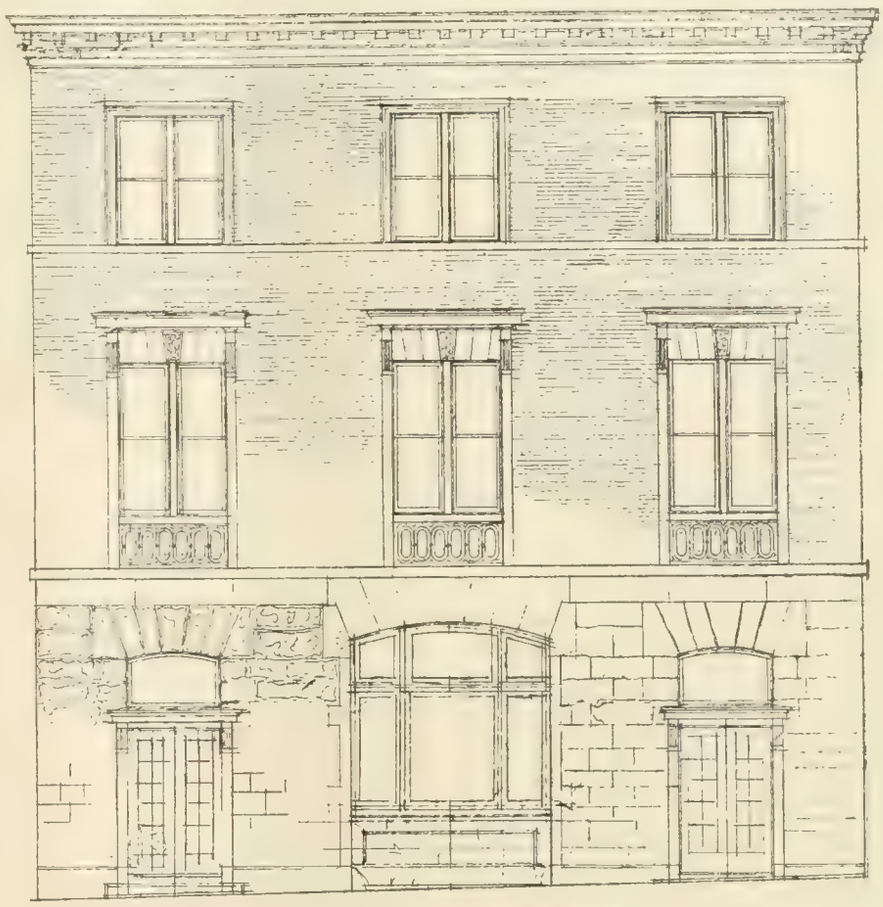
No shingles are to be permitted on the buildings which may be erected on the burned district of Salem, Mass. The new building code specifies that all roofs must be of slate, tile, terra cotta, metal or some other equally incombustible material. The code allows for factory and mill construction. These buildings, however, must be of first or second-class construction, or constructed with a mill frame with the exterior of metal or other incombustible material. Regarding the residential section the code reads:



"No building will be allowed to run nearer than five feet to the adjoining lot, and there must be a distance of at least 10 feet between buildings on the same lot. No building shall occupy more than 75 per cent. of the lot on which it is built, unless it be on a corner, then it may occupy 80 per cent. of the lot. The new regulations apply only to the burned district which is to be rebuilt.

Subway Progress Notes.

During the week the Public Service Commission awarded to the Flinn-O'Rourke Company the contract for the construction of Section 3 of Route No. 33, the Montague street portion of the Whitehall-Montague street tunnel line in Brooklyn. This firm was the lowest of eight bidders at $3,395,152.

The Public Service Commission for the First District has advertised for bids to be opened September 15, at 12.15 o'clock for the construction of Section 2 of Route No. 48, the William street portion of the Park place, William and Clark street subway to be operated by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company. The plans call for a two-track underground railroad to be completed within 28 months from the delivery of the contract.

BUILDING FOR BEAUX ARTS ARCHITECTS

Satterlee & Boyd and William Emerson, Associate Architects.

ARCHITECTS' SKETCH—A STABLE TO BE CONVERTED INTO AN ATELIER.

THE Society of Beaux Arts Architects has recently purchased a large private stable at 126 East 75th street and will alter it into an atelier for architectural students and those studying to be sculptors. The building is a three-story granite and pressed brick front on a lot 39.6 wide by 102 ft. deep, with an easement of 5 ft. along the entire west side, giving ample light and air for the entire building.

The whole first floor will be used for exhibiting drawings made by the students and will be a room 37 ft. wide by about 99 ft. long. In connection with this room will be an entrance hall, coat-room, stairhall, toilets and large stage in rear with lift for "chassises" and plaster casts to the ornament room on second floor and life class on third floor.

The second floor front room which is 28x26 ft. will be used as a lecture hall in connection with the ornament classes which will occupy two-thirds of the entire second floor, with the sculptor's room in the rear, measuring 37x29 ft. A stairway from the center portion of the second floor leads directly to the life class on the third floor in the rear. This is a room 29x37 ft. with a sloping skylight 12 ft. high and extending the entire width of the room facing the north. The high point of this room will be 18 ft. above the floor. There will be four large double-hung windows on the south side of the room.

All large rooms connect directly with a fireproof stairway in the rear of building. The third floor front room will be laid out as an apartment for the instructor and his family, who will be in direct communication with the entire building at all times.

It will be noted that all the necessary requirements of the society are embodied in this building. The society is keeping the cost down and leaving the interior as plain as possible, with the idea that at some future date it may be able to improve the interior finish.

Satterlee & Boyd, and William Emerson, 3 West 29th street, are associate architects.

What the Panama Canal Will Do.

Opening of the Panama Canal, says American Consul-General, will bring Guayaquil, Ecuador's principal port, within nine-days distance of New York against twelve days now and eighteen days to Liverpool against thirty days. The completion of the Ecuadorian railway system in connection with the Canal will divert the entire commerce from Iquitos westward instead of by way of Para, reducing the time to the port of Para from fifteen to five days and the total time to Liverpool to twenty-three against thirty-one to thirty-nine days.

The Chileans and foreigners are pouring capital rapidly into iron, copper and nitrate mines in the hope of the enlarging market for these products in the United States, the United States Consul at Valparaiso reports. American capital is taking an active part and a splendid field for machinery and supplies is opening for American merchants.

West Farms Station Post Office.

Janes & Cordes, 124 West 45th street, will soon take bids for the new West Farms Station postoffice building to be erected at the southeast corner of 177th street and the Bronx River, which has been leased by the U. S. Government. W. H. Birchall, 331 East 200th street, and William Bolton, 351 East 200th street, are the owners.

Yacht Company to Rebuild Plant.

The New York Yacht Engine and Launch Company, Harlem River, 175th to 177th streets, contemplates rebuilding the plant which was recently destroyed by fire. It is probable that the insurance will be adjusted soon and then work will proceed at once. The group includes a cabinet shop of steel or sheet-iron, a boat building shop and machine shop of steel, hollow tile or reinforced concrete. No architect has yet been selected.

—For 1913, the total assessed valuation of real estate in New York City was $8,006,647,861; and for personal property $325,421,340.

Another Building Specifies Edison Service

The Underhill Building at 438-448 West 37th Street, now in the course of construction, will attain a height of twelve stories and penthouse. It will open about February 1st to meet the demands of Printers and the Allied Trades for whose purposes its structural layout is especially adapted

This edifice is one of the latest to contract for Edison Service long before completion. Surely the cases cited in this journal each week are proof enough of how highly Central Station Service is esteemed by progressive building men. Neither time nor circumstance can alter Edison Service efficiency

There's an Edison expert ready to confer with you now. Why not call him up?

THE CHICAGO BRICK TRADE.

Looking Forward to a Prosperous Period—The City Takes a Billion Brick Annually.

Chicago uses more than 1,000,000,000 bricks every year. Almost 950,000,000 common building brick are used in that market annually to supply the demands of builders. In addition to this great amount there are fully 90,000,000 face brick used there every year.

The unprecedented building operations in Chicago will probably keep the brick manufacturers busy well into 1915 to supply the demands.

One company, the Illinois Brick Company, the largest single company in the State, manufactures half of the entire output, or fully 500,000,000 brick every twelve months.

Building Takes on Speed.

The supply of brick on hand was not large when the brickmakers' strike ended June 2, and building operations in Chicago that had been held in abeyance for months took on speed. The brick manufacturers speedily found themselves overrun with orders.

Every brickyard in the State began to put on men until they were running at their fullest capacity. Even then they were not able to keep pace with the demand for building brick and not a few of the plants began to run night shifts.

The Illinois Brick Company alone has been shipping on the average enough brick to fill cars that, if made up into a single train, would reach almost two miles. Still they have not been able to overtake their orders.

The Chicago Examiner, which is giving to the Chicago building material market co-operation of a practical nature, in a recent article on the brick industry said that nearly all of the common brick is made in the Chicago district, but there is practically no pressed brick made there. Chicago, however, usually furnishes building brick not only for the Chicago trade, but to points in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana and Michigan, within a radius of 300 miles of the city.

The annual business in face brick alone in Chicago is estimated at close to $2,100,000. Every face brick sold there has to be brought into the city. Brick manufacturers are looking forward to one of the most prosperous years in their experience. The demands for brick, both of the building type and the face brick kind, has not been greater in years than now.

"In my opinion the brickyards of Chicago and throughout the States are going to have something of a task to supply the Chicago market this year," said one manufacturer. "The call for brick throughout June was almost unprecedented in my experience. There is going to be a demand for brick right through the next three years, too. Look at the amount of brick that will be needed for the big new Union railroad station. Then there are the hospital buildings, to say nothing of the big office buildings and hotels that are going up. The schools to be built alone will take a lot of brick.

"Depend upon it, we are going to have plenty to do in the brickyards for the next few years, and I see prosperous times ahead for the manufacturers, with plenty of work and good wages for the employes."

—The Associated Portland Cement manufacturers of the United Kingdom have agreed to reinstate their men upon their return from the war, and in the meantime will turn over to the wives or relatives of the warriors the difference between their regular wages and those which they will earn in the army.

—New York Edison Co. has closed a contract with the Flinn-O'Rourke Co., Inc., which is building the new subway tunnels under the East River, to furnish 10,000 horse-power of electrical energy for operation of tunneling equipment. This is the first time in the history of engineering where electric power has been used exclusively for such work.

BUILDING MATERIALS AND SUPPLIES

FIRST SIGNS OF THE GREAT FOREIGN TRADE REVIVAL ARE BEING NOTED IN THE STEEL MARKET.

Prices for Steel Products Are Still Mounting, but Other Materials Are Easy.

LITTLE has occurred during the week to change fundamental conditions in the building material markets. What has transpired is of a reassuring nature for the future. To everyone it has become apparent that large currents of trade are slow in making new channels. There is a growing certainty of a large business in prospect for American producers with foreign lands, but it is also more fully perceived that it may be a considerable time in getting around to any particular line of industry.

Leaving out expectations and taking into account only the matters actually present, it cannot be said that there has been any improvement in the local building over what has been recently reported. The central sections of the city, which erect the costliest buildings and require the most varied materials in largest amounts in good years, are very quiet in an industrial sense; but in Brooklyn operations for new buildings exceed last year's record by 30 per cent., and in Queens the new work planned is 40 per cent. in value ahead of the previous year's doings.

Both skilled and unskilled labor is better employed than might be supposed. For when the state of employment in the building trades is considered account must be taken of the entire metropolitan district. Each passing week sees more men called into service as the walls of new buildings rise from the foundations. The subway work is also constantly adding to the number employed. The amount of suburban work offering for mechanics is reported to be very fair for a number of trades. Many from this city are finding work in more distant places.

The first month of the fall season being now at hand, a certain quickening in general business is to be expected soon. Thousands of tourists are returning from abroad to resume their usual duties. Later on will come another class of population, namely, wealthy Americans permanently residing in Paris and other cities now threatened by enemies. These will seek safety in the home land, and an appreciable number are expected to take apartments here and create a new and decided demand for the suites of the best grade.

The first good effects from the war have been felt by the steel companies. Better prices for material are adding to their profits. Some branches of the steel trade have had a decided stimulus. The United States Steel Corporation has ships loaded and waiting to raise the American flag. The president of the corporation has meanwhile asked for certain changes in the registry laws. A great many inquiries for American supplies are coming from other countries, but except for food stuff there has been comparatively little exportation of an unusual nature so far. Shipping facilities in British bottoms are reported to be ample for all the business yet offering. Some manufacturing firms are increasing their help because they find domestic trade increasing as foreign imports are cut off.

Other than for steel products, local quotations in the building material and related markets are not noticeably changed, but in some lines, as in paints and colors, quotations are declared nominal and subject to increase. Brick prices are weaker, but cement, lumber and other fundaments are unchanged.

GYPSUM PRODUCTION.

More Calcined Gypsum Sold Last Year in United States Than in 1912.

According to the Government statistics, the total increase in calcined gypsum sold in 1913 over that sold in 1912 was 42,175 tons. The average price per ton remained the same, $3.43. It is interesting to note that nearly 95 per cent of the calcined gypsum sold in the United States, or 1,680,157 tons, is used for wall plaster, Keene's cement, plaster of Paris, etc. About one and one-quarter million tons of this quantity represents mixed wall plaster.

The quantity of raw gypsum sold for the manufacture of paint, for Portland cement, for bedding plate glass, and for various other purposes, amounted to 408,321 short tons, valued at $601,113, in 1913, compared with 388,543, short tons, valued at $516,464, in 1912, an increase in quantity of 19,778 tons and in value of $84,649. The average price of this class of products in 1913 was $1.47 per ton, compared with $1.33 in 1912, and with $1.47 in 1911.

The number of short tons of raw gypsum mined in 1913 was 2,599,508, an increase of 98,751 tons over the 2,500,757 tons mined in 1912.

Gypsum imported into the United States comes almost wholly from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and enters the ports of New England and North Atlantic States, over one-half of it entering the port of New York.

A marked advance in the quantity and value of imports was made in 1913. There was an increase of 34,686 tons of unground gypsum as compared with an increase of 22,283 tons in 1912, the total importation of unground gypsum in 1913 being 447,383 short tons, valued at $473,594. The figures give an average value per ton of unground gypsum of $1.058, or about 2 cents a ton higher than in 1912.

The quantity of ground or calcined gypsum imported is very small.

PAINTS AND COLORS.

A MODERATE movement of white lead is noted on contracts and current orders, and the market maintains the steady tone that has characterized it recently. For dry colors the demand is fairly active. Varnish gums are unsettled because of European war complications, and the quotations obtainable are referred to as nominal.

While no increase in business was noted in the market for linseed oil, there are certain expectations of price movements, on account of European conditions, which moved the leading crushers to ask full prices for current orders and to leave no quotations open for the future. Some sales were reported at 59c. a gallon for 5-bbl. lots and over.

Locally, the outlook for a good and widening call for painters' supplies in general is bright, but what is going to happen to price lists because of the wars is as yet a problem.

LUMBER TRADE NOTES.

Activity in Suburban Yards Not Reflected in Central Sections.

THE outstanding fact about the metropolitan district lumber trade is the marked activity of local dealers in Kings, Queens, Nassau and other suburbs and the moderate business in the central sections. The general average of prices from wholesalers has not been materially changed of late. The largest consumers continues to be the subway contractors.

Cargoes of Eastern spruce on the market here in New York running to desirable random sizes will bring all the way from $21 to $23, while cargoes containing a large proportion of less desirable sizes are being picked up at $19 to $20.

Demand is taking care of the available stock of lath, which continue to hold at the level of the past three months. Most sales either by car or vessel are now made at $4, with an occasional lot of fancy slab lath bringing as high as $4.10.

Pennsylvania hemlock, which was for many months on the $24.50 base, is now quite uniformly quoted at $22.50. Eastern mixed cargoes go at $20 to $22, according to quality and assortment.

Woodworking shops are showing more interest in hardwoods. Western maple is working into a stronger position, and quotations for some grades have been advanced fifty cents and others an even dollar. The mahogany market is uncertain in view of the wars in Europe and Mexico.

Probably no kind of lumber will be more seriously affected by the wars than long leaf yellow pine. Just how much of the trade with Europe will survive cannot be foreseen. The subway work is the chief consuming factor in the local market.

CEMENT VALUES.

Salem's First Building Will Be of Reinforced Concrete.

CEMENT companies report a fairly good run of current business at unchanged prices.

The slogan "Concrete for Permanence" is evidently acknowledged as a fact by the Naumkeag Mills, Salem, Mass., for whom the first building after the great fire is being erected by the New England Concrete Construction Co. of Boston, Mass. The building is a reinforced concrete weave shed in which "Vulcanite" Portland cement is being used exclusively.

BIG STEEL ORDERS.

Further Advances in Price of Wire Rods—Nails and Billets Also Higher.

THE demand and the price for certain steel products steadily rise. The situation is full of anomalies with new inquiries appearing side by side with cancellations. On the whole, the situation is encouraging to steel interests. Semi-finished steel continues to harden, with slightly higher prices obtained for nearby shipment.

That there is a material increase in the demand for American steel from South America has been shown in the last few days by orders placed with the Pittsburgh mills for 100 miles of eighty-pound standard section rails. The order is one of the largest that has reached Pittsburgh rail mills since the trend of the business to this country from South America began.

Structural work is still quiet, nearly all of the orders being placed with the fabricating shops are for small lots.

The wire rod market for months has been stagnant, but since the nail and plain wire trade has resumed activity for the fall season the wire mills have been forced into nearly full time. Already wire rods have advanced from $24.50 to $26 a ton at Pittsburgh. Wire nails have been advanced to $1.60. Another definite advance is in billets and sheet bars, which are now $21 and $22, respectively, at Pittsburgh and Youngstown mills.

COMMON BRICK.

Registered Unloading More Than Last Week's Figures—Prices Weaker.

REGISTERED common brick unloaded this week was in excess of last week's figures. Prices are weaker at $5 to $5.50, with some selects selling at $5.75.

A disastrous fire started at midnight August 22 at the plant of the Excelsior Brick Co. at Haverstraw, and resulted in great damage to buildings and power plant. The fire originated in one of the sleeping shacks occupied by laborers at the plant. The fire practically destroyed the power house, five laborers' shacks, stables and barns, but was controlled before much damage was done to the kiln shed, which was only slightly scorched. All the horses in the stables were saved. Owing to the great loss incurred, especially the complete destruction of the power house and plant, operations will not be resumed this season.

A million and a half high grade rough texture face bricks for the new $3,000,000 Traymore Hotel, at Atlantic City, now being erected by Cramp & Co., will be supplied by the Atlantic Brick Manufacturing Company, of May's Landing, N. J. The entire exterior of the immense hotel is to be faced with rough texture brick made at May's Landing. This is the largest order ever placed here.

Official transactions for Hudson River brick covering the week ending Thursday, August 27, in the wholesale market, with comparison for the corresponding period last year, and a comparative statement of Hudson Rivers unloaded from barges for consumption here, follow:

NEW YORK, SEPTEMBER 5, 1914

THE PROBLEM OF OVER-INSPECTION

The Real Estate Board Appoints a Committee to Help the State Commission to Cure the Evil—Various Views on the Tentative Plan.

THE plan submitted by the New York State Factory Investigating Commission to remedy the evils in the present system of inspection of buildings is being commended for its general principles. It has served to crystallize public opinion upon a definite proposition, and is bringing out expressions of opinion as to how the proposed Department of Buildings should be organized, in order that it may be most efficient.

The plan of the State Commission adopts the suggestion, often repeated during the past three years by various persons and organizations, for a consolidation of all the City and State Departments and Bureaus having jurisdiction over the construction, alteration and maintenance of buildings in New York City, into one general department, to be presided over by a Commissioner of Buildings. The new department will take in the Bureau of Buildings in each borough, and also the Tenement House Department, the Bureau of Fire Prevention, the Bureau of Boiler Inspection, the local duties of the State Factory Inspection Bureau, and also certain inspection duties now performed by the Health Department and the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

Real Estate Board's Committee.

The Real Estate Board of New York, carrying out its policy of active co-operation in desirable public measures, has appointed a committee of seventeen members, on which each of the five boroughs is represented, to work with the State Factory Investigating Commission in its proposed plan to simplify building inspection in New York City.

Borough President Marcus M. Marks has consented to act as chairman of this committee. President Marks has been very much interested in this whole subject, and even before his election expressed his disapproval of the existing method. Since then he has given the subject serious attention and has worked to bring about a simpler method of inspection. The Real Estate Board's plan for a committee to co-operate with the State Factory Investigating Commission has the approval of Mr. Marks and of Mr. Elkus, Chief Counsel for the Commission.

Driven to Distraction.

Commenting on the proposed concerted effort to remedy existing conditions Mr. Marks said:

"Over inspection, duplication of inspections, and conflict of inspections have been driving good citizens to distraction. I know no more fruitful field for the exercise of sound business sense, and have been delighted to see the increased co-operation that has developed recently between State, city and borough authorities, and also at the helpful spirit of co-operation now shown by the Real Estate Board of New York.

"My hope is that this co-operation will result in great improvement to the mutual interest and advantage of government, realty owner and tenant, to simplify inspections and remove friction.

HON. MARCUS M. MARKS.
Who will head a committee to assist the State Factory Investigating Commission.

"I've been earnestly working to concentrate public opinion in the direction of economy of effort in this department."

Generally Favorable Responses.

Abram I. Elkus, the counsel of the New York State Factory Investigating Commission, when inquiry was made of him as to the tentative plan for a consolidation of the various building departments and of other departments which have to do with work upon buildings, said:

"Many responses have been received from former and present city officials favoring the plan, some in its entirety, some generally, and there has been much favorable newspaper comment upon it. One newspaper, in a very strong editorial, pointed out the fact that it was now the province of the real estate men to have this legislation enacted into law. It is gratifying to note that the Real Estate Board has accepted this view of it and that its president, Mr. McGuire, has appointed a committee of seventeen members who reside in the different boroughs of the city to enter upon a campaign of active work in aid of this proposed legislation.

"If the real estate owners and those interested actively endorse this proposition, and present the matter to the Legislature as the unanimous desire of the real estate interests, it will go a long way toward enacting this, or a similar, measure into law."

The Present Opportunity.

Speaking for the Real Estate Board of New York and its interest in the proposed plan of the State Factory Investigating Commission, W. J. Van Pelt, vice-president of the board, said:

"I can think of no more important work to which the Real Estate Board could turn its attention than this effort to remedy the present expensive and annoying system of building inspection in New York City. For years real estate owners have been victims of this unscientific system. They have long complained of it, but largely because it is a complicated subject and a difficult thing to remedy, no relief has been obtained.

"The Real Estate Board certainly appreciates that even the proposed attempt to solve the problem means a long step forward, and it appreciates also the opportunity now offered by the commission to approach this work in a spirit of intelligent co-operation.

"No one is yet committed to any specific plan. We must expect differences of opinion and must all be prepared to seek and give concessions and compromises. But while the task ahead of us is difficult it can be accomplished. The two objects to be secured are economy and simplicity. The existing system, involving waste or uncertainty, and in many cases injustice, would not be tolerated by any business corporation, and the City ought in the interests of its taxpayers to work out an intelligent scheme to replace the one that has been for so many years a source of merited criticism."

The Real Estate Board's Committee represent the various boroughs as follows:

Manhattan—Borough President Marcus M. Marks, chairman; W. J. Van Pelt, Charles F. Noyes, Warren Cruikshank, H. H. Murdock, Alfred R. Kirkus, R. E. Simon, George T. Mortimer.

Brooklyn—William P. Bannister, Thomas Hovenden, Frank H. Tyler.

Bronx—Harry C. Bryan, J. Clarence Davies, E. Osborne Smith.

Queens—Wallace J. Hardgrove, Stuard Hirschman.

Richmond—Horatio J. Sharrett, William G. Willcox.

Objection by an ex-Borough President.

Hon. Cyrus C. Miller, late President of the Borough of the Bronx, who is the chairman of the executive committee of the Advisory Council of Real Estate Interests, expressed the opinion this week that the control of local building operations should remain with the immediate Superintendent of Buildings in each borough as at present. He said:

"In so far as the proposed plan concentrates in one department control over all matters relating to the construction of new buildings and alterations of existing buildings and the maintenance of both, and does away with needless multiplicity of inspection, it is an excellent plan, but when it proposes to abolish the separate building bureau in each borough and to consolidate them into one department to cover the entire city, I think the plan is reactionary.

"Military men recognize that when an army becomes too large to handle as a unit, it must be divided into corps. The framers of our Charter realized that the city machinery was in danger of breaking down by its own weight from over-centralization, so the city was divided into boroughs and much of the local business was given over to the borough administration, which was directly responsible to the people of the borough.

Too Large for One Office.

"The building business of the City of New York is too large and too important to be handled by one office and by one commissioner. Even if there were a single department and a single head, it would be necessary to have a local office in every borough in charge of a deputy.

"Building is perhaps the most important local business. In every borough the best class of men should be chosen for Building Superintendent—a thing hardly possible when the borough representative of the department is only a deputy. Such deputies do not have the authority to grant modifications or make unusual rulings, so that the builder requiring such action must go to the Commisssioner.

"Why should a city so large and important as Brooklyn or the Bronx have simply a deputy superintendent to enforce the laws governing its most important industry? Why should a builder who seeks a ruling somewhat out of the usual be called upon to spend his time in going to the central office in Manhattan to consult a commissioner? What chance has a builder to have his business disposed of by the Commissioner when builders from all over the city are clamoring for the same thing? The plan is undemocratic. It removes the people in a locality from immediate contact with the official who has their business in charge and who is responsible for it.

Too Far to Central Office.

"No expense to the city will be saved, because an office and deputy and a corps of clerks will be quite as necessary in every borough as they are now. Their aggregate salaries will differ little, if at all, from those now paid, while the expense to builders and architects in time in traveling from outlying boroughs to the central office, when it is necessary to do so, will be great.

"It makes another administrative department to add to the responsibility of our already overburdened Mayors. Perhaps the citizens of New York do not realize the terrible burdens under which our Mayors struggle. The addition of another department is a step in the wrong direction. Uniform rulings may be secured in the different boroughs by constituting a board composed of the borough superintendents of buildings for the adoption of uniform rulings. If necessary, a member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment can be authorized to act as Chairman of the board.

"I am well aware that the tendency of the times is towards centralization of administration in the City of New York, but I believe that the far-seeing wisdom of the men who prepared the Charter and divided the city into boroughs recognized the fact that while centralization theoretically is efficient, it is very likely, practically, to be quite the contrary. We must depend more upon the people of the localities and place more weight on the periphery of our city government and less on the center. This will be more necessary as the boroughs continue to grow larger and larger. I believe in the consolidation of the departments and bureaus in the Building Department as proposed, but the control to be in the Superintendent of Buildings in each borough as at present."

Advises Awaiting Local Action.

The former Superintendent of Buildings in Manhattan, Rudolph P. Miller, who is now engaged in revising the Building Code, advised a postponement of legislation on the part of the State Factory Investigating Commission until the Charter Revision Commission of the Board of Estimate has had an opportunity to report.

The remarks of ex-Superintendent Miller were to the further effect that he is heartily in favor of the general plan of the State Factory Investigating Commission, and his principal criticism would be that it does not go far enough, as he still believes it wise and practicable to combine all the departments and bureaus having police powers into one large department.

Mr. Miller thinks, however, that a further development of this idea should be deferred for the time being. To carry out this fusion of the different departments having jurisdiction over buildings requires legislation, and nothing can be done in this respect before the Legislative session next winter. He added: "As you know, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment has a committee on the Charter which will undertake a complete revision. This committee intends to submit the results of its work to the Legislature at the next session. The reorganization of the departments having jurisdiction over buildings must necessarily affect the Charter, and it seems to me it would be wiser to have this scheme of reorganization developed in connection with the other changes in the city departments that will undoubtedly be recommended in the municipal government.

"I know that Mr. McAneny, who is chairman of the committee of the Board of Estimate having the Charter revision in hand, is heartily in favor of the plan which the State Commission has outlined. We have had several conversations on the subject since last winter. He also feels that presenting this plan to the public has served to crystallize sentiment on this subject. It is so much better to have the public understand what is proposed and to have its approval than to bring out unexpectedly some radical change."

OVER ONE THOUSAND CITY THEATERS

Seven Hundred and Fifty of Them for Motion Pictures—Construction Regulations They Must Comply With—Millions of Dollars Invested.

FOR the amusement of a population of nearly 5,500,000 permanent residents with several more million theatergoers from New Jersey and Westchester and other suburban sections, and for thousands of visitors who are constantly coming into the city, there are about 1,033 theaters and moving picture houses in New York City.

Last year there were 253 theatrical licenses issued, 23 concert licenses and 7 amusement licenses which comprised principally circuses. Theater licensing prior to June 1st, 1914, was under the jurisdiction of the Police Department. Since that time the power of issuance has been transferred to the Mayor's Bureau of Licenses in Center street, which also controls the licenses of all photoplay houses.

750 Motion Picture Theaters.

There were up to July 1st, of this year, about 750 licensed places for the exhibition of motion pictures in the five boroughs. Of this number about 527 were indoor and about 223 open air. About six months ago there were over a thousand moving picture play houses in the five boroughs but since the adoption of the new ordinance relative to moving picture theaters, passed by the Board of Aldermen, July 1, 1913, approved by the Mayor July 8, 1913, and which became effective August 13, 1913, a great many have gone out of business on account of inability to comply with important provisions of this ordinance. The law was designed with great care in order to give all possible protection to the people who frequent moving picture theaters, and such protection is required under various sections of the ordinance.

A moving picture theater is defined as a public hall in the City of New York in which moving pictures are exhibited, in which the seating capacity does not exceed 600 and in which there is no stage or scenery. The Bureau of Licenses issues all motion picture permits granted by the Mayor and by the authority of the Mayor regulates and controls all motion picture theaters.

Applicants for motion picture licenses must file plans and specifications of the contemplated structure with the Bureau of Buildings of the Borough in which it is to be situated. A copy of such plans duly approved by the superintendent of buildings must be presented to the Bureau of Licenses. These are inspected by the Fire Department, the Bureau of Buildings, Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, and the Department of Health. Within ten days detailed written reports of these departments are filed with the Bureau of Licenses which include a statement of any violation of law, ordinances, rules and regulations and any dangerous conditions.

Exits Five Feet Wide.

Motion picture theaters are not permitted to be constructed in frame buildings within the fire limits nor in hotels, tenement houses, or lodging houses nor in factories or workshops, except where the theater is separated from the rest of the building by unpierced fireproof walls and floors and in no case may they be constructed or operated above or below the ground floor of any building. The law prohibits the installation of exits less than five feet in width and very carefully outlines the requirements for proper construction of passageways, courts, galleries, stairs, seats and the booths where the apparatus for projecting motion pictures are located.

To overcome any difference of level in and between corridors, lobbies and aisles, gradients of not over one foot in ten feet or steps having a rise not over eight inches with a width of not less than ten inches can be used.

Heavy Floor Necessary.

The flooring of that portion of the building devoted to the use of the accommodation of the public must be of sufficient strength to bear safely a live load of 90 pounds per square foot. Besides the lighting and heating requirements the ventilation requirements probably more than any other provision of the law caused the drop in the number of moving picture theaters in the city.

Motion picture theaters having less than 200 cubic feet of air space for each person, or motion picture theaters in which the outside window and door area is less than one-eighth of the floor area, must be provided with artificial means of ventilation which supply during the time the audience is present at least 500 cubic feet of fresh air per hour for each person.

Ventilation.

Motion picture theaters having more than 200 cubic feet of air space for each person, or which have outside windows and doors, the area of which is equal to at least one-eighth of the floor area, must be provided with artificial means of ventilation, which shall be in operation when the outside temperature requires the windows to be kept closed, and which shall supply, during the time the audience is present, at least 500 cubic feet of fresh air per hour for each person. When the artificial ventilation is not in operation, ventilation by means of open doors and windows must be sufficient to provide each person with 500 cubic feet of fresh air per hour.

Motion picture theaters having more than 1,000 cubic feet of air space for each person are not required to have artificial means of ventilation.

ST. MARK'S, A REMINDER OF OLDEN DAYS

Historic Edifice Occupies Prominent Site in Heart of District

Once Peopled by the Dutch —An East Side Garden Spot.

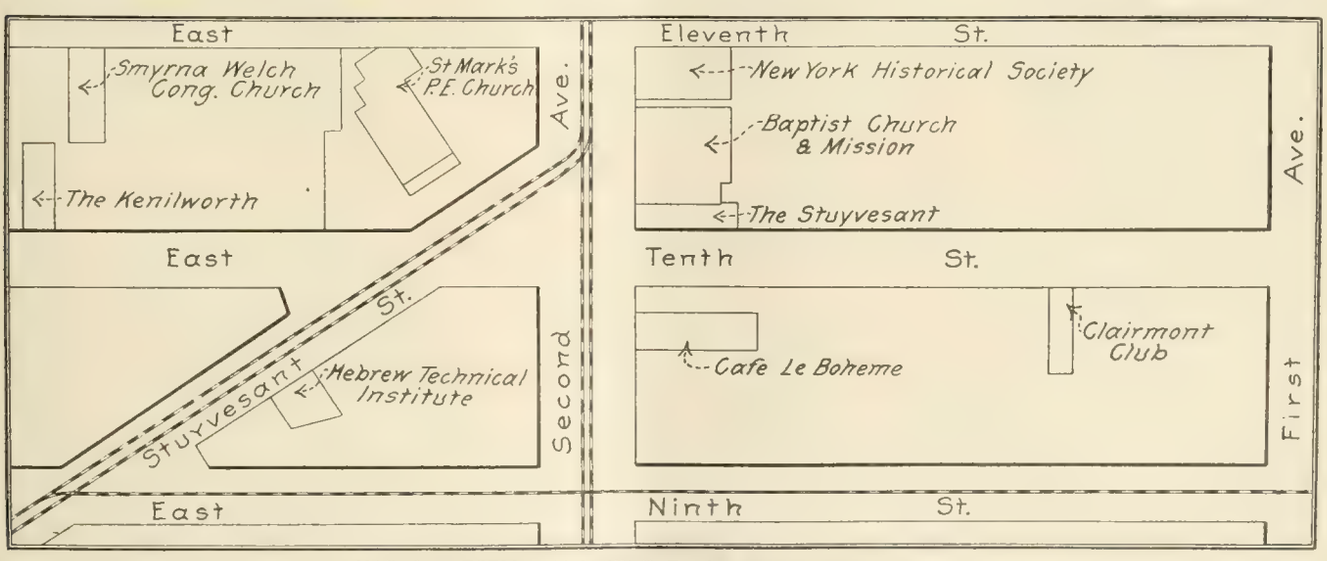
HEMMED in by crowded, noisy tenements, and old-fashioned dwellings remodeled for business, stands historic St. Mark's Church, at the corner of Second avenue and 10th street. It is one of the last remaining examples of the old Colonial ecclesiastical architecture with lofty pillared porch and tapering steeple. A small tablet at the entrance bears the inscription, "Corner stone laid April 25, 1795—consecrated May 9, 1795." The congregation for many years has included members of some of the oldest and best known New York families.

With the old church and its surroundings are connected many interesting historical associations, and while changes in the class of population and kind of building are fast reducing its one-time prominence there still remain evidences of former grandeur. On the site of St. Mark's Church the famous Dutch War Governor, Peter Stuyvesant, built a small chapel for his congregation, when the old Bouerie village was established. Here was one of the numerous little outpost settlements of Greater New York, under Dutch control, and it clustered around the house of worship.

HISTORIC ST. MARK'S CHURCH.

In 1651 Peter Stuyvesant purchased what was then known as the Great Bouerie, a tract of land extending about two miles along the river north of what is now Grand street and including a section of the present Bowery and Third avenue. The need for protection from the Indians resulted in the formation of the village, and soon through the thrift of the burghers it became a flourishing Dutch community typical of the period. The old lines and buildings have all disappeared and nothing remains to indicate the exact boundaries or the Dutch occupancy except St. Mark's Church, which was situated then in the center of the village.

Afterwards, and for many years, this was an aristocratic residential district, linked to the city proper by a country path which later became a boulevard and eventually a popular carriage-way into Harlem. Up to a quarter of a century ago the German elements in the population was particularly conspicuous. They were followed by the Irish, but few of whom remain since the ever increasing numbers of Jewish people from the lower East Side keep spreading towards the north. At the present time, however, that section of the Peter Stuyvesant farm in the immediate vicinity of the church is being rapidly filled with an entirely new class of population, including Slavs, Poles and Hungarians, and they are bringing with them their societies and newspapers, of which a number are printed on the east side of Second avenue, just north of the former building of the New York Historical Society.



With the inflow of these people the private house was doomed, and the inevitable tenements began to replace the old homesteads, rich in historic interest, but netting little income to their owners. About twelve years ago the first flat houses were erected on the site of the Kane mansion, at the southwest corner of Second avenue and 10th street, and these were followed by similar building operations to the east. In 11th street, just opposite the rectory of St. Mark's, tenements were erected about the same time, to meet the increased demands of the new element in the population, and to-day in the side streets may be found the same development typical of other tenement districts in the city.

Second avenue was particularly adaptable for business purposes on account of its width and its position as a north and south thoroughfare. To-day thousands of workers from the manufacturing districts on the West Side swarming to their homes on the lower East Side choose as their thoroughfare Second avenue, and pass under the shadow of the church which sheltered the Dutch patroon.

In time, business establishments began to replace the dwellings on the avenue and the old residents resisted ineffectually the rapid expansion of commercial activities to the north. One of the last of the old-time mansions to give in to the advance of trade was the Keteltas mansion, at the northwest corner of Second avenue and Eighth street, which has been renovated and remodeled into a moving picture theatre and office building.

Farther up the street business has already claimed nearly all the buildings, except those which are occupied by hospitals and physicians. At 11th street corner the famous Lewis M. Rutherfurd mansion still retains its character as a dwelling. On the same block the former home of John Jay, well known in American history, is now the headquarters of the Jewish Federation of Farmers. Across the street the house from whose balcony Thomas Jefferson made his inaugural address is now a Polish Immigrants' Home.

Opposite St. Mark's Church the former building of New York Historical Society is occupied by a Newsboys' Home. Before its removal to the new home at 170 Central Park West it contained a large collection of rare manuscripts, pamphlets, works of art and antiques.

RECONSTRUCTION OF QUEENSBORO BRIDGE

To Provide for Rapid Transit Trains of the Dual System—Will Cost $3,000,000 Under the Present Plans of the Bridge Department.

THE Queens Chamber of Commerce took the position months ago that there should be no delay in the reconstruction of the Queenboro Bridge in order that rapid transit service might be inaugurated as soon as possible on those extensions into Queens which connect with the joint transfer station on the Bridge Plaza, Long Island City; and at the same time it urged the Bridge Department and the Public Service Commission to take into consideration the serious matter of the proposed reduction in width of the present vehicular roadway by the operation of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Subway trains. It was urged that additional roadway space be provided on some other part of the bridge to compensate for any reduction of the present roadway on the lower level.

The Bridge Department has now submitted a new plan to the board of Estimate for the reconstruction of the bridge, to adapt it for the operation of the rapid transit trains in accordance with the plans of the Dual Subway System and has asked that an appropriation of $3,024,000 be made in order that this work can be started as soon as possible. Much depends on early completion.

The plans as proposed, not only insure the early inauguration of rapid transit across the bridge, but will give a total width of 52 feet for vehicular traffic, which is greater than that of any other bridge across the East River. (The Brooklyn Bridge has two separate roadways, 16 feet 9 inches wide, including trolley tracks; Manhattan Bridge has one main roadway 35 feet clear width: Williamsburgh Bridge has two separate roadways approximately 20 feet wide.)

Tentative Plan.

The accompanying cross-sectional sketch prepared by the Bridge Department, shows clearly how, under this plan, the southerly half of the upper deck will be used for the operation of the Interboro Second avenue elevated trains, and the northerly half for roadway purposes. A similar division of traffic is made on the lower deck, or present roadway level, in which case the northerly half is used for subway trains and the southerly half for roadway purposes.

The present sidewalks on the bridge are bracketed outside the trusses on the upper deck, and the sidewalks on the Queens approach are treated in a similar manner. All trolley cars will be operated on the present tracks outside the trusses on the lower deck. The roadway on the lower deck will be for heavy and slow-moving vehicles in both directions, and the roadway on the upper deck will be for lighter and faster moving vehicles in both directions. These roadways will have a clear width of 26 feet each. The present roadway is 53 feet 2 inches, including the space occupied by trolley cars.

It is understood that the new plans have the approval of the engineers of both the Interboro and Brooklyn Rapid Transit companies, as well as the engineers of the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate.

Second Avenue L Connection.

To carry out this plan the Second avenue elevated tracks will connect with the two tracks on the southerly side of the upper deck of the bridge at the Manhattan anchor pier. The roadway to the upper deck commences at Second avenue on the northerly side of this approach and follows the grade of the present sidewalk (5.8 per cent.) from Second avenue to the anchor pier.

SECTION OF QUEENSBORO BRIDGE LOOKING EAST PROPOSED ARRANGEMENT.

In order to reach the street level in Long Island City from the upper roadway level of the bridge, the roadway on the upper deck will be deflected to the north from Van Alst avenue, clear of the present approach structure, and on a separate viaduct connect with the surface of the ground at Crescent street on a grade of 5.4 per cent.

The Broadway-59th street subways approach the bridge through 59th and 60th streets and pass through the present trolley station at Second avenue, thereby destroying it for trolley operation. The plan contemplates the construction of a trolley station under Third avenue between 59th and 60th streets which can be constructed without necessitating the purchase of any land. The trolley station can be constructed with four loops and with two platforms 26 feet wide, each with loading and unloading facilities so arranged that ingoing and outgoing passengers will not use the same stairways. Facilities afforded by these four loops are equal to the facilities in the present station which has five loops.

|---|---|
| Part 1. From Second avenue to the Manhattan anchor pier | $ 530,000 |
| Part 2. From the Manhattan anchor pier to the east line of Van Alst avenue | 1,308,000 |
| Part 3. From the east line of Van Alst avenue to the east line of Ely avenue, including the new viaduct to connect the roadway on the upper level with the surface on Crescent street. | 278,000 |
| Part 4. The Subway station for trolley cars under Third avenue between 59th and 60th streets | 908,000 |
| Total Cost | $3,024,000 |

These plans, which are the result of the efforts of Bridge Commissioner F. J. H. Kracke, Chief Engineer A. L. Bowman, and traffic Engineer C. M. Ingersoll, seem to be the most efficient solution of this problem, insuring as they do both the early operation of rapid transit trains, and a total roadway width equal to the present vehicle roadway, which is often narrowed by the operation of trolley cars during rush hours to less than 40 feet in width.

In a communication dated July 22, 1914, the Bridge Commissioner submitted the above plans to the Board of Estimate and urged their approval and that an issue of corporate stock be made to carry same into effect. The matter was referred to the Committee the Comptroller for a report at the meeting of the Board on September 21, 1914.

A statement of the progress of the work on various rapid transit contracts, which have been let to date in the Borough of Queens, is given in the monthly Bulletin published by the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens, showing how all of this work is nearing completion. The figures, which are from the official records of the Public Service Commission, show the amount of work finished on August 1, 1914: Steinway tunnel, 24 per cent.; extension of Steinway tunnel to Queensboro, Bridge plaza, 19 per cent.; Bridge plaza transfer station, 26 per cent.; Astoria extension, 100 per cent.; extension to Woodside and Corona, 67 per cent.; Liberty avenue extension, 25 per cent.; Myrtle avenue extension to Ridgewood, 100 per cent.

—The old Washington Irving homestead at the southwest corner of Irving place and 17th street is now occupied by the Authors' Club. It was organized about a year ago and met at 30 Broad street in the office of its legal advisor before a club house was selected. Among the members are Rupert Hughes, Arthur C. Train, Rex Beach.

DOLLARS AND SENSE IN BROKERS' OFFICES

A Mistake to Divide Commissions in Most Cases—Why Not a Fee for Listing Properties?—Educational Methods Necessary for Clients

By THOMAS SHALLCROSS, Jr.
President National Association of Real Estate Exchanges*

THE old saying, that if you will look after the cents the dollars will take care of themselves, comes forcibly before me in connection with the subject which has been assigned to me, and I want to, accordingly, consider the matter largely from the "sense" standpoint, and I do not mean the kind of cents that are separated from the dollars by only a decimal point.

Most uncommon of all common things, sense is so intermarried with the dollars end of the realty business that I believe even the Reno board could hardly divorce them.

I would say at the outset that a large part of the uphill fight, with the luring commission as the goal, is due to the fact that the average client has not been properly educated as an individual or as a class. Mr. Client does not place the proper value on the advice and judgment of the broker nor the proper amount of confidence in him. This, however, is not his fault. It is said that the mule, by nature, is as gentle an animal as the horse, but that generations of abuses and ill treatment have brought him to his present conditon of distrust and have left him with a vindictive spirit. The same general conditions have produced the present day "client," and here, in my judgment, comes in the greatest opportunity of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges:

Education Methods.

First—In educating the brokers of the country up to the realization of the fact that they are engaged in "no mean" profession and that its standing with other professions and lines of business is now and always will be just what they make it. And Second—Through the national association and local boards and its individual members, educate our friend, Mr. Client, up to the proper performance of his duty to his broker.

Much has been said and written in reference to the broker's duty to his client, and with that we are gradually becoming familiar. But I would bespeak wide publicity for a program outlining the course of treatment that the owner should accord to the person or persons whom he selects to represent him in his real estate transactions.

This program would first deal with the points he should consider in selecting the broker. Then, having made his selection, I would have a thorough understanding that each party was a human being and for the purposes, at least, of this particular transaction, was entitled to be treated as such.

How often have we had "Mr. Highly-Respected-Business-Man" withdraw his property unceremoniously in the spring, after Mr. Broker had carefully seen to keeping his pavements cleared all winter and pipes, etc., from freezing, and a little later find that it had been withdrawn in order to close a sale direct and save a commission. Yet, this man might be the fairest of dealers in his own line, but lacked education in ours.

The same party would probably decline an offer that his broker knew to be a most advantageous one, and later sell at a much lower figure: but, if sick, would choose a doctor and then take his prescription without question as to whether it contained poison or not. He had been educated to believe in the medicine, but not in the real estate profession.

A wonderful field, gentlemen, for missionary work. Let every delegate to this convention go home imbued with the idea that he will do his part in establishing his profession on a higher place in the minds of the public and he will do a great work towards instilling into the said public the sense that will make the "dollars."

Now, in regard to the kind of sense that the all-too-small proportion of the earth's inhabitants known as the "buyer" should have:

He is about to purchase a factory site, business location or possibly a home, and he may be, and probably is, well versed in not only value but customs of trade, etc., in his own line, and, if a merchant, would no doubt be justified in relying on his own judgment in contracting for large volumes of goods, etc. But what does he know, or what could he possibly be expected to know about existing values, etc., in a line of business entirely foreign to his training or field of action. Yet he has not been educated up to the idea of employing a broker to represent him in the matter and paying him for his services.

Two Brokers but Only One Commission.

This is clearly the duty of the brokers of the country. I know that in some sections the conditions are rather better in this respect than in others, but taking it as a whole comparatively few sales and purchases are made with a broker representing each end of the transaction and two commissions paid. Entirely too often do we find two brokers in the transaction, but only one commission. I know that this may seem like a rather strong statement, but I claim that in 90 per cent. of the cases where a broker's commission is divided, it is a mistake, for in 90 per cent. of the cases two services are performed by the two brokers and both should be paid for by the party to whom they were rendered.

This condition is not the fault of the buying and selling public, but rather the brokers. He has riveted his attention on obtaining a portion of the other broker's commission, rather than take the time to educate the buyer and show him the advantage of employing a competent person to represent him in a transaction, which, as I have already said, is at least sufficiently complicated to warrant such an employment.

This is only another phase of the business where the sense and the dollar proverb is most applicable. Now, having maligned both the buyer and seller for shortcomings as viewed from an unprejudiced (?) viewpoint of the broker, I will turn my attention to a rather unpopular side of the question, at least before this audience, and point out where in my judgment the kind of sense used by the broker cannot be hoped to be readily converted into dollars.

Hit or Miss Listings.

First, the "hit or miss" listings—The property that is not worth a careful examination as to general conditions, and particularly price, is not worth listng at all. I claim that the broker who has 50 properly priced properties under exclusive agency contracts, with all of which he is entirely familiar, has a better business asset than his competitor who has 500 properties at all sorts of fictitious prices and where he has no reasonable guarantee of reward for services rendered.

The lawyer obtains a retainer when he takes a case on account of compensation for the service about to be rendered. This would not only be an ideal but a just program for the broker to follow. It costs money to list a property and work on it. The lure of large lists, however, often offsets the common sense program of "absolute control," and both the owner and broker are alike disappointed in the net result.

A commission house would hardly receive a consignment of goods from a producer and after inspecting and pricing same start its salesmen out to work up the trade and take orders, unless it knew that the consignment was absolute.

You would not deal with a salesman in a jewelry store, for instance, who would allow another salesman to step in and sell a particular piece that you were considering, and yet, where we do not have exclusive contracts with our clients we are every day placing ourselves in exactly the same position with the buying public.

Gentlemen, there is "no sense" in it, and, therefore, how can we hope to find the dollars? Whenever I see more than one sign on a property I am reminded of the judgment of the wise men who meet around the village stores at night and conclude that their fellow townsman must be powerful sick, one of their number having two doctors' buggies in front of his house.

Rate of Commissions.

Second, rate of commissions—The subject of commissions is, of course, a vital one. Philadelphians were until the last two years paying only 1 per cent. to dispose of their realty, while middle westerners were, with equal grace, paying 2 to 3 per cent.—

It was hard indeed for me to believe that when our friend Albert Taylor closed up a sale for a Cleveland citizen he had earned twice as much as I had for performing a similar operation on an inhabitant of the Quaker City. In our town it looked as though all of the love was extended to the brother and none to the broker.

Last year I gathered statistics from real estate board cities of total population of 8,000,000 people which showed an average commission of 2.72 per cent., and still we had more apparent difficulty in bringing our brokers up to the 2 per cent. standard than we did the public.

A careful review of results will show that a comparatively small portion of t e gross commissions received by a brokerage office is profit.

Adhere to Standards.

It is, of course, as grave an error to overcharge a client as to undercharge him; but, gentlemen, where a number of real estate men have banded themselves together in a city and decided that a certain commission was proper under the conditions prevailing, you can very safely adhere to this standard, and the common sense view of the matter, it seems to me, will be that you will not lose much profitable business. No doubt some will cut rates, but if you are only making a reasonable profit at your rate, they will probably be doing business at an actual loss.

Third, ethics—in closing, I want to touch the question of "ethics," which has been defined as "the essence of 'human duty.'"

There is no feature of our business that should receive more careful attention, and we must all realize that if every broker in the land would strictly adhere to the code adopted by this association it would be a big factor in the campaign of education to whch I have referred and eventually bring the dollar and sense answer.

Educate first the broker and through him the buying and selling public, and Utopia will be ours.

The Postmaster will move his headquarters today to the new post office building on Eighth avenue at 34th street and symbolize by his presence there the U. S. Government's recognition of the primordial importance of the mid-town section of the city.

Ample American banking facilities have now been established with South American cities, and there is no lack of ships, but our bankers must now make loans before much commerce can be interchanged. Give them anything they want, but get the business.

The administration of the Labor Law and the proposed recodification of that law will be discussed at a hearing to be given by the State Factory Investigating Commission at City Hall next Wednesday morning. The celerity with which the commission is proceeding with its reformatory work encourages the public to believe fully in its sincerity.

Some twenty corporations of national prominence either discontinued their dividends or reduced them during the month of August, and since the first of the year about one hundred in all have done the same. The sum of seventy-five million dollars at least has so far been withheld from investors. Under such circumstances there is considerable satisfaction in being a real estate owner, even if one is pestered with inspectors.

Americans residing in France have been officially advised to leave that country because of the war dangers. Some are going to Spain, others to the British Isles, but most all of them will find their way back to this country. From this source there is likely to be a considerable demand for high-class New York apartments, many of which have been vacant of late, owing to the long-continued depression in financial circles.

The Distribution of Employment.

There is one aspect of the economic situation in and about New York City which demands much more attention than it is receiving both from public-spirited individuals and from public officials. It looks almost certain that there will be during the coming fall and winter an appalling amount of unemployment in this neighborhood and a great deal of suffering. Steps should be immediately taken to diminish this unemployment and to relieve this suffering.

As the Record and Guide pointed out last week, the hope of an early termination of the Great War will have to be abandoned. It will last throughout the winter and possibly throughout spring and summer of 1915. A long rather than a short war will enable the industry and commerce of the United States to build up our export trade at the expense of that of the belligerent powers, but it will also cause a profound dislocation of American domestic commerce. Above all, capital will be scarce and exceedingly difficult to borrow, and the work of converting funds into fixed capital will be cut down to a very low point. Some industries will be very much overstimulated. Others will be extremely depressed. The labor market will have to adjust itself to a cessation of immigration, but the cessation of immigration will be more than balanced by the stagnation which will prevail in many manufacturing industries. Enormously important readjustments will have to be made in a comparatively short time.

New York City will have to bear the chief burden of these changes. It is the city whose economic life is based upon commercial ties with foreign countries. The bulk of the foreign trade of the country passes in and out of the port of New York. Its merchants and its wage-earners will profit most largely from any change in the balance between domestic and foreign trade which increases the importance of the latter; but, on the other hand, they will also during the early months of the war suffer most severely from the dislocation which it has brought in its train. The total cessation of business on the Stock Exchange has thrown thousands of people out of employment, and this source of distress will continue for a long time. The entire stoppage of certain branches of the import trade will also cause the discharge of many clerks and freight handlers. The difficulties of borrowing money will tend to discourage building, although the comparative cheapness of building materials will tempt some investors to go ahead and take advantage of the low prices. The consuming power of the community will be affected, and a falling off will take place in retail trade.

There will, of course, be compensation for many of these losses. As soon as the difficulties in respect to foreign exchange are adjusted, New York will become a more important financial centre than ever, and its banking business will increase even if its brokerage business diminishes. The increase in export trade, whatever it amounts to, will have to be financed in New York and to a large extent shipped from New York. The diminution of the import trade will increase the demand for competing domestic products, but any shifting of business from this source will help rather than hurt New York City. Whatever the compensations there can be no doubt that during the next four or five months the war will cause more unemployment than employment.

Toward spring an improvement will be likely to take place, but it will be a hard winter during which deprivation will be prevalent and suffering acute. The distress of last winter will increase in amount and may become socially more dangerous in its manifestations and results. Agitators will take advantage of it to arouse discontent and, if possible, to provoke outbreaks, and during a period of unrest and latent popular fermentation, like the present, it is always possible that these outbreaks may become serious and themselves have a discouraging effect on business.

It is, consequently, a matter of the utmost importance that all organized and intelligent effort should be made to meet this situation and to reduce the unemployment and the distress to the lowest possible amount. And the organized effort that is needed does not lie in the direction merely of charitable relief. Of course, charitable relief will be necessary, and every one who can afford to contribute to organized charity should do so freely and abundantly. But more necessary than any work of alleviation is the work of prevention. A certain part of the unemployment and of the resulting physical distress and moral disintegration can undoubtedly be prevented. It can be prevented by a better organization of the agencies of employment. The trouble in the near future will be less one of an absolute dearth of employment than it will be of an enormous necessary shifting of wage-earners from one employment to another. Certain lines of business will be stagnant, while others will be over-stimulated. The important work to be performed is that of aiding the prosperous businesses to find the kind of labor they need, and of aiding the dismissed wage-earners to find the kind of work which they are capable of efficiently performing.

Work of this kind is not efficiently performed by private agencies. All over Europe, they have succeeded in diminishing the prevailing unemployment by the establishment of public labor exchanges which make a business of keeping employers supplied with labor and employees with jobs. No similar public agencies has been organized in this country, but a beginning was made last winter by the committee on unemployment, which was constituted in New York. The investigation made by the committee showed conclusively that private employment agencies were working very inefficiently, that no adequate means were being taken to enable the New York labor market to distribute its surplus outside of New York, that there was an utter lack of coordination among the different private agencies and that there was no sufficient public inspection of their work. Certain legislation, which looked in the direction of reorganizing the whole system was passed by the Legislature. This work of reorganization should be vigorously pushed during the coming fall. It is a matter of vital public importance, not merely that the distress should be reduced, but that no unnecessary opportunity should be given to stir up revolutionary discontent. There may not be enough work to go around during the coming winter, but it is certainly the duty of public-spirited citizens to take care that what work there is shall be distributed to the best advantage.

The New York Dock Problem and How to Meet It.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

In diagnosing a business situation, experts begin by eliminating what is unnecessary to be considered and get the problem down to a series of more or less co-related facts on which they make their diagnosis.

In the case of New York City's dock problem, I believe we can estimate with fair certainty that in 1930 the City of New York and its environs will have nearly 10,000,000 inhabitants. There will be a corresponding growth, on comparative lines, for the entire country. This means much more than a similar percentage of growth for our commerce, the economic law being that commerce quadruples as population doubles. As a necessary corollary thereto, the present 900-foot ships will probably grow to 1,200 or 1,300 feet in length, and what we consider abnormal today in ship size, and in dock length, and in improved facilities (as the Chelsea Piers), will seem quite ordinary in the eyes of the future.

Any considerable dock proposition must prepare for an expanded and expanding future, as the utmost present limit is the normal of tomorrow. Any plans for 900-foot piers must consider future extension, not into our waterway, which is our most valuable asset, and is wisely controlled by the Federal Government, but a future extension back into the land of Manhattan Island. We can spare the land, but not the waterway. That is our life.

The question of marginal railways is one involving a very heavy expense on the city, and therefore it is one which the city is not prepared to enter into at present, however beneficial the project may seem. The time when the marginal roads could be practically built by municipal funds seems years off. Meantime, the question is of today, and what to do—Now.

The east side of West street, as well as the west side of South street, are suitable in every way, both in price and in inferior improvements, for the development of a series of eight-story, concrete warehouses which could be connected to the docks by overhead telpherage lines using electrical conveyors whereby all freight could be lifted out of the ship and deposited in the top stories of such warehouses with practically one handling. From the top stories cargo could be distributed by a simple gravity system to the other floors. Such a system minimizes handling, which means expense; it facilitates the unloading of ships and possible damage to goods; it avoids delays in cartage, and examination later, and it should be both a considerable help and relief and economy to the merchants of the City of New York.

Possibly the first warehouse should be planned out on sound economic lines as a municipal enterprise, to indicate to the mercantile community how the plan would work. Furthermore, as our commerce develops, future improvement should be made by private capital under municipal supervision, and perhaps with municipal guarantees, with power to condemn property needed. The municipality should have a permanent interest and voice in this development, which is of profound importance to the future of the city; for in the competition of seaport facilities, which is growing in other cities as well, New York now needs not only the best but also the cheapest and the most rapid means of handling the mixed cargoes we receive.

All schemes predicated on this community advancing vast sums of money at once, or on gigantic municipal plans, are of no avail today, because impractical. The City of New York must economize for a long period for having spent $300,000,000 of municipal capital in facilitating the movement of its residents rather than having spent it to facilitate its commerce. Spilled milk need not be cried over, but we must depend for the development of our dock improvements on any large scale now and for some years to come very largely on private capital, which will be invested only when insured of adequate income on liberal terms. The municipality must bid for its money in the open market against the world, and the situation will require most liberal terms.

It will be noted that I have stated the warehouses should be eight stories, as it would be a ridiculous proposition to have the entire waterfront surrounded with a fence of twenty-story buildings. That would only serve to make New York a place to get away from, and not a place to come to and locate. Even in the building of warehouses today harmony must be observed in order to preserve the magnificent beauty of our original situation, and the wonderful facilities given us by nature combined with natural beauty, which we must conserve, as this is all that makes New York.

It is well that this subject comes up now, as it will shortly be pressing. The opening of the Panama Canal gives the City of New York very superior trade advantages with a third of the world, and we will shortly feel the impact—without any municipal capital to take care of the necessary improvements. The plans should be formulated, and on a scale wider than any dreamed of yet, for tomorrow it will be required, and private capital is our only resource. We need a prophetic engineer like Louis Risse, who laid out the Bronx in the '70's—a real big man. We need an executive with courage to do the inevitable in a fine, big, broad way, without reference to the inevitable, harsh criticism from those who cannot act and decry everlastingly all those who dare do things. If we could develop these two—maybe we have them. Who knows? What a wondrous blessing it would be to the City of New York—and how necessary?

How the City Can Meet the Present Financial Crisis.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

Comptroller Prendergast says, according to the newspapers, that the city will find it difficult to meet the monthly payrolls as a result of the financial crisis due to the war. There would be no financial crisis in the city's affairs if the proper safeguards had been provided by the Comptroller and by those who have been associated with him in the Board of Estimate during the past five years. My story, "The Looting of a Great City," published serially last year, warned them that the bankruptcy of the city was impending.

New York City has not had a sufficient margin of financial safety during the past five years. When Mr. Gaynor became Mayor on January 1, 1910, the balance to the city's credit was about $15,000,000. The debt margin was increased about $120,000,000 since that time, due to the addition of $1,200,000,000 to the taxable value of city property, real and personal; but each expansion of the public credit was promptly followed by as great an increase of the public debt through the registering of additional city contracts. The debt margin now is about $10,000,000, with many contracts suddenly cut off, and the city finds itself in a financial emoasse, because the bankers here are unable or unwilling to provide gold to take up the city's $80,000,000 debt abroad. This debt becomes due during the next three months. The city issued these $80,000,000 gold notes at six per cent. in anticipation of taxes, just as it has been issuing revenue bonds each year to raise money for administrative purposes before taxes were paid. This program has cost the people of New York an average of $4,000,000 a year interest.

The crisis in the city's finances is due to the false business policy of permitting the bankers to provide the money to administer the city's affairs, out of which process they made, as previously stated, about $4,000,000 a year interest. In addition to this profit, the bankers were permitted to use the city's money thus provided, because the funds were kept in the banks and only drawn against when needed. Thus the bankers made a double profit by financing the city. The bankers are unable or unwilling to take up the city's $80,000,000 gold notes which come due, and the city is powerless to do it. The notes must be paid or the city must confess itself insolvent.

Comptroller Prendergast and his associates know and have known that the city should never be without a margin of less than $25,000,000. Why then is the credit balance today only $10,000,000? How will the city meet the present emergency of "hard times," lack of employment, and worse conditions to come with an insufficient debt margin and no surplus available?

There is a way out of the present dilemma if the Comptroller and his associates will have the hardihood and the patriotism to embrace it. They can reduce every salary in excess of $5,000 to that sum and they can curtail every salary between $3,500 and $5,000 by a reduction of $500 each. The city's annual payroll is about $90,000,000 or about $7,500,000 monthly. This can be reduced one million dollars a month without the slightest hardship to those whose salaries will be affected. Those whose salaries exceed $5,000 are presumed to have saved part of their annual income, and their ordinary living expenses need not exceed that sum. Those whose salaries are between $3,500 and $5,000 will scarcely feel the reduction if made.

This suggestion is advanced, so that funds may be immediately available for those out of employment. Poverty is becoming more acute each day and the city may soon be obliged to provide food and shelter for the destitute. Public and private charities are overtaxed and the city may be compelled to build barracks to take care of the needy during the coming fall and winter. Why not prepare for the emergency now?

These suggestions are commended to those who pay the city's taxes and to whom the welfare of the people is a vital issue. The bankers may not be able or willing to help the city much longer, though their clients own most of the outstanding bonds, and the taxpayers must begin to safeguard the city's as well as their own affairs. Why not begin the reduction of the city's financial burdens rather than continue their increase until its financial insolvency is plain? Why not reduce the debts to the bankers and begin to restore the value of real estate in New York? When will the taxpayers begin to wake up?

Our Real Estaters Abroad.

Editor of the RECORD AND GUIDE:

You say that as some well known real estaters are about to return from Europe business activity is likely to follow. Permit me to say that one of the leading lights is now acting as chairman of the committee at London for the forwarding of American refugees to their homeland. It seems that he who has negotiated so many "blocks" should remain on the job as the expert needed to meet the exigency. I refer to Joseph P. Day. Respectfully and apologetically for humor on the sad occasion.

A READER.

May Be Curiously Affected.

"The financial situation during the period of uncertainty and change which must come because of the European war will affect real estate, but it may affect it in a curious and rather unexpected way," says Hon. Cyrus C. Miller. "That is, a great many people who will become fearful of the ordinary financial investment outside of real estate and conclude that after all real estate is a solid investment, and will put their money in it. This will have a tendency to strengthen the real estate market.

"There is a demand at present in Europe for a large sum of money owing by the city to foreign investors. This must be paid before the middle of January next. In ordinary times it would be easy enough to have the payment of such loans extended if it were not convenient to pay, but now the foreign investors need their money and will demand payment. This will be met largely by the taxes which will come in October and the balance again be refunded by a domestic loan, whose only effect on real estate might be a slight addition of interest. The foreign demand, therefore, should not be of any particular danger to New York real estate."

On the Job.

How long does it take you to recite the salient facts regarding a property to a prospective buyer?

If you consume over seven minutes by the clock in presentation, summing up and a getaway, you have wasted time—his time and your own.

Pin that on the wall. SEVEN MINUTES. And work to it. Have the boys learn it by heart and the busy men of this town who are the real buyers and renters will rise up and call you blessed and, what is more to the point, want to do business with you.—Real Estate Board's Bulletin.

NATIONAL TAX CONVENTION.

Some of the Arrangements—Prof. Seligman, of Columbia, Will Preside.

Final plans are announced for the eighth annual conference of the National Tax Association to be held at Denver, Sept. 8-11. A special train over the Burlington Road, leaving Chicago Sept. 7, will take the Eastern delegates.

The programme contains this year a number of important matters among which are the following: Taxation of Express Companies; discussion of license fees on foreign corporations; suggestions for uniformity among the States in the taxation of securities and movable tangible property. In addition three notable sessions will be held on subjects which are occupying public attention at the present time. One of these will be on the Federal Income Tax with papers by Professor Bullock of Harvard, Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue Luther F. Speer and A. C. Rearick, Esq., of New York City, chairman of the sub-committee of Railroad counsel. Professor E. R. A. Seligman of Columbia University, the leading authority on the subject, K. K. Kennan of Milwaukee and Ralph Norton of New York City, as well as many other students and professional men especially interested, will be present and participate in the discussion. Congressman Hull of Tennessee will send a letter.

Another important session will be devoted to Efficiency and Economy in governmental affairs, participated in by such well-known authorities as Dr. Wm. H. Allen of the Bureau of Municipal Research, John L. Coulter of the Federal Census Bureau and E. Dana Durand, former Director of the Census. The practical questions will centre about the facts as to increase in expenditures; the propriety of checking them and the means and methods of doing this.

A third session of interest will be devoted to the recent movements towards increase in land taxation involving a critical review of experiments along this line both in Canada and in the United States. Professor Clark of the University of Manitoba, F. J. Dixon of Winnipeg, F. C. Wade, K. C. of Vancouver, and G. J. Knapp of Colorado Springs will participate among others in this discussion.

Professor E. R. A. Seligman of Columbia University is president of the association and T. S. Adams, Tax Commissioner of Wisconsin, is secretary. The directors and members comprise practically all of the leading economists and tax officials of this country, representatives of the leading taxpayers, railroads, etc., and a large number of lawyers, bankers and leading citizens in this country, Canada and abroad.

Delegates have been appointed by practically all the states and by Canadian provinces. Governor Glynn has taken an especial interest in this conference, having appointed a large number of prominent persons throughout the state to attend as official delegates.

$1,200,000 Gold Bond Issue.

The Howard Estates Development Co. has recorded a general first mortgage to secure an issue of $1,200,000 of six per cent. gold bonds on its holdings at the Howard Estates, which consists of about 500 acres of Jamaica Bay front property, from the Aqueduct station of the Rockaway division of the Long Island Railroad to Jamaica Bay.

The property, which contains 7,760 city lots, 20 x 100, has been partially improved and subdivided into 2,700 building lots. About thirty-five all-year residences and semi-bungalows have been built and are occupied.

The Metropolitan Trust Company, of New York, is trustee under the mortgage. Proceeds of the bond issue are to be used to take up the existing liens and provide funds for extensive development work. A considerable amount of the issue has already been sold.

PRIVATE REALTY SALES.

Small deals figured conspicuously in the business this week, reflecting the confidence of small investors in various sections of the city, particularly along the lines of proposed transit improvements. Bronx building plots in the University Heights section figured in several transactions, which involve more apartment house construction in the rapidly growing section in the vicinity of New York University. While the total number of sales reported this week in the various boroughs is about the same as last week, an improvement may be noted over the corresponding week for 1913.

The total number of sales reported and not recorded in Manhattan this week was 14 as against 16 last week and 14 a year ago.

The number of sales south of 59th street was 2 as compared with 2 last week and 6 a year ago.

The sales north of 59th street aggregated 12 as compared with 14 last week and 8 a year ago.

The total number of conveyances in Manhattan was 120, as against 98 last week, 8 having stated considerations totaling $153,300. Mortgages recorded this week number 65, involving $1,018,774, as against 67 last week, aggregating $1,924,235.

From the Bronx 13 sales at private contract were recorded, as against 8 last week and 9 a year ago.

The amount involved in Manhattan and Bronx auction sales this week was $312,284, compared with $864,387 last week, making a total since January 1 of $24,466,674. The figures for the corresponding week last year were $743,576, and the total from January 1, 1913, to Sept. 6, 1913, was $38,878,335.

C. F. Noyes Buys Brooklyn Residence.

It was announced that the property formerly owned by John Dingee, at 185 to 187 Clinton avenue, a modern detached residence and garage on a plot 66 x200, extending through to Waverly avenue, has been purchased by Charles F. Noyes, head of the Charles F. Noyes Company. In this connection the following from the Brooklyn Times is of interest:

"Mr. Noyes stated that extensive improvements will be made in the property following plans drawn by Frederick Putnam Platt. John McKeefrey will have the general contract. A Manhattan bank sold the property to Mr. Noyes. The property cost the late Mr. Dingee about $100,000, and it is now assessed at $66,000 by the city, though valued in open market at about $70,000.

"The location is generally considered one of the best in Brooklyn, because the easterly and westerly sides of Clinton avenue are restricted against encroachments of apartment houses and business, with setback agreements of 45 feet. The property adjoins the residence of E. T. Bedford. Other owners in that block include Herbert Pratt, John Englis and Lowell M. Palmer.

"Mr. Noyes at present resides at 49 Washington avenue, which property he owns. It is believed that, after the Clinton avenue property is put in first-class order, Mr. Noyes will put it back on the market, although it is stated that he may occupy the new house on Clinton avenue and sell his present place."

New Bronx Operation.

The Beckman Realty & Construction Co., John H. Beckman, president, has purchased from Mrs. Elizabeth Doyle the old residence, on plot 50 x 100, at the northeast corner of Andrews avenue and 183d street, through McLernon Brothers. The new owner has had plans prepared by Architect Andrew J. Thomas for a five-story house to contain suites of five to eight rooms. There are now three apartment houses on the Andrews avenue block, between 183d street and Fordham road.

Heights Apartments in Trade.

Herman Reher and William Volk have signed contracts for the sale of the three five-story apartment houses, 1344-1354 St. Nicholas avenue, with stores, on plot 117x100. The houses are the inside ones in a group of five structures occupying the easterly block front of St. Nicholas avenue, between 177th and 178th streets. The sellers retain ownership of the two properties at the 177th and 178th street corners. The buyer is said to be a downtown lawyer who gave dwellings in part payment, at 454, 460 and 464 West 144th street.

West Side-Scarsdale Trade.

Seaman, Lowerre & Co. sold for George W. Meyer the five-story apartment house at 390 Central Park West, on lot 25 x 100, to Frederick Van Wyck, of Scarsdale, N. Y., who gave in part payment ten lots adjoining Greenacres. The transaction involves about $100,000.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM De H. WASHINGTON died Sunday morning of cerebro-spinal meningitis in the New York Hospital after an illness of three days. He was born at Clover Sea, Va., 50 years ago and was the son of Lewis W. Washington, a descendent of a brother of George Washington. He came to New York about 20 years ago and became engaged in construction work. He was president of the Armour Villa Park Co., the Eastern Warehouse and Realty Co., the New York and New Jersey Water Co., and was a director in numerous other corporations. Mr. Washington was unmarried.

AUCTION SALES OF WEEK.

Except where otherwise stated, the properties offered were in foreclosure. Adjournments of legal sales to next week are noted under Advertised Legal Sales.

* Indicates that the property described was bid in for the plaintiff's account.

The Auction Market.

An interesting development in the Vesey Street Exchange Salesroom, this week, concerned the seven-story apartment house, 2788 Broadway, on plot 25.7 x93.9x irregular. It was put up at auction as the result of an action brought by H. D. Clark and others to recover $11,000 from J. Winfield and others. The property carries a prior mortgage of $43,000 and was struck down to the plaintiff for $49,734. Negotiations had been started prior to the auction sale between the defendants in the action and an unnamed investor for the sale of the property. The deal will now be carried out by the plaintiff, according to current reports. Henry Brady was the auctioneer.

For the coming week, the more important offerings include the twelve-story loft building at 153-159 West 27th street, to be sold at the stand of the M. Morgenthau Co., subject to liens aggregating $353,043; the six-story apartment house at the northeast corner of Broadway and 123d street to be sold by Joseph P. Day; and the six-story apartment house at the northwest corner of Northern avenue and 181st street, to be offered by Bryan L. Kennelly. In the Bronx, Charles A. Berrian will sell a Jerome avenue vacant block front and adjoining properties.

In the "House That Jack Built"

there were no GAS PIPES—they were not needed! But in this greatest manufacturing and commercial community in the world both GAS PIPES and the inexhaustible supply of clean, trouble-saving and economical fuel that flows through them are a vital need to every efficient building, large or small.

Gas is a universal fuel! The variety of its uses is without limit! It is especially adapted to WORK in such a city as New York, where floor space is always at a premium and where scores of important industries are frequently tucked away on the floors of a single loft structure.

The New York building owner never knows when a prospective tenant will insist on having proper GAS facilities for his needs before he will sign a lease.

The wise builder puts in GAS PIPES when he builds! If he doesn't he may have to tear out walls and pull up floors to put them in afterwards.

Procrastination in installing GAS PIPES means waste! And it never pays to be wasteful!

Let one of our engineers talk with you. Just write to our GAS APPLIANCE DEPARTMENT, General Office, No. 130 East Fifteenth St., or 'Phone STUYVESANT 4901.

"The Right Way is the Gas Way"

MANAGERS MUST BE VERSATILE

Conducted by Raymond P. Roberts, Building Manager For The American Real Estate Co.

GOOD building managers are neither born nor made. They are products of fortune. They cannot be apprenticed to the profession, neither is there any standard curriculum that will graduate the student with a degree entitling him to assume a $5,000 a year office as manager of a modern skyscraper. Where then do they all come from?

The question was put to the manager of one of the prominent office buildings in the city and his answer was a shrug of the shoulders. In his own case his preparation for the office he holds was through the school of business backed up by what psychologists call a motor mind that grasped and absorbed everything it was concentrated upon, plus a college education. He had been through military discipline, knew and liked mechanics, had a little taste for law, was schooled in diplomacy in the real estate business, had been trained in the quick judgment of men through close contact with captains of industry, and finally was gifted with a personality that immediately won confidence from his associates in business.

In another case the manager was a trained mechanical engineer, a college graduate and the exponent of an ambition, formed early in life, to be a successful building manager. He has been trained in a technical and academical college for the position he now occupies. This schooling had been reinforced by a number of years of intimate experience in the management of many commercial buildings for a large real estate house. He played this experience with all the forcefulness of an ambition not yet achieved, but still coveted. He dabbled in the problem of scientific ventilation, in the theory and practice of sanitation, salesmanship, psychology, the theory of mastery and handling of men, economics, finance. law and even the technique of machinery.

How a Salesman Made Good.

A third manager who, lacking all the technical schooling of the other two, took hold of a building that three men having years of experience as building managers could not swing, and put it into the class of successful buildings after it had proved a white elephant for twenty years. This man never saw the inside of a college or university as a student, had none of the social advantages of family, did not even have an intimate acquaintance among big business men. But he was a splendid salesman. Failure was not in his lexicon. When he heard that the man who had bought supplies from him four years had been instructed by his doctor to move west for his health, the salesman made a bid for the place and got it. His intimate friends spoke of him as a mechanical genius. He took to machinery like fire to straw. Commercial law was something he had a natural liking for. He tried his science of salesmanship on persons who had no idea of moving their place of business, but who he thought ought to. Today he has a waiting list despite the erection of new buildings whose shadow falls upon the more ancient, but none the less honorable structure near by.

The successful building manager therefore is a jack of all trades, but master of none, because successful building management does not consist of perfection in any one subject, like the law or medicine or the arts. It is practically the only instance where a smattering of theoretical knowledge fits a man for a high salaried position of responsibility. The profession most allied to it is that of journalism, but the former is strictly commercial, while the latter is academic, and the rewards differ as a general rule accordingly.

The Manager's Versatility.

Charged with responsibility for making a building investment representing, in many cases, sums reaching into the millions, the manager's berth is not one for a fledgling. His wings of experience must be able to meet tests from many quarters. He has got to know whether he is getting all the efficiency out of his coal that he is being charged for. He must be equipped to tell good lubricating oil from bad. He must know how to rate applicants for space in his building, for a dishonest tenant will spoil the reputation of a whole building unless the manager is alive to the contamination and handles it decisively. He must know machinery efficiency, electrical technique, economical steam service, market value of supplies and his standing in law as a landlord's agent.

His tenants will be prompt in telling him whether there is any shortcoming in any of these departments if the service falls off, but his board of directors will be far more caustic in their queries if the trial balance does not show a healthy margin of profit at the end of a year. Consequently every manager has a little system of his own for keeping down the cost of maintenance and at the same time keeping tab on the kind of service being rendered the tenants.

Cost Accounting Systems.

One or two examples may be cited. The first is part of a system of comparative cost employed by one, a large downtown building.

Every department makes a report to the engineer who, after checking them off, turns them over to the manager. These are in printed form. Comparison is made between the current month and the one preceding and also with the corresponding month the year before. It covers the following items embracing production and distribution of power and steam and electrical data. Cost of coal burned, removal of ashes, supervision, labor, supplies, repairs and water supplies.

This is summarized and totalled. Then a computation is made for distribution, which includes plumbing, cost of elevators, cost of lighting, outside lights, motors, heating, refrigeration and other auxiliaries. This part is totalled and then a memorandum is made as a part of this distribution cost, but as a separate item, of the number of engineers employed, number of firemen, number of helpers, electricians and mechanics.

After this is summed up, the steam data is computed as follows: Number of elevator operators and mechanics, number of pounds of steam to generate current and number of pounds of steam for auxiliaries. This is totalled and then to this number of pounds of steam generated, is added the cost of steam generated and the cost of generating one pound of steam on B. T. U tests.

The Lump System.

Finally the electrical data is noted. This includes the total KW. produced at switchboard, cost of same produced at switchboard, to which is credited so much for steam heating and the whole sheet is closed with a statement of net cost of production, cost of producing one KW. hour at switchboard, number of employees and the kilowatt hour gross cost.

The so-called lump system operates on slightly different lines. It takes the individual department as a unit and charges against it the cost of operation on a square foot basis. The heating and lighting, for instance, is charged up against so many square feet of occupied space to be illuminated, the cleaning is figured in the same way and a percentage of occupancy, which may fluctuate from month to month, is then employed as an equalizer. The sum total of these computations gives a statement of the comparative cost of maintenance from month to month and year to year.

This system is not as accurate, however, as the individual report plan already described and is being discarded in favor of the former except in small buildings. The card index has also been employed in some buildings, but this requires a larger clerical force in the building manager's office.

In addition to this diversified knowledge the building manager has to know something about the painting, plumbing, steam, gas fitting and carpentry trades, at least insofar as to be able to know whether he is getting good work. He must know his costs down to the last cent for work and he must be able to judge just what a tenant is entitled to and when to stop.

The building manager is a creature of exclusive classification, whose chief salvation in his efforts to make good with "The Board" is to master details as a whole and yet have that rare gift that marks the real executive, of possessing an analytical mind for any one of the myriad molecules that form the fabric of a commercial building investment.

A Successful Experiment.

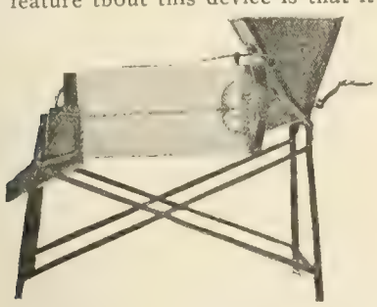
An association in Toledo has worked out and is successfully operating a plan that strikes us as being decidedly in the right direction. The purpose is to interest the small investor in big buildings. This concern, whose directors are experienced business men, finds a piece of improved downtown realty that looks like an attractive investment. The company then sells stock at par to an amount sufficient to pay for the property —or, rather, sufficient to pay for the equity above what a savings bank or insurance company will lend on the property on first mortgage. It doesn't sell stock first and then looks around for a place to invest the proceeds; but first finds what it deems a good investment and then sells stock to realize the purchase price.

At its last report, according to an account in the Saturday Evening Post, the company had about 600 stockholders, with a waiting list of persons who wish to subscribe as soon as another issue of stock is made. The stock is of the par value of a hundred dollars a share and subscriptions are taken in units of six shares each, but the amount of stock any one subscriber can take in a year is limited to forty-eight shares. The intention is to make the company a popular institution.

Having purchased a property the company proceeds to put it in first-class condition and develop its earning power as far as possible. This takes time and usually requires some investment in addition to the purchase price—for repairs, remodeling and so on. The company looks to the long haul rather than to immediate profits.



The investors, of course, hold only the equities, for the properties are mortgaged as soon as bought. But they get all the profits.

USEFUL APPLIANCES

Novelties, New Applications of Familiar Devices and the Trend of Invention, Designed to Aid the Architect, Builder and Building Manager, Described Without Regard to Advertising Consideration

Portable Sand Sifter.

FOR particular concrete work where the slightest foreign substance in the batch will seriously mar the setting it is desirable to have clean sand. To accomplish this there is being put on the market by the Hall-Holmes Manufacturing Company of Jackson, Mich., the sand sifter shown. It is said to be strongly and rigidly built to stand up under hard service. But the distinguishing feature tbout this device is that it is equipped with an automatic tapping device that keeps the screen clean when sifting wet material. This device can be thrown out of gear entirely when the material is dry.

An advantage claimed for this sifter is that it is only necessary to handle the material once. It has the additional virtue in saving the strength of the workman so that he does not tire so quickly and thus lag in his work as he does when he used the old hoop sieves. The whole machine weighs about 100 pounds.

A Riveting Back Hammer.

STEEL riveting always is attended by more or less danger and especially is this true with reference to the riveting set in the pneumatic hammers. These sets sometimes fly out and to prevent this the Ingersoll-Rand Company, 11

Broadway, according to the Engineering News, has perfected a riveting set retainer to go with its Little David riveting hammers. This device is an arrangement of a spiral spring which fits over the riveting end of the hammer and so secures the set that it cannot work loose even when the hammer is operated free with 90 pounds of steam.

Adjustable Window Shade.

FREQUENTLY in offices as well as in apartments the window awning will not entirely protect the occupants of the room from the glaring sun. Realizing the need of a simple interior window shade that will shut out the sun no matter what its position, the Fusion Adjustable Shade Company, of Spiceland, Indiana, decided to put one on the market and its product is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The advantage o this shade is that i is adjustable, translu cent and admits a soi diffused light jus where it is most wanted. The mechan ism is on roller bear ings and the materia is of cotton duck, sc that perfect ventila tion is possible. They are inexpensive and their efficiency, the manufacturers say, is greater than the average shade.

New Principle in Faucets.

IF ever there was an insistent demand on the part of the building manager and building owner for a device that would cut down incidental repair charges it is for a faucet that does not have to be rewashered every few weeks. Such a faucet is being introduced by the H. W. Johns-Manville Co., of 31st street and Madison avenue.

This device, according to the manufacturers, accomplishes its purposes by the simple process of fitting a conical valve or jumper upon a spherical seat. The fitting is absolutely perfect and the greater the wear the more positive is its action in preventing leaks. It is made to operate just as well on high as on low pressures.

A Fountain Mop.

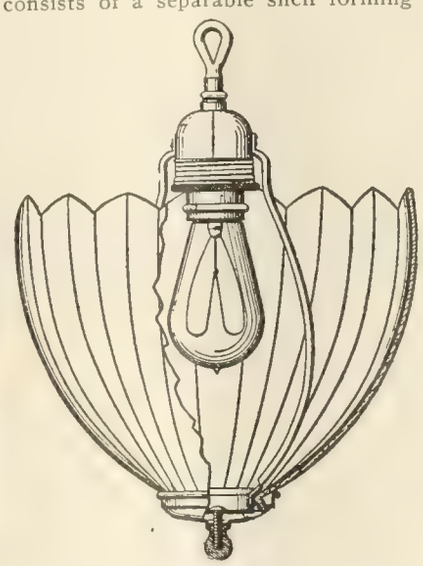
THERE are fountain pens, fountain paint brushes, and automatically fed polishers of one sort or another. The latest is a fountain mop for use primarily in garages and carriage sheds, but nevertheless, having an important field of service in buildings where great areas have to be washed daily.



The three parts of the device are shown in the cut. The nozzle may be attached to a long hose and corridor floors may be wet and scrubbed by one man while another follows him up with a squeegee. The device is being marketed by the Cataract Auto-Vehicle Washer Company, of Topeka, Kan. The washer is made of brass and the handles are nickeled. The mop portion is wound with copper wire and no part of the washer can rust. It can be used for washing the outside of windows.

Indirect Lighting Shadeholder.

PATENTS have recently been issued by the U. S. Patent Office to L. W. Anderson, assignor to Plume & Atwood Manufacturing Company, Waterbury, Conn., covering rights to a type of holder shown, that makes possible indirect lighting for all sorts of incandescent electric light globes. The idea consists of a separable shell forming a socket holder with arms extended to hold any light inverted shade.

The value of such a holder as this to managers of business and residential buildings lies in the fact that for a nominal cost the entire lighting arrangement of a suite or hall or foyer may be changed to suit special occasions or tastes of occupants. Or by the use of these holders, it is possible to provide the indirect lighting system for an entire building that may be quickly changed to direct lighting should it be necessary.

Repainting Ironwork.

WHEN iron or steel work is to be repainted several important factors should be carefully observed. In the first place all scale, rust and dirt should be removed and then a first coat, heavy with oil, should be applied. If any rust or dirt is allowed to remain it will be sure to make its presence known soon after the paint has been applied. If the work is in fairly good shape, the defective spots should be cleaned, then pointed up with a heavy white lead paint and then the new surface applied. In some cases just a coating of raw linseed oil will answer the purpose of a new coat of paint, as it often happens that it is only the oil that has left the paint. This plan often works well in refurbishing wood. When painting over old painted metal work the paint should contain some turpentine, as this fluid penetrates well, getting the paint down into any pores of the metal that might not perhaps have previously absorbed it.

Ball-Bearing Floor Hinge.

ONE of the great difficulties that has lain in the way of the perfection of ball-bearing floor hinges is that dust sooner or later works into the ball sockets and, mixing with oil, soon make a gum there which robs the ball-bearing of its great virtue. So when the Shelby Spring Hinge Company, of Shelby, Ohio, announced recently that it had perfected a dustproof ball-bearing double acting floor hinge, there was evinced considerable curiosity in the building trades as to just how this contingency was avoided.

The illustration shows the hinge as it sets into the floor and also the covering sheaf that keeps the dust out. The arrangement of the bearings is such that no dust can fall upon them from above and the only other available avenue of approach is from the side where the sheaf, screwed into position, keeps even the smallest particles out. The balls themselves ride on the ridge of a convex track so that the minutest point of contact is allowed, thus shutting off any possibility of dust and oil forming a gum to hamper the free movement of the door on its hinges.

Burglar Proof Cellar Window.

FOUNDATION windows that are said to be proof against burglars are being put on the market by the Majestic Co., of Huntington, Ind. The window consists of a sectional cast iron frame, a wrought iron guard and galvanized iron sash so designed as to allow the glass to be put through a slotted opening in the top of the sash. This opening is of sufficient size to admit of a half inch plate or common window glass. The latter may be set with putty, thus making it air tight. The cross bars constituting the window guard, pass through the frame and are securely fastened by cotter pins which are on the inside of the frame. There are no bolts or rivets exposed, thus making it impossible for the window guard to be removed from the frame.

The outside of the frame has a hollow space which allows the mason to fill it in with concrete between the foundation in such a way as to cause the frame to become practically integral with the foundation itself.

CURRENT BUILDING OPERATIONS

Three Reasons Why Frame Construction Should Not Be Prohibited Altogether Within the Limits of Greater New York.

DURING the discussion of the extension of the fire limits to lines now fixed by the ordinance recently signed by Mayor Mitchel, the question was raised as to why there should be any fire limits; or, in other words, why should not frame construction be prohibited altogether within the limits of the City of New York? Three reasons why the fire limits should not be co-extensive with the city limits were given by the editor of the Building Code, Mr. Rudolph P. Miller, when speaking of the suburban fire limits, this week:

"First, there are still large sections of the city for which a street system or tentative city plan has not yet been adopted. Even in Manhattan there is a district (Inwood Hill) for which such a plan has not yet been prepared. It would be manifestly unfair to require an owner in such a section to erect a permanent structure if he should find it necessary or desirable to improve his property in order to utilize it.

"Again, many sections of the city, such as the Flatbush and Bay Ridge sections in Brooklyn, the University Heights section in the Bronx, Richmond Hill, Bayside, Hollis and many others in Queens, have developed as residential districts in which frame construction, because of its lower cost and greater adaptability to one-family dwellings, has been almost universally used. Some of these sections have developed more than others, but there is hardly one in which there are not still many vacant lots being held for the same sort of development.

Would Be Unwarranted.

"To place such sections in the fire limits and require the buildings thereafter to be of brick would not only be an unwarranted restriction on the owners by preventing them, without sufficient reason, from doing what their neighbors have done, but it would tend to discourage the erection of private dwellings on such vacant lots, and it would also tend to start the encroachment of business into such districts. It is highly desirable that the residential character of such sections be maintained as long as possible.

"In the third place, there are parts of the city where property values, because of inadequate transit facilities or of probable assessments on account of future public improvements, are such that the greater cost of permanent buildings is not justified. The restriction of the fire limits would probably kill development in such sections.

"On the other hand, the very reasons for leaving out of the fire limits the residential, or, as they might well be called, the "suburban" sections, seem to justify some restrictions with a view toward maintaining their residential character.

Suburban Limits.

"It has been suggested, and the suggestion is receiving consideration with a view of securing municipal legislation, that beyond the fire limits as now fixed outer zones or "suburban limits" be established within which no frame construction be permitted except for one or two-family houses which do not cover more than 80 per cent. of the width of the lot.

"This idea is not entirely new, as it has already been applied (by amendments in 1900 to the old Building Code) to the Flatbush and Bay Ridge sections of Brooklyn, and still applies to those localities. What is now proposed is to extend this principle and take in all sections that are developing as residential districts in the several boroughs.

"Just what areas these suburban limits should include is not yet decided. It would seem, however, that they might properly include all sections in which street systems have been regulated and graded or sufficiently so that building has been started, even if only on a small scale.

"One effect of such limitation would be to stop the erection of rows of frame buildings, a very desirable result from all standpoints. The erection of business buildings among dwellings would be more or less discouraged. These buildings would thereafter all be of brick, which would materially decrease the fire hazard of all surrounding buildings, seriously affecting their cost. Of course, provision should be made for placing private garages or stables on plots with dwellings.

AN IMPRESSIVE LIBRARY BUILDING

THE LIBRARY AT NEW CANAAN, CONN. Alfred H. Taylor, Architect.

ONE is impressed by the important and characteristic edifice illustrated herein. In the case of a library building many difficulties arise, due to the necessities of the plan, and it will be noticed that the architect in designing this building has solved the problem of providing the practical necessities of a library. The reading rooms are very light and spacious. The building is of a type of early Colonial design, which seemed to be the style best suited to the needs of a New England town, New Canaan being a town.

A feature which has been favorably commented upon is the use of selected fieldstone for the body of the building, and brick for the trim, with wide white joints. The rich reds and browns of the brickwork harmonize very well with the different colors of the stonework. Another impressive feature of the exterior of this building is that the surface within the arch over the palladian window, and the four panels on the front of the building are of stucco. The roof is of copper, and the general architectural effect of the building is in good proportion and effective.

The stack room is two stories in height and is built for the enlargement of the stacks, so as to double the present book capacity. An important feature of the building is the Historical Room, the ceiling being segmental with an ornamental cornice course, and at one end of the room is a well-studied palladian window. This room is used by the Historical Society of New Canaan for exhibiting antique furniture, ironwork, prints and other artistic relics of early Colonial days. The general finish of the Historical Room is white woodwork with San Domingo mahogany doors. At either end of the Historical Room in the lunettes are mural paintings by Charles E. Hubbell, a mural decorator of New York. The remainder of the building is finished in sienna brown chestnut woodwork for trim and oak furniture to match.

The floor construction of this building is of hollow tile and reinforced concrete. The building is heated through a hot air furnace and the used air is taken out by separate ducts in the floor. A special study has been made of the ventilation, which has been successful during the period of occupation, as fresh air is constantly supplied to all the rooms without the necessity of using power to force the air currents. Alfred H. Taylor, 138 West 65th street, Manhattan, is the architect.

SUBWAY WORK.

Contracts Amount to $150,000,000 and Give Employment to 15,000 Men.

According to the report of Robert Ridgway, Acting Chief Engineer of the Public Service Commission, for the month ended August 15, 1914, satisfactory progress is being made generally on all rapid transit contracts. Construction work is proceeding actively in the Boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens and The Bronx under contracts awarded by the City of New York to 22 different contracting firms who are employing a daily average of 13,000 men.

The total contract price of all city contracts awarded to date is $135,910,269.01, and in addition to this the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the New York Municipal Railway Corporation have contracts under way to the extent of about $15,000,000, under contractors employing about 2,400 men.

While the chief engineer says nothing as to the date of the beginning of operation on any of the lines, it is apparent from his report that the Fourth avenue Subway in Brooklyn and the Steinway Tunnel from Manhattan to Long Island City will be the first parts of the Dual System to be placed in operation. The outlook is that operation of both these lines will begin shortly after the first of the coming year.

At about the same time it is also expected that the two additional tracks in the Centre street Loop Subway not now operated will be ready for use and that the connection of that Subway with the Brooklyn and Manhattan Bridges will be completed. It is now connected only with the Williamsburg Bridge, over which Brooklyn elevated trains have been running into and through the loop subway for the last year.

Information Regarding Government Operations.

Many requests are received by Supervising Architect O. Wenderoth, of Washington, D. C., for the immediate preparation of plans, etc., for particular Federal buildings, which have been authorized by existing legislation, irrespective of the date of such authorization. The following statement of the present status of public building work is issued for the information of all concerned:

"It is the present policy to place under contract for construction all buildings, authorized in any one 'Omnibus' act before beginning plans for projects authorized by a subsequent act.

"To determine the precise order in which the plans for the various buildings shall receive attention the following procedure is followed: The buildings authorized in any one act are first divided into groups according to the priority of the acts in which their sites were authorized. All buildings in each such act-group are further arranged in the order of the dates of the acquisition of their sites, the earliest date first. For instance, the 1913 act authorizes buildings upon sites which had been authorized in the act of 1908, in the act of 1910, and in the act of 1913. It is intended that the buildings so authorized in 1913 to be erected upon sites authorized in 1908 shall first be placed under contract. These will be followed by buildings authorized in 1913 to be constructed upon sites authorized in 1910. Then the buildings authorized in 1913 to be built upon sites also authorized in 1913 will take their respective turns for attention.

"Extensions are usually authorized to be erected upon land already owned by the United States. While extension projects are included with the buildings authorized in a particular act, discretion is exercised in determining the order in which extensions shall be placed under contract for construction, depending upon the urgency of the need for the improvement.

"The output of plans by the Supervising Architect's Office is governed by the extent of the technical force (designers, draftsmen, computers, superintendents, etc.) which the appropriations given by Congress permit the Department to employ.

"At this date the Office of the Supervising Architect has on its books, waiting to be placed under contract, approximately $38,500,000 worth of authorizations for new buildings and extensions, exclusive of the value of the land. This includes the new buildings and extensions in the act of 1913. This office is placing buildings and extensions under contract at the rate of about seven million dollars annually, so that at the present rate of progress the last of the buildings authorized in the act of 1913 will not have been placed under contract until about the beginning of the calendar year 1920. It will not be until after the latter date that it will be possible for the Supervising Architect to place under contract any buildings contained in any act, or acts, which may be passed in the meantime. The current program, made up of the remaining projects which were authorized prior to the 1913 act, includes about one year's work from this date. Work upon the plans for buildings authorized in the act of 1913 will therefore not commence until about July 1, 1915. The 1913 act contains the following authorizations: New buildings, 304; extensions to existing buildings, 23; total projects, 327."

NEW DESIGN FOR TWO-FAMILY HOUSES

Russell G. Swartwout, Architect.
RESIDENCE AT WHITE PLAINS.

Russel G. Swartwout, architect, Realty Building, White Plains, N. Y., has recently evolved a distinctly new type of design for a two-family house. The house is shown in the accompanying illustration, and is being erected at White Plains, at a cost not exceeding $7,000, and should prove a success from the viewpoint of design and utility.

The house is designed in the style of the Italian villa type, of frame construction, with an exterior of stucco on wire lath, and a stained shingle roof. The interior is divided for two families by a brick party wall which acts as a fire stop as well as providing a barrier for the prevention of sound.

The two families occupying this residence are provided with separate entrances and porches. On the first floor are the large living-rooms with entrances direct from the porches, each having an open fire and grouped casement windows, dining-rooms and kitchens. On the second floor are three bedrooms, well proportioned, and bathroom for each family.

The house is to be heated by separate hot-water heating plants for each family, and lighted by electricity.

Apartment Contract Awarded.

A general contract was awarded recently to Charles A. Cowen & Co., 1123 Broadway, for the construction of a twelve-story apartment house at 1066-1067 Fifth avenue. The building is to be erected for the 1067 Fifth Avenue Company, Inc., Bainbridge P. Clark, president, owners, from plans and specifications prepared by C. P. H. Gilbert, architect, 1123 Broadway. This building will be of brick and Indiana limestone and will cover a plot 50x102 feet. In construction it will be strictly fireproof and include all of the latest appliances and conveniences for apartment dwellers. The estimated cost is about $260,000.

Apartment Plans Completed.

George Fred Pelham, architect, 30 East 42d street, has completed plans for the construction of an apartment house at the southeast corner of Riverside Drive and 149th street. The building will be strictly fireproof, of brick and limestone. It will be eleven stories in height and cover a plot 100x150 feet. The owner is the West Side Construction Co., 322 West 100th street, Jacob Axelrod, president. The project will represent an expenditure of over $250,000.

Contemplated Apartment Hotel.

The 137 East 72d Street Corporation, care of Van Wyck Thorne, 150 Broadway, has recently purchased the property at the northeast corner of Lexington avenue and 72d street upon which they intend to build a modern fire-proof apartment hotel. The building will probably be twelve stories in height and will occupy a plot 102x155 feet. The owners have not retained an architect as yet, and full details of the operation have not been decided upon.

Contract Awarded for Studio.

The North Eastern Construction Co., 225 Fifth avenue, has received the general contract for the alteration to the stable at 126 East 75th street into a studio building. The plans were prepared by Satterlee & Boyd and William Emerson, associated architects, for the Beaux Arts Association.

NO ARCHITECTS SELECTED.

In this department are published advance information regarding building projects where architects have not as yet been selected.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y. The Board of Education of New Rochelle, H. DeWitt Dobbs, president, contemplates the erection of a brick addition to the Mayflower av school, to cost about $24,000. An appropriation has not been granted by the Common Council. No architect selected.

JERSEY CITY.—The Board of Commissioners of Jersey City, Michael I. Fagen, clerk, City Hall, contemplates the erection of a brick garage, stable and storage here. No architect selected.

DEPOSIT, N. Y.—The R. C. Church, Rev. Father A. J. Commerford, pastor, contemplates the erection of a brick church here. No architect selected.

BELLEVILLE, N. J.—The Board of Education of the town of Belleville, John W. Depue, 127 Halsey st, is receiving competitive sketches to close September 8 for a brick school at Washington av and Holmes st, to cost about $175,000. No architect selected.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—St. Mary's R. C. Church, Rev. John J. O'Brien, pastor and in charge, 269 Church st, contemplates the erection of a brick parochial school in South Hamilton st. No architect selected.

PLANS FIGURING.

CHURCHES.

BRIDGEHAMPTON, L. I.—F. Burrall Hoffman, Jr., 15 East 40th st, Manhattan, architect, is taking bids for a church to close September 11 for the Church of the Sacret Heart of Jesus and Mary, Rev. Father Francis J. O'Hara, pastor. Cost, about $25,000.

DWELLINGS.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J.—Albert C. Buehler, Newark Trust Co., 790 Broad st, Newark, owner, is taking bids on general contract for a 2½-sty frame and stucco residence, 27x59 ft., at the corner of Dyer pl and Cameron rd, from plans by D. A. Hopper Co., Union Building, Newark. Cost, about $10,000.

HALLS AND CLUBS.

MANHATTAN.—Delano & Aldrich, 4 East 39th st, architects, are taking bids to close September 8 for a 6-sty brick and stone clubhouse at the northwest corner of 62d st and Park av for the Colony Club, Madison av and 30th st. Henry C. Meyer, Jr., 101 Park av, consulting engineer. Cost, about $450,000.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y.—Plans are being figured for the 2-sty brick, stone and terra cotta postoffice building, 84x64 ft, with wing 16x60 ft, at the northwest corner of Sussex and Hammond sts, for the U. S. Government, Treasury Department, Washington. Oscar Wenderoth, Washington, D. C., architect. Cost, about $65,000.

MANHATTAN.—The City of New York, Marcus M. Marks, president, is taking bids to close September 11 at 2 P. M., for the construction of a mezzanine floor and appurtenances, installation of plumbing in connection with same and the construction of roofing and flashings at the Washington Market building, at Washington, Vesey, Fulton and West sts, from plans by Chas. G. Higgins, 30 Church st.

TEXAS.—William H. Fissell & Co., 1133 Broadway, Manhattan, are figuring the contract for the post office building at Uvalde, Texas, bids to be in October 1; also for post office building at Amarille, Texas, bids to be in September 20.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The Libman Contracting Co., 126 West 46th st, is figuring the general contract for P. S. 5 and desires bids on all subs prior to September 14.

MANHATTAN.—McDermott & Hanigan, Inc., 103 Park av, are figuring the following jobs and desire bids from sub-contractors. St. Thomas the Apostle's School at 117th st and St. Nicholas av, F. A. DeMeuron, architect; 2-sty post office building at Port Jervis, N. Y., O. C. Wenderoth, architect.

STABLES AND GARAGES.

NEWARK, N. J.—The Common Council of the city of Newark, Mayor Jacob Haussling, City Hall, Newark, is taking bids to close September 10 at 3.30 p. m. for the city stables, shops and sheds on Elizabeth av, from plans by Hughes & Backoff, Essex Building, 31 Clinton st. Cost, about $160,000.

OBITUARY

JOHN CONNOLLY, retired general contractor, died of general debility at his home, 566 Willoughby avenue, Brooklyn, Wednesday, August 26. He was born in Ireland sixty-three years ago and had been a resident of Brooklyn for forty-five years. Mr. Connolly was best known in the Williamsburgh section of Brooklyn, where he built many fine residences. He is survived by a son.

JOHN FALLON, a well-known Brooklyn contractor, and builder of the Municipal Building, which is soon to be torn down, the water tower at Prospect Park, and nearly fifty public school buildings, died at his home, 287 Halsey st, after a short illness, Wednesday, September 2. He was seventy-six years of age and had been retired from business about four years. Mr. Fallon was born in Ireland on November 17, 1838, and was brought to this country when a boy of ten years. He was a Civil War veteran, and until his retirement was one of the best known builders in Greenpoint.

JOHN McELVERY, a retired general contractor, died of general debility at his home 342 Lenox road, Brooklyn, Tuesday, August 25. He was born in the north of Ireland seventy-nine years ago and came to America when eleven years of age. In 1879 he formed a partnership with Robert Getty, to conduct a general building business under the name of McElvery & Getty. While the firm has not been active for the last ten years the partnership was never terminated, ending only with his death. Mr. McElvery was a prominent Mason, and was the first president of the Flatlands Volunteer Firemen's Association. For three years he was the president of the Carpenters' and Joiners' Union. He is survived by his widow and four sons.

WILLIAM DE HERTBURN WASHINGTON, consulting engineer, 39 West 32d st, New York City, died at the New York Hospital, from cerebro-spinal meningitis, Sunday, August 30, after an illness of three days. He was born in Baltimore, Md., June 29, 1868, and traced his descent to John A. Washington, a brother of George Washington, of Mount Vernon, Va. He was for a time in the consular service in Canada. About twenty years ago he came to New York City and for several years was president of the Hydraulic Construction Co. Later he was in the real estate business. Of recent years he has been quite widely known as a consulting engineer on highways, and served as a member of the board of engineers which a short time ago investigated New York State highway work.
